POETRY.

The following beautiful lines, for a copy of which we are indebted to a correspondent, business, and promptly discharging their bills. were written by a graduate of West Point who Having a young and growing family to provide died of consumption'several years since:-

From the New York American. THE WORST. Oh I have lived thro' keenest care, And still may live thro' more, We know not what the heart can bear, Until the worst be o'er-The worst is not when fears assail, Before the shaft has sped, Nor when we kiss the visage, pale, And beautiful, tho' dead. Oh then the heart is nerved to cope With danger and distress, The very impulse left by hope Will make despair seem less-Then all is life-acute, intense The thoughts in tumult tost, So reels the mind with wildered sense It knows not what is lost-But when that shuddering scene is past,

When earth receives her own And wrench'd from what is loved, at last The heart is left alone, When all is gone-but hopes and fears,

All buried in one tomb.

And we have dried the source of tears,' There comes a settled gloom, Then comes the worst the undying thought That broods within the breast, Because the lovliest one is not.

And what are all the rest? W. H. V.-1816.

From the Alabama Spirit of the Age. A HUNDRED YEARS HENCE. A hundred years hence!

What a change will be made In polities, morals, Religion and trade! In statesmen who wrangle Or ride on the fence-How things will be alter'd A hundred years hence!

The heads of the ladies Such changes must find-We do not speak now Of mutations of mind--From three bushel bonnets To snug little hats The scoops, Navarinoes-The Gipseys and flats.

With furs and with ribands. With feathers and flowers-Some fashion'd by artists, Some luck'd from t e bowers. But heads will be changed too In science and sense Before we have number'd A hundred years hence.

Our laws will be then Uncompulsory rules-Our prisons be changed Into national schools. The pleasures of vice Are a silly pretence And people will know it A hundred years hence.

All vice will be seen, When the people awake, To rise out of folly-'Tis all a Mistake! The lawyers and doctors And ministers too, Will have -- I am thinking But little to do.

Their careful attention They then may bestow On raising potatoes Or turnips you know, On any employment They choose to commence, For arts will be many.

A hundred years hence. And you and I reader-

Where shall we be found? Can any one tell, When that time will come round? In transports of pleasure

Or sorrows intense? We'll know more about it

A hundred years hence. PHILIP PHANTOM.

Richmond, Va. January 9th 1826. I am giad that you have got safe home with - ly wish he could have remained in Virginia one season that I might have put my mares to him; John Richards got injured so early, and when so young, that the public has not had an opportunity of forming an opinion of his excellence as a recer. I have had a fair and full way of judging of him; having trained him with many others, in order to make a selection to run the great and celebrated match with Eclipse, and I hesitate not to say, that he was decidedly my choice, and that had he remained sound he would most unquestionably have run the match; ss from a trial made at New-market, a day or two before my departure for Long Island, he certainly was the best in my stable, this fact, together with his appearance, size and blood makes him, in my opinion, a valuable stallion; wishing, you success with him, I am respectfully your most obedient.
