whom he can make explanations, etc. galloping through the country, from pillar to post, in pursuit of some superior to whom he can report himself. Finding no one at the seat of Government, or elsewhere, to whom he can report or address himself, and being debarred from returning to his command and resuming the prosecution of the war, he has, we understand, gone, like a good citizen, to report himself to his wife.

Electors of the Senate.

TALBOT COUNTY—GEN. SOLOMON DICKINSON and GEORGE DUDLEY, Esq.

We invite the attention of our readers to the portion of Mr. Storer's speech, published in our paper of to day. From us, it needs no comment, nor would its publication be necessary, but for the shameless course of the opposition, in attempting to rob this distinguished statesman and soldier of his just fame—The indisputable testimony, the speech contains, in behalf of Gen. Harrison, is sufficient to satisfy every high minded opponent of the utter falsity of the malignant charges brought against his character.

WHIG MEETING.

A committee, selected out of the several districts of Caroline county from among those favorable to the elevation of WM. H. HARRISON and JOHN TYLER to the Presidency and Vice Presidency, met in Denton, on Tuesday, the 2d of August - on motion, William Potter, Esq. was called to the chair, and George W. Harrington appointed Secretary.

It was then unanimously agreed, that Jacob Charles, and William A. Ford, Esquires, be recommended to the voters of the county, as Electors of Senate, and on further consultation the following gentlemen were nominated as candidates for the General Assembly.

John Jump, (of E.)
James Carter,
John Nichols,
Cannon Charles.

AS SHERIFF.
Joseph P. W. Richardson.

The following resolutions were then presented and adopted.

Resolved, That we use every honest endeavor to support the nominations just made.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the Chairman and Secretary and published in the Caroline Advocate and Easton Gazette.

(Signed) WM. POTTER, Chairman.
George W. Harrington, Secretary.

CREEK WAR.

From the following extract of a despatch from Gen Jesup, our readers will see that the Creek war has ended.

"The war is entirely at an end, and so far as regards Indian hostilities, the inhabitants might return to their farms in perfect security; but their houses have been burnt, their means of subsistence destroyed, and their crops on the ground will yield them nothing. It will probably be many months before the majority of them return; for all necessary supplies must be brought from a distance, and at an expense beyond the means of any but the wealthy."

It is confidently affirmed in the last Texas accounts received at New Orleans, that Gen. Santa Anna had sent despatches to the President of the United States under cover to Gen. Gaines, requesting the interference of this government to act as mediator between Texas and Mexico. He promises that the Mexican government will acknowledge the Independence of Texas, as that country is forever lost to them. These despatches had been received at New Orleans, and forwarded to Washington.

LATER FROM TEXAS.

We have New Orleans dates to July 26th. The arrival of the Steamers Choctaw and Caspian from Natchitoches, bring information that Gen. Gaines has crossed the Sabine, and taken up his quarters at Nacogdoches, where he was daily expecting to be reinforced by six companies of Infantry, and three companies of Dragoons.

Three hundred well equipped volunteers were expected in a few days at Natchitoches from Natchez. There was also landed previously 150 volunteers from different sections of the upper country, and it is confidently affirmed by several gentlemen from the Texan frontier, that the army of Texas, (from their observation during the last three or four weeks) by the arrival of large bodies of volunteers on the frontiers, will be equal in numbers if not superior to that of Mexico.

Intelligence by the Steamer Lamplighter, from Galveston Island, states that the Texan army, under Gen. Rusk were encamped at Coxe's point, 2 500 strong, and the Mexicans, to the number of 10,000, were making rapid strides toward them, being within a day's march when our informant left.

Md. Repub.

The New Orleans Advertiser of the 18th, has the following items:

The Texian cabinet is continually engaged in business; there seems to be no spare time. Colonel Somerville has just taken his place in the national councils, [illegible] from his manners, qualities and republican manners pleases every one.—He is a tried soldier, and public opinion will not let any one enjoy office without merit. The whole Brazos population are delighted at the idea of meeting the enemy. The general indignation is so strong against Santa Anna that his guard, under captain Patton, had to watch continually to keep him from assassination. Almonte was shot at by a soldier a few days since, and narrowly escaped, the ball passing two or three inches above his head. The gentleman who fired at him had lost one of his dearest friends and relatives.

The individual who fired at Almonte intended the shot for Santa Anna. The prisoners are treated humanely—furnished with every thing comfortable, and have the liberty of walking about.—They are confined at a place one mile distant from Columbia. Santa Anna says he is not afraid of the Texans, but he does not like to be visited by people from the United States He wishes to be taken to St. Augustine near the Sabine.

The crops on the Brasos are fine, and it is thought that more corn will be raised there this season than has ever been in any preceding one; elsewhere, throughout Texas, there is no prospect of raising enough to furnish the citizens with meat and bread.

From the same source, it is ascertained that the Mexicans are rising, almost en masse, and forming into military bodies for the purpose of proceding to Texas. An unparalleled excitement prevailed throughout the country on the subject of the war.

The Richmond Enquirer thinks it is "the scheme of the Whigs, to elect any man, "or even the Devil himself sooner than Mr. Van Buren.—We can assure the Enquirer, in stereotype phrase, that we have every reason to believe that it is entirely mistaken! Though many good Whigs do believe that in electing Mr. Van Buren to succeed Gen. Jackson the country would be "swapping the Devil for a WITCH" yet there is no serious intention of considering the Old Boy as a candidate. In the event of his being run, however, we at once given notice, that we shall come out for Mr. Van Buren—but not until then.—Alexandria Gazette.

It is stated in the Richmond Enquirer that after all the legacies of Mr. Madison shall have been paid, there will be a surplus estimated at $100 000 for his widow. Among the legacies is one to Princeton College, where he was educated.

The Executive of Maryland, convened on Tuesday last agreeably to notice. Governor Veazey, and all the members of the Council attended. We regret to state that owing to ill health Mr. Henry, has resigned his seat at the board. The vacancy has been supplied by the election of Wm. L. Jones, Esq ' of Somerset county.

After transacting a variety of business and making a number of appointments, some of which are inserted. The board adjourned until September next

Md. Repub.

From the National Gazette.

Messrs. Forsyth and Woodbury are the only heads of departments now at Washington Time was when a 'travelling cabinet' was a terrible affair. The 'flying' is the title of the present incumbents. Telegraph is preparing work for them on their return; the editor says that after the Florida treaty Major Eaton suggested to him that the treaties opened the finest field for speculation that had ever been before presented in this country, accompanied by a suggestion that the editor was wasting his time and health in his vocation, saying 'it will be a great deal better for you to take in a partner who will pull the laboring oar, while you are at liberty to make your fortune elsewhere.' The editor continues:

'When the treaties themselves came to be printed, we waited upon Governor Poindexter and Governor Moore, and pointed out to both of them, and to other Senators, the provisions which had been introduced for purposes of speculation. We foretold the frauds and gross corruptions which were contemplated by those who made them, and urged opposition to the treaties upon that ground. Gov. Poindexter and Gov. Moore yielded to what they conceived to be the necessity of the case'

By the passage of the distribution bill the speculators in the secret of the land business found their profits likely to diminish more than one half, and something was to be done to prevent the downfall of their hopes To this end the gold treasury order comes forth, which enables the gamblers in land to sell their sections for bank notes, and thus gets them out of the scrape with less loss. It is no wonder then that the Globe favors the treasury order, and deprecates the distribution bill, as the one is to counteract the injury done by the other to the pockets of its friends, and of Mr. Kendall, who but recently was deeply in debt and now is declared to have over fifty thousand dollars invested in one land job. Truly we have fallen upon times when the motto of our functionaries seems to be, 'make hay for yourself, the public will like you the better for it.'

From the Taunton Whig.

A VISIT TO MR. WEBSTER'S COUNTRY SEAT.

The country seat of Mr. Webster, is situated in Marshfield, about thirty miles, in a southerly direction from Boston, and lying on what is generally denominated the North Shore. The modest mansion of the Senator stands upon a broken and beautifully diversified plain. A short distance to the west, this plain abruptly rises into a swell which is shortly lost in [illegible] dimensions finally towers into a lofty summit, adorned and varigated by lawns and forest trees. Scarce a mile to the east, spreads the broad expanse of the ocean; and here, on the great highway of nations, are constantly passing and repassing ships and vessels, fitted up and decorated in every style of naval architecture, and freighted with all the commodities of the world. One cannot remain here an hour; without being struck with wonder at the number of these 'floating habitations'—suggesting at once to the mind of the lover of his country, her exhaustless resources—her indefatigable enterprize and her boudless commercial prospects.

As we walked up the gravelled avenue, conducting from the road to the house, we encountered a workman busily engaged in arranging some plants which skirted the walk, and on exchanging the usual salutation found him to be an Irishman. We questioned him and were a little surprised at his, intelligent but somewhat peculiarly national style of answering our interrogatories. Said Pat,—'This is a good farm, and it takes many o'men to manage it, it does. And they are arl wael paid. I have wraught for Mr Weabster these full three long years, and och, sir, he's a gintleman he is—I have wrought for many o' men who were not gentlemen at arl but on one side, but this man be really a nice man indaed, sir, he is.' Having had enough of his 'blarney' we passed on. But to me, however, this casual interview was a source of much personal satisfaction. I had long admired the ability of Mr. Webster; I had often been enraptured by the enchantments of his eloquence and the flashes of his intellect; I had united in that grand chorus of merited commendation which has vibrated through the whole land; yet the testimonial of this humble individual of this menial servant could not but give a reality and depth to my conviction—not of his greatness—but of the purity of his virtue; the integrity of the honesty; and the uniform trustiness of his character. And it may be observed, that such an emotion would be excited by a similar cause, in the breast of every individual; for it springs from a principle which forms an element in the composition of the nature of man. To estimate any man correctly, we should know him in his own house. Hence the celebrated and profound Dr. Johnson has beautifully remarked, that 'the most authentic witnesses of any man's character, are those who knew him in his own family, and saw him without any restraint or rule of conduct, but such as he voluntarily prescribes to himself. If a man carries virtue with him into his private apartments, and takes no advantage of unlimited power or probable secrecy, we may without hesitation, determine that his heart is pure.' 'The highest panegyric, therefore, that private virtue can receive, is the praise of servants.'

Having arrived at the house, we were received with much civility, and conducted over its apartments by the superintendant of the establishment; Mr. Webster and family at the time of our visit, being absent in the discharge of his official duties. The furniture, though not indicative of extravagance or lavish expenditure, was yet such as bespoke a propriety of adaptation, and a refinement of taste The walls of one of the rooms were decorated with paintings of a rural character, some of which were interesting illustrations of the scenes of the case in the different stages of its progress; while the shelves of his Library were filled with volumes of such a description, as more fully revealed to us the him which we had already incidentally received, that Mr. Webster came not here for clients, nor for the study of politics, but that his object was, to enjoy the quietude of retirement; the amusements of the chase; the relaxation of country life; and the healthful exercises and invigorating influences of agricultural pursuits—The mansion which he has selected for his residence, is a neat and commodious edifice, of two stories, with an attic, surrounded by a broad and beautiful piazza, supported by Doric columns. The whole reminded me of Cicero's description of a house, which a distinguished and respected character should choose for his residence—'It is neither small, mean or sordid; nor on the other hand, enlarged with profane and wanton extravagance.'

I was informed that Mr. Webster occupied and cultivates, what were once two very large farms, on one of which he has now growing upwards of ten thousand white mulberry trees. He keeps a stock of from sixty to seventy head of cattle, with the usual quota of horses, hogs, poultry, &c. and employs from twenty to thirty hands.

On returning from the house, we visited the observatory which he has erected on the summit, of which we have before spoken. From this, to a vast extent, you have a good view of the ocean, and the surrounding country; with a glass, even Cape Cod and Cape Ann are sometimes visible. And here the words of Mr. Wirt, in describing Mr. Jefferson and his residence are so apropos, I shall not hesitate to transcribe them:

'From this summit the patriot can look down, with uninterrupted vision, upon the wide expanse of the world around, for which he considers himself born; and upwards to the open and vaulted heavens which he seemed to approach, as if to keep him continually in mind of his high responsibility.

'It is indeed a prospect in which you see and feel, at once, that nothing mean or little could live. It is a scene fit to nourish those great and high-souled principles which form the elements of his character; and is a most noble and appropriate post for such a sentiuel over the rights and liberties of man.'

Many anecdotes, the scenes of which are laid on this farm, were related to us, illustrating the genius democracy of his character. They fully, prove, what I always believed, that Mr. Webster has a heart which beats in unison and sympathy with all classes of the community—with the whole people. As he was one day at work upon his farm, in the common costume of a farmer, an elderly gentleman came up, who wished to cross a brook or rivulet in the neighborhood, and which though shallow, there were no means to pass, except by wading. The man seeing Mr. Webster, with whom he was unacquainted, and from his robust appearance, supposing him to be quite able to perform the task, requested him to take him upon his back and carry him across the stream. Mr. Webster promptly complied, and toted the man over the brook in as gallant a style as ever he made a speech in the Senate. The traveller was grateful, and offered a handsome reward, which was unconditionally declined. The reader may better imagine than I can describe, the astonishment of the man, when upon enquiry he was informed, that the one who had rendered him such signal kindness, was Daniel Webster.

CHEAP LITERATURE.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

That it may be within the means of every person who wishes to subscribe to an amusing and useful journal of news, and have it carefully and regularly forwarded to them by mail, or otherwise, we shall, from the present time until the first of next January, receive orders for ten copies of the Salmagundi, and News of the Day, at the rate of one dollar per annum for each subscription—that is, any person forwarding us a Ten Dollar Note, free of postage, will be furnished with ten of our papers for a whole year, to be forwarded to any direction designated. The subscription price for a single name is Two Dollars. We make this offer, believing, as the pecuniary expense will be trifling, that all who have the inclination to become acquainted with the character of a journal which has made such rapid progress in public estimation as this has, will take advantage of the proposition at once, and enroll their names on the lists of its numerous patrons It cannot be doubted that those who subscribe will receive the worth of their dollar, when we assure the public that each number contains, independent of its various amusing Engravings, as much reading matter as many of the popular volumes which are sold in our bookstores at double the rates that we ask for a whole year's subscription.

The Salmagundi already circulates through every post office in this country, and continues to multiply. It furnishes its patrons with the leading features of the News, and a humorous compilation of live'y and pungent sallies which are floating along the tide of Literature. The Salmagundi is printed on large imperial paper, equal in size and quality to that which is used by the largest and best journals of the day It is calculated that more than will be furnished in this journal in one year—these, in addition to a choice selection of Satire, Criticism and Wit, contained in its columns, will form a literary banquet of a superior and attractive order. ☞ Clubs of Four will be supplied with the paper for one year, from the commencement, by forwarding a five dollar note, postage paid.

PREMIUMS—The publisher, prompted by the unexampled and unexpected patronage which this paper has received, offers the following premiums:—

For the best Original Comic Tale, Fifty Dollars—for the best Original Comic Song, Twenty Five Dollars—for the best collection of Original Anecdotes, Jests &c. not less than Fifty in number, Twenty Five Dollars—for the best Original Comic Design, Sketch, or Drawing, Twenty Five Dollars; for the second best, Fifteen Dollars; and for the third best, Ten Dollars.

Persons entering as competitors, may or may not forward their names, agreeably to their own wishes. The premiums will be awarded by competent judges. All communications on the subject must be addressed to the publisher, prior to the first of September, 1836, postage paid.

A post master's certificate will be a satisfactory guarantee of a remittance. Negociable notes of every kind taken in payment of subscriptions.
