EASTON GAZETTE.

EASTON, Md.

Saturday Evening, July 4.

We are much indebted to our hazel-eyed correspondent for his diagramatical response to a former diagramatical enquiry, made, not so much to obtain different people's notions of causes, as to ring the charge of complaint that all the profession have such grounds to make. Were all subscribers like good old Grand-Papa and worthy Israel Frisby, the state of the Press would be much more flourishing and independent.

We are informed that a person named Selby Jump, who resides in Caroline County, near Hillsborough, shot his brother Peter on Thursday last. Selby was in Hillsborough on that day with his gun, & stated to several persons there, that he intended to shoot his brother, —he accordingly proceeded to his brother's house, a few miles from Hillsborough, and calling him out, immediately shot him—We have not heard any further particulars of this bloody affair, or whether the murderer has been apprehended.

A Jury of Inquest was held, yesterday in the upper part of this county, by Philemon Horney, Esq. over the body of Mr. Nathan Kerns—Verdict of the Jury, death from two stabs received by a knife from a negro man, named Jim Barnet, the property of John Council, Esq. The negro we understand has absconded.

The Hon. Martin Van Buren has been nominated in Alabama, for the office of President of the United States, to succeed General Jackson.

The National Intelligencer says—We owe it to the character of a traduced fellow citizen to give to the Public the following extract of a Letter from the Hon. And. Stevenson, late Speaker of the House of Representatives, to George Watterson, Esq. late (removed) Librarian to Congress, which has lately fallen into our hands.

"I take pleasure in bearing testimony in your favor, for the last eight years.—I can say with great propriety that I have found you vigilant, obliging, and certainly very capable. I should regret to loose so good an officer, and one who has conducted himself in a manner to please us all."

Coming out!—The Kentucky Commentator, published at Frankfort, says—"Col. John Speed Smith, we are informed, declines accepting the office of United States Attorney for this district. The reason was not mentioned; but it is said, that Mr. Smith has lately declared himself in favor of Mr. Clay for the next president and does not find himself in the condition in which the present administration expects to see every man whom it appoints to office and the administration as tried by its acts, is we imagine, such as he does not feel disposed to take office under."

SCREW DOCK.—The Baltimore American contains an account of the first experiment by the Baltimore Screw Dock Company, of raising a large vessel.—The brig Catherine, 260 tons, was raised last Saturday, with 100 tons of ballast and water in her hold, in about one hour —remaining high and dry, perfectly secure from any strain, and resting on her keel. The dock just finished is 135 feet long, 32 feet 4 inches wide, and contains 36 wrought iron screws, each of which is 19½ feet long and 4 inches in diameter.

GOOD HUMOR.—An Ohio Postmaster, who is also the Editor of a Paper, has been removed from office, and notices the circumstance in the following good-humored manner, which we like much better than the grumbling of many who have shared a similar fate.

"Mrs. Catharine Ann Canfield has been appointed Postmaster at New Philadelphia, in place of James Patrick, removed.

We thank the Postmaster General for putting us off so handsomely. While many of our brethern of the letter bags have been hurled out of office, and compelled to surrender their papers, maps, and mail keys, to surly looking fellows of opposite politics, we politely step aside to make way for a lady. Here there were no sour looks between the officer turned out, and, the officer put in. While in other places, the newly appointed Postmaster has entered the office of his predecessor, insultingly exclaiming, 'Give me up your keys and letters instantly—it is our time to rule now'—and has been indignantly replied to in such words as 'there they are, and be d——d to you!'—our case has been entirely different. A pretty young widow enters the office with a polite courtesy; 'Sir, I am appointed Postmaster, and will accept it.' 'I rejoice to hear it, madam, and am ready to deliver you the papers.'—'Does that finely colored map belong to the office, Sir?' 'Yes, madam, it belongs to the office.' 'I am glad of that, Sir—I will put it in my hall.' 'It will look much better there, madam, than in my cabin.' 'You can let me have the map and papers at any time?'—'Certainly madam, with any instructions you may require.' A nod without a smile seemed to say, your services are not wanted; I have a deputy! But the treaty of surrender, on the whole, was more agreeable than a similar one in a neighbouring town. In fine, we think this mode of removal must have been adopted as a mark of regard, for the respect we had shown, during the late election, to female character. Our forbearance on that subject has had its due weight at the Federal city."

Mr. Maury.—We have this morning seen a private letter from the venerable and estimable Maury, long the American Cousul at Liverpool. He writes in excellent spirits, and his health is such, that notwithstanding his advanced age, he fails not to take his daily plunge into the Mersey, at sunrise every morning. In regard to the late political contest in this country he speaks as follows:—

"The calm which succeeded the strong irritation and petty animosity during the late canvas, has been as I expected, and evinces that good sense in our countrymen which I have so often witnessed after a violent storm." The letter dated May 23d.

How little did this excellent old public servant suppose at the time of writing this letter that he was to fall a sacrifice to the cruel policy of the terrorists who raised the storm of which he speaks, and that when his epistle should reach New-York, it would meet a political favourite on his way to Liverpool with a supercedeas for the writer in one pocket, and a new commission for himself in the other.

Swearing at Elections.—At the late Court of General Sessions, held at Rochester, in the state of New York, a man named Allen, was convicted of perjury in swearing he was entitled to a vote at a charter election. The Rochester Republican says:

"He has been a resident of the village 8 or 9years—but was absent for 12 or 14 months; and returned about six months before election. The perjury was alleged to consist chiefly in swearing that he had been a resident of the state for three years, and of the county for one year next preceding the election. His counsel contended that his temporary absence did not destroy his residence here legally speaking—that it was always his intention, as expressed in letters to his confidential friends, to return to Rochester as soon as circumstances permitted—although, for a particular reason, he intimated to others, on going away, that he would not come back. He was advised by several lawyers at the polls, that his temporary absence would not destroy his right to vote, provided his intention, when he left, was to return. But the Judge, (Childs,) in his charge to the Jury, took a more limited view of the doctrine of residence—& the Jury found Allen guilty. By the doctrine which the Judge laid down, as we understood it, a man on leaving the place, no matter how strong his intention might be to return, would forfeit his residence at once, if the period of his return depended on any contingency whatever. Thus a citizen leaving here to travel for the recovery of his health, without any definite period for his return but depending on that contingency—would at once destroy his legal residence no matter how strong his intentions might be to return.

The case of Allen involves a point of law of some interest. It merits and doubtless will receive the consideration of the proper authorities. Allen was sentenced to the state prison for three years."

From the National Journal.

Mr. Walsh's opinions of General Jackson's qualities of head and of heart have recently undergone a change, as may be gathered from the tone of his most recent editorial remarks. This change is attribute by most persons to a recent visit made by Mr. Walsh to this City, concerning which we had but a faint glimmering of light, until we met with a communication in the latest Democratic Press, which discloses clearly the purport and the issue of that visit. We have extracted the following paragraphs from that communication:—

A few days ago Mr. Walsh returned from the city of Washington, where he had an interview with Mr. President Jackson and Mr. Van Buren, the Secretary of State the result, on Mr. Walsh's authority, is believed to be, that the President, after some conversation with Mr. Walsh, gave him a note to Mr. Van Buren, indicating his wish that Mr. Walsh's brother, now in diplomatic station in Spain, should be allowed to remain; which indication had its proper influence, and Mr. Walsh's brother is not to be recalled.

In the same way it is understood that assurances have been given by the President and Secretary, that at the present time there is no intention to remove Mr. Brent, the brother-in-law of Mr. Robert Walsh, but that if it shall be thought proper to place a more confidential person in his station, he shall have an equivalent—that was Mr. Walsh's word.

I mention these matters not for the purpose of showing any corruption on the part of Mr. Walsh, or any Bargain and Sale on the part of President Jackson, but simply the understanding, the settled understanding, between the contracting parties.

The Southern Galaxy, in reply to a correspondent who asked, why he does not publish the list of persons turned out of office by the President, says, it will save a great deal of trouble to wait, and by and by, mention those who are NOT turned out!

ANOTHER GOLD MINE.—We are informed, says the Raleigh (N. C.) Register, that a Gold Mine has been recently discovered in Davidson Co. containing a VEIN of the precious metal, 80 feet in width. This is the largest vein ever heard of either in this or any other country.—They generally vary in width from two to five feet.

If this VEIN should be RICH and LONG in proportion to its WIDTH, it will yield precious metal enough to serve all the useful purposes of life for all the men, women, and children, in the United States

Mr. Editor:

The extract below I have had copied from the Baltimore Gazette, with a desire that you will give it a place in your columns. It contains a respectable testimony in favor of that highly distinguished personage Archbishop Cheverus, and of the Church, within whose pale he worships, and as this testimony comes from a source far removed from all suspicion of partiality for the Catholic Church, I wish some of your readers to see it, as it may perhaps help to dissipate some of their prejudices against a church, which, to be respected only requires to be known, and to be revered it is only necessary that her influence be felt.

Respectfully yours,

CANDIDUS.

Extract from Dr. Channing's review of the life of Fenelon, in the Christian Examiner, published at Boston.

"We have said that we welcome the book under consideration, because it came from so pure and gifted a mind. We add that we do not welcome it the less for coming from a catholic, perhaps we prize it the more; for we wish that protestantism may grow wiser & more tolerant, and we know not a better teacher of these lessons, than the character of Fenelon.—Such a man, is enough, to place within the pale of our charity, the whole body to which he belonged. His virtue is broad enough, to shield his whole Church from that unmeasured, undistinguished reprobation with which Protestant zeal has too often assailed it. Whoever remembers, that the catholic communion numbers in its ranks, more than one hundred millions of souls probably more than all other christian churches together, must shudder at the sentence of proscription, which has sometimes been passed on this immense portion of human beings. It is time, that greater justice were done to this ancient and widespread community. The Catholic Church has produced some of the greatest and best men that ever lived, and this is proof enough of its possessing all the means of salvation—who, that hears the tone of contempt, in which it is sometimes named, would suspect that Charlemagne, Alfred, Dante, Raphael, Michael, Angelo, Tasso, Bousset, Pascal, Des Chartes were Catholics some of the greatest names in arts and arms on the throne and in the pulpit were worn by catholics. To come down to our own times has not the metropolis of New England, witnessed a sublime example of christian virtue in a Catholic Bishop? who among our religious teachers, would solicit a comparison between himself and the devoted Cheverus? This good man whose virtues and talents have now raised him to high dignities in church and state, who now wears in his own country the joint honors of a Arch Bishop and a Peer, lived in the midst of us devoting his days and nights, and his whole heart, to the service of a poor and uneducated congregation.

We saw him declining in a great degree, the society of the cultivated and refined, that he might be the friend of the ignorant and friendless; leaving the circles of polished life which he would have graced for the meanest hovels, bearing, with a father's sympathy the burdens & sorrows of his spiritual family; charging himself alike with their temporal and spiritual concerns; & never discovering by the faintest indication that he felt his fine mind degraded by his seemingly humble office. This good man, bent on his errands of mercy, was seen in our streets under the most burning sun of summer and the fiercest storms of winter, as if armed against the elements by the power of charity He has left us, but not to be forgotten. He enjoys among us, what to such a man must be dearer than fame. His name is cherished where the great of this world are unknown. It is pronounced with blessings, with grateful tears, with sighs for his return, in many an abode of sorrow and want; and how can we shut our hearts against this proof of the power of the Catholic Religion to form good and great men?"

[For the Easton Gazette.]

Mr. Graham:

My little pupil was much interested with the diagramatical mode (as he termed it) in which some of your brethren, of the mystic art, had arranged the interrogation "How does the Printer live" so as to be read two thousand times without going over the same track twice. He mused over it for an hour or more, and then observed to me; "this gentleman asks a question—I suppose he wishes it to be answered"—No, I replied, he does not expect an answer to it, since as nobody pays the printer, his mode or means of living is a mystery which, he knows, nobody but himself can explain; he seemed rather disappointed by this reply; and his little hazels were for a minute or two nearly hid beneath the close knitting of his young brow. He then broke silence by saying, "he ought to be answered, and if you will give me leave I shall do it in his own stile. His question is nothing more nor less than an indirect way of saying that no body pays for his newspaper, which I know is not true—don't you pay Mr. Graham for the Gazette? Yes said I surely. "Yes" he resumed, "and so do other people, pay for their papers too, but I think they are guilty of much folly in doing so since all the credit they get for it is to be accused of letting the printer starve. If Grand Papa and old Israel Frisby were alive now, how they would fume to see such a thing in the papers; they were so much in favour of the printers, that each of them subscribed for a paper from every City in the Union, and always paid in advance, and this merely to patronize the fraternity—as they called the Editors."—The little fellow's eyes sparkled with unusual lustre as he pronounced the names of his Grandfather and old Frisby. As I perceived that he had at heart, the defence of what he conceived to be the injured memory of the two old worthies: and as, I would always prefer to throw a fagot on the rising blaze of youthful genius, than to cast water upon it, I could not prohibit him from sending you the following answer to the question "How does the printer live?" which he says may also he read 2000 ways, by beginning always at B.

Respectfully A FRIEND.
