MISCELLANY.

The following beautiful lines are from Eliz
Cook's Journal :—

"LOVED AT HOME."

I never had a ten-pound note, I care not who m know,
Nor golden brooch, nor silver chain, nor aught that'
worn for show :
I've earned each meal I've had for years by hones
daily toil,
Yet few have had a merrier heart or worn a gladde smile.
For I have had a blessed home, beneath whos
humble roof
A mother's nightly prayers for me were breathe
without reproof;
And where my sisters' clustering love grew roun
my friendly stem,
And looked into mine eyes with hope as I looke
joy to them.
Ye who have given my lips delight, and ye whos friendly press
Has ever held my hand in yours to welcome and t bless;
Oh, ye have ever heard me say, "Whatever may come,
There's no such joy on earth for man, as being 'loved at home.'"
If pride could see my scanty room, some twelve feet six by ten,
And take down all the chattels there, 't would scarcely soil a pen;
But there are years of mother's love—in letters week
by week
A wealth that hearts can better weigh than tongues can aptly speak.
And judging hence from what I've felt, whene'er I see a face
Smile-lighted on the path of life, I'm certain I can trace
The root whence the sweet influence can only true-ly come,
The inward joy that fills the soul when we are
"loved at home."

Phenomena of the Brain.—One of the most inconceivable things in the nature of the brain is, that the organ of sensation should itself be insensible. To cut the brain gives no pain, yet in the brain alone resides the power of feeling pain in any other part of the body. If the nerve which leads from it to the injured part be divided, it becomes instantly unconscious of suffering. It is only by communication with the brain that any kind of sensation is produced, yet the organ itself is insensible. But there is a circumstance more wonderful still. The brain itself may be removed, may be cut away down to the corpus calasum, without destroying life. The animal lives and performs all its functions which are necessary for simple vitality, but no longer has a mind; it cannot think or feed; it requires that the food should be pushed down into its stomach; once there, it is digested, the animal will even thrive and grow fat. We infer therefore that the part of the brain, the convolutions, is simply intended for the exercise of the intellectual faculties, whether of the low degree called instinct, or exalted kind bestowed on man, the gift of reason.

Wonders of Nature.—There is a tree called the Manchanoel, in the West Indies; its appearance is very attractive, and the wood of it peculiarly beautiful; it bears a kind of apple, resembling the golden pippin. This fruit looks very tempting and smells very fragrant, but to eat it is instant death, and its sap or juice so poisonous that if a few drops of it fall on the skin, it raises blisters and occasions great pain. The Indians dip their arrows in its juice to poison their enemies when they wound them. Providence has so appointed it, that one of those is never found, but near it grows a white wood, or figtree, the juice of either of which, if aplied in time, is a remedy for the disease produced by the Manchanoel.

How to Preserve Health.—Medicine will never remedy bad habits. It is utterly futile to think of living in gluttony, intemperance and every excess, and keeping the body in health by medicine. Indulgence of the appetite, indiscriminate dosing and drugging, have ruined the health and destroyed the lives of more persons than famine or pestilence. If you will take advice you will become regular in your habits, eat, and drink only wholesome things, sleep on a mattress, and retire and rise very regularly. Make a free use of water to purify the skin, and when sick take counsel of the best physician you know, and follow nature.

A Glorious Change.—Conversion in the most glorious work of God. The creation of the sun is a very glorious work—when God first rolled him flaming along the sky, scattering out golden blessings on every shore. The change in spring is very wonderful—when God makes the faded grass revive, the dead trees put out green leaves, and the flowers appear on the earth. But far more glorious and wonderful is the conversion of the soul! It is the creation of a sun that is to shine for eternity; is the spring of the soul that shall know no winter—the planting of a tree that shall bloom with eternal beauty in the paradise of God!—M'Cheyne.

Money.—A philosopher has truly said, "Though a man without money is poor, a man with nothing but money is still poorer."

Sec. 8. And be it enacted, That the constitution reported and adopted by the convention assembled as aforesaid, shall on the first Wednesday of June, eighteen hundred and fifty one, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the State, for their adoption or rejection, and the voters shall on their ballots, plainly designated, express their assent or dissent to the adoption of the constitution, submitted to them by the following words, written or printed on their ballots, to wit: "For the new Constitution" or "Against the new Constitution," which said ballots shall be counted by the judges of election, and the number of ballots given for or against the adoption of the said constitution submitted to the people by the convention, shall be returned to the governor of the State of Maryland, by the clerk aforesaid, within thirty days after the time of holding the election, and in case there shall be any ballots without the designation herein before prescribed, the same shall not be counted either for or against the adoption of the constitution, but a separate return of the same shall be made by the judges of election as aforesaid.

Sec. 9. And be it enacted, That in case the refusal or neglect of the judges of the election in any of the counties of this State, or the city of Baltimore or Howard District, such judge or judges so refusing or neglecting, shall be liable to the penalty and forfeiture of the sum of five hundred dollars, to be recovered by presentment by the grand jury of the county, city or district in which said judge or judges reside, and on a conviction of such judge or judges for neglecting or refusing to make the return of the number of votes given for or against the adoption of the said constitution as aforesaid, he or she shall in the discretion of the court before whom his or their conviction may be had, be subject also to imprisonment in the county jail for the space of thirty days.

Sec. 12. And be it enacted, That this bill shall be published once a week for six successive weeks previous to the first Wednesday of May next, in each newspaper published in the State of Maryland.
