From the Annapolis Republican.

THE COLLEGE OF ELECTORS closed their session—an unexampled session it has been, of exactly two months instead of two days, the usual term of such sessions, late on Saturday night last. Their official proceedings will be found in another column. The incidents of this brief period will furnish material for one of the most interesting chapters in Maryland history, and the names of the conspicuous actors will infallibly be perpetuated, though not exactly, we opine, with that apportionment of glory which was so profusely promised in some of the publications of the day on which the conspiracy against the Government was first avowed by the 'ILLUSTRIOUS NINETEEN.' If ever a set of men in this world allowed themselves to become the instruments of a few hot headed, foolish and wicked demagogues, in attempting by the most preposterous course, to effect purposes the most disastrous to their country, as well as to the character and stability of Republican principles throughout the world, these nineteen are the very men—and the wickedness and the folly of the measure will be associated with their names, and the ignominy of their fate, as long as lessons shall remain to be taught in the schools of morality, or examples be recorded in the chronicles of men for instruction and admonition to after ages. And just so long, and as belonging to the same chapter of incidents, will be, in striking contrast, the cool, deliberate, immovable decision of those patriotic men, who, most fortunately for their country, had been selected by another and more considerate portion of the people to represent them in the Electoral College. If ever there was a clear illustration of the effects of a representative system in this particular, this was that illustration. To say that the Glorious Nineteen were in all respects fair representatives of those that elected them, might be considered ungenerous, after so miserable a shipwreck as they have made for themselves of character and fortune, and we will not insinuate it; we leave them to settle accounts with their own agents. If they are satisfied with theirs we can assure them that we are no less so with ours. We are not about to glorify them for having done well their duty; but, being upon the spot and observant of many minutiæ in the course of affairs which the public generally can never have before them, we may be allowed to say that there were instances of forbearance—of untiring zeal—enduring patience—of anxious investigation and enquiry, and of cool collected judgment and discretion, which entitle those members to more estimation from their constituents and their country than either will ever be aware of. They have not sought relief, but the safety of their country. Their very first determination, and that too before the extraordinary movement of the nineteen was avowed, was one of signal disinterestedness. It was resolved unanimously that not one of the members of the Electoral College should be voted for by them for Senators. When the attitude of the nineteen was announced there was not a single or the slightest suggestion even hinted at towards yielding the citidel of the Republic that had been entrusted to their charge—not yet an out-breathing of impatience at propositions which would have roused the impetuosity of any men of less cool and deliberate judgments. The attitude taken instantly, and as if by a single impulse, was that of manly firmness in their own position, and of forbearance towards those who had so strangely mistaken them, as well as their own course, and in this attitude they have remained as immovable as the Alleganies. In it they stood and twice appealed to the People of the State, and twice have the People responded 'well done good and faithful servants.' A sufficient number of the erring sheep were at length admonished back to the path of duty, and the good old iron sides, SHIP MARYLAND, is safely moored again, with all flags gallantly flying after having bravely weathered the most serious squall that ever yet was encountered by any of the squadron of Republics in this Union. When those that have had charge of her, from the Chief Commander, whose voice recently reached every one of the crew, directing all hands to quarters, and the retreatory to their duty, down to the youngest cabin boy who so promptly answered 'aye, aye, sir, ready for action,' come to settle up their reckoning, the answer of an approving country and what is still more, of an approving conscience will be received; 'Well done—all well!'

The Washington Globe of Tuesday, has the following information respecting a recent severe attack of illness experienced by the President:

THE PRESIDENT'S HEALTH.

Two nights ago the President was taken with a cough, which was succeeded by a considerable bleeding from the lungs. He had suffered for some time previously with severe pain in the side. He was relieved from both unpleasant symptoms, in some degree, by the lancet. Night before last the hemorrhage from the lungs recurred, & was again stopped by the same process and other applications.—He is now extremely weak, from the effect of the disorder, and the remedies, but is better, and considered by his physicians in no immediate danger. Many years ago he was affected in the same way, and recovered without serious injury, or even a long depression of his health.

'CAPT. MARRYATT A BOSTON BOY.'—The Boston Post says, A paragraph has been going the rounds giving an account of this popular author's Boston extraction. We will take the liberty to follow his pedigree back one step farther; not from the usual motive of detracting from his merits as a writer, but simply from the fact that Capt. Marryatt's mode of attack upon authors (vide Willis, and Neale, the author of Cavendish) is to assail them for low extraction. First the paragraph:

MARRYATT A BOSTON BOY!—This popular writer is on the mother's side, of Boston extraction. His maternal grandfather, the late Frederick Geyer, was for many years, an eminent merchant of this city. He left three daughters who were born in the ancient house on Summer street now occupied by S. P. Gordon, Esq. One of them married Mr. Belchar, of Halifax,—another, Mr. Tucker of Bellows Falls, and Charlotte, who was distinguished for her talents and literary taste, became the wife of Marryatt, an Englishman of family and fortune. Captain Marryatt was the issue of this marriage. We understand that next spring, he may be expected on a visit to his relations in this quarter.—New England Galaxy.

Mr. Frederick Geyer, the maternal grandfather of Capt. Marryatt, commenced life as a gingerbread baker, and for several years carried round his own gingerbread in a basket upon his arm. Many of the old inhabitants of Boston still recollect him. It was his good fortune to attract the attention of an eminent merchant, (we believe the late Mr. Amory) by a ready calculation in the market, and this gentlemen took him into his store where his industry and probity soon brought him a fortune. He became a rich merchant, and the remainder of his family history is told in the above paragraph.'—New York Times.

Shaving at Constantinople.—Shaving in Constantinople is a sort of hair bath. As a sign of a barber's shop, a long handkerchief waves in front of the apartment. It is supplied on two sides with broad wooden seats.—The third is occupied by the hearth for heating water; the fourth consists wholly of windows and glass doors, in order to have plenty of light. The customer seats himself upon one of the benches, while the barber squats down with cross legs before him, and then commences with considerable energy the removal of the beard. But the flexibility of the patient's neck is put to the test—since the operator, to avoid moving from his convenient position, turns and twists the head of the shaved in all directions, upon his knees. The beard having disappeared, the act is, nevertheless, not terminated, for the second scene now commences. One is enveloped before and behind in napkins: a large water basin is placed in the hand, into an aperture in the sides thereof the neck fits, and the head is bent into the basin, representing the picture of Herodia and the decapitated John the Baptist.

Waves of soap and water boisterously roar in this vessel, and with a kind of professional enthusiasm the barber commences, not to wash, but fairly to knead, the seat of knowledge. The ears and nose are most unmercifully treated. One ventures not in this extremity to open the mouth and call for help, lest one should be suffocated in soap suds: the infliction is therefore borne resignedly until near swooning. Now, over the head of the patient, a lesser vessel is suspended by a chain from the ceiling, full of water, which from an aperture beneath, streams down upon the crown, washing off the soap. Warmed towels complete the process of drying, and with a "God be praised!" one disengages one's self from the hands of the barber, who holds a glass in front to enable one to see whether, in spite of his manipulation, the head yet sits in the right place.—St. Petersburg, Constantinople, and Napoli di Romania, by M. Von Tietz.

RALEIGH, N. C. Nov. 8

High Prices.—The prices of every article of provision in this City, is higher than we have ever before known them, with a prospect, we fear, of a still further rise. Flour sells by the load at $10 per bbl. Pork commands already, $8 per hundred. New Corn readily brings $3 per bbl. Lard 20 cts. per lb. Butter 25 to 30 cts; and other articles of living in proportion. These are the ordinary rates; when the Legislature assembles, we may calculate on an advance of about 25 per cent. Under such circumstances, the Proprietors of our Public Houses we presume, will have to increase the price of Board.

The United States Mint is about to issue fifty cent pieces of a new and beautiful comage.

LITERARY UNION;

AND

Ladies American Magazine.

The Proprietor of the Lady's Book, grateful for the unceasing patronage which he has received, announces to the Ladies who have so generously sustained their own "Book," that he has made new arrangements for their gratification. Convinced that he could not in any way more effectually promote the interests, or realize the wishes of his numerous subscribers, he has secured the valuable aid of

of Boston, to whose superintendance the literary departments of the Lady's Book will hereafter be committed. For many years Mrs. Hale has conducted the American Ladies' Magazine—a periodical of uncommon merit, which will be merged in the Lady's Book.—Her abilities are familiar to her countrywomen, and on both sides of the Atlantic she enjoys a high reputation as one of the most graceful, vigorous, and accomplished of our female writers

Under the judicious management of Mrs Hale, the Lady's Book will not only maintain the excellent character it has already acquired, but it is confidently expected that it will be rendered more eminently worthy of the support of those to whose interests and amusement it has been, and will continue to be, especially devoted. The superior talents and fine taste of the Editor will give the work a new impulse; while her own contributions, and those received from her personal friends, and other correspondents, of whom a number have already promised, will render it almost entirely original. Amongst others who are expected to furnish matter for the Book may be mentioned,

The proprietor of the Lady's Book is determined to use every means to maintain the superiority which his publication has obtained. For years he has gone steadily on in the course of improvement, and he flatters himself that his facilities are such as to give his work eminent advantages over his competitors. His very ample subscription list enables him to be liberal in his expenditures upon it, and whatever can be accomplished by enterprize and cost he is resolved to effect. Besides the persons above mentioned as contributors, he has expectations of receiving original articles from several distinguished female writers in Europe and as an inducement to writers of our own country, he is willing to pay for every article adopted by him as suitable for his publication, as high a rate of remuneration as will be given by the proprietors of any other periodical in the U. States.

The mechanical portion of the Lady's Book will likewise be improved. The typography will be more elegant, and the paper of a better quality. During the year portraits, engraved on steel, of several eminent ladies will be given: and every second month a coloured plate, illustrating the prevailing fashion, will be furnished. Other embellishments, calculated to enhance the appearance and increase the value of the work, will be introduced: and generally, everything will be done that the most untiring purpose of making the Lady's Book pre-eminently entitled to patronage can suggest. With the experience he has acquired during a long course of years devoted to the business, and the aid to be derived from the distinguished lady who will henceforth be associated with him, the publisher is confident that he will be able to render the amplest satisfaction to all who may become his patrons. He, therefore, with a just reliance on his claims to support, respectfully solicits a continuance of that liberal encouragement which has so kindly been bestowed on his endeavours

The terms of the Lady's Book are Three Dollars per annum, payable in advance. All orders must be addressed to

L. A. GODEY,
100 Walnut Street.

As the publisher of the Lady's Book is connected with other popular periodicals, he suggests, for the convenience of remittance, the following system of
