EASTON GAZETTE

EASTON, (MD.)

Saturday Morning, April 15

The Baltimore American of Wednesday last says, that Oak wood of very inferior quality sold yesterday from the wharves at $4.75 and $5, and Hickory at $6 per cord. There is very little to be had even at these advanced prices. Bay craftsmen may do a profitable business by bringing wood to market at such rates.

The correspondent of the Washington Reformer of the 8th inst. says: 'We are in the midst of the commercial revolution. The late failures are but the beginning of troubles in the South. Produce of every kind is coming down rapidly. On Tuesday upwards of three hundred bales of Mississippi cotton, fair quality were taken at seven cents This same cotton would have brought six weeks ago fifteen cents. Yesterday several lots were offered at six cents, but none taken.'

Specie.—The New York Mercantile Advertiser says—

We learn from a gentleman from Indiana, that one of the branches of the State Bank of that State, of only $200,000 capital. had the latter part of March, when our informant left. rising of seven hundred thousand dollars in specie in its vaults, mostly government money. So large an amount of specie is not wanted there, but it would be of great service here while the pressure for money continues.

USURY.—A bill has passed the Legislature of New York providing for the punishment of usury as a criminal offence. This important measure has been adopted at a moment singularly well calculated to test its expediency.

WHEAT CROP.—The Hagerstown Torch Light says, that the wheat crop of Washington county, is generally very unpromising, so much so, "that in many instances our farmers believe they will not reap as much as they sowed, and that, in other instances, they are ploughing up their fields This, with the derangement in the money market, presents rather a cheerless prospect for the coming year."

The New York Correspondent of the Baltimore Chronicle says:—"My reports for this day the 8th and yesterday is not such as to vary your estimate of the real state of things here. Stocks yesterday declined, and to day (with the exception of some of the local banks) went up a shade. The reason of this is to be found in the fact that the banks are effected by the recent failures here But little was done at the board, however, and nothing to give an indication of a real improvement. The failure of St. John & Co carried with it twelve or fifteen houses in Pearl street and the neighborhood

Money is as hard to be obtained as ever, & there is the same gloomy aspect brooding over mercantile affairs here, as at my last (Thursday) date.

Apprehensions are rife that there will be a suspension of several operations, in consequence of the difficulty of paying laborers. This is a matter of necessity. as curtailing the outlay of money, to prevent suspension What a blow (if it fail) will it be to the community! This will make those feel who never felt before, —and will bring home the beauty of "The Experiment" to the bosoms and business of thousands who thus far have supported, because they did not feel it.

No news. Packet of the 7th detained till Monday.

The Ladies' Fair held last week in Philadelphia is said to have produced but little short of ten thousand dollars!

The Anthracite Coal trade of Pennsylvania has opened with much activity The Lehigh Navigation and Coal Company have already contracted for the delivery at Mauch Chunk this season of upwards of 200 000 tons of Coal; and offers for about the same quantity have already been declined for the present. The price charged for Coal at the mines, we understand is, $3 25 per ton for a less quantity than 20,000 tons.

Escape of a Child from Drowning.—We learn, that a most interesting son of Capt. Thos. Wright, of this county, aged about two years, was rescued from a watery grave on Monday last, by the presence of mind and intrepidity of Thos. C. Browne, Esq. who happened to be present at the house of Capt. W. on the occasion.

It is supposed that the little fellow was at play in the yard—approached too near the well and fell in. The well is 25 feet deep, and there were about 6 feet of water in it.—When Mr. Browne reached the spot, the child's clothes, which had at first borne him up, had become filled with water. and he was evidently sinking—the water gargling in his mouth, and his infant hands extended up, supplicating aid. In the twinkling of an eye, Mr. B. descended the well, saved the boy and restored him to the arms of his agonized mother, who was frantically viewing the scene.

The child is an interesting little fellow, just able to run about. He does not appear to have been in any way injured from the accident, having no doubt fallen feet foremost & was borne up, in a measure, by his clothes forming something of a parachute.

LATERAL RAIL ROAD.

The Eastern Shore Rail Road Commissioners were employed the present week in fixing upon a route for a lateral rail road from Centreville, by Greensborough, in Caroline county to the main road. We do not know exactly what route was fixed on by the Commissioners.

The lateral road will probably go through Centreville to the second wharf—pass over the narrow part of the stream, to the land, and girt along the south side of Corsica creek to the nearest point of navigable water. This course it is presumed will be the least expensive and troublesome.—ib

Selected for the Easton Gazette.

Nations, like individuals, in their intercourse are great imitators, and we have the authority of Camden, who lived at the time, for asserting that the English in their long wars in the Netherlands first learned to drown themselves with immoderate drinking, and by drinking others' healths to impair their own. Of all northern nations, they had been before this most commended for their sobriety. And the historian adds, 'that the vice had so diffused itself over the nation, that in our days it was first restrained by severe laws.' Camdens history of Queen Elizabeth, Book III.

Many statutes against drunkenness, by way of prevention, passed in the reign of James I. See Blackstone, Book IV C. 2. Sect. 3.—Many of the terms used in drinking which still abound, are generally phrases borrowed from the Dutch, Danish, or German.

Half seas over, or nearly drunk, is likely to have been a proverbial phrase from the Dutch, applied to a state of ebriety by an idea familiar with those people. Thus op zee, Dutch, means literally over sea. Mr. Gifford has recently told us in his Jonson, that it was a name given to a stupefying beer introduced into England from the low-countries; hence op-zee, or over-sea. We are indebted to the Danes for some of our terms of drunken jollity; such as a rouse. and carouse, Mr. Gifford has given not only a new, but a very distinct explanation of these classical terms in his Massinger. He says a rouse was a large glass, in which a health was given, the drinking of which by the rest of the company formed a carouse: but there could be no rouse, or carouse, unless the glasses were emptied.

According to Blount, carouse is a corruption of two old German words gar signifying all, and ausz, out: so that to drink garausz is to drink all out: hence the word carouse.

We have a very common expression to describe a man in a state of ebriety, that 'he is as drunk as a beast,' or that 'he is beastly drunk.' This is a libel on brutes. for the vice of ebriety is perfectly human. When Ebriety became first prevalent in England, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, it was a favourite notion among the writers of that time, that a man in the different stages of ebriety showed the most vicious quality of different animals 'All drunkards (drunkards) are beasts,' says George Gascoigne: But the satirical Nash has classified eight kinds of drunkards:

The first is ape-drunk, and he leaps and sings and hollows and danceth; the second is lion drunk, and he flings the pots about the house, abuses the hostess, breaks the glass-windows, and is apt to quarrel with any man that speaks to him; the third is swine-drunk, heavy lumpish and sleepy, and cries for a little more drink; the fourth is sheep-drunk, wise in his own conceit when he cannot bring forth a right word; the fifth is maudlin-drunk, when a fellow will weep for kindness in the midst of his drink, and kiss you, saying, O sir! I love you, go thy ways, thou dost not think so often of me as I do of thee; I wish, I could not love you so well as I do, and then he puts his finger in his eyes, and cries.—The sixth is martin-drunk, when a man is drunk, and drinks himself sober before he stir, the seventh is goat drunk. The eight is fox-drunk, when he is crafty drunk and will never bargain but when he is under the influence of intoxicating drinks.

PLANTAGENET.

Fugitive Slave.—Yesterday the recorder's office was crowded to excess, on account of the arrest of a colored man named Dixon, claimed to be a fugitive slave. The claimant is a Dr. Allender of Baltimore, who says the real name of the accused is Jacob Ellis. Mr. Dresser, counsel to the Abolitionist Society appeared on behalf of the prisoner, and contended that he was not the man alleged to have absconded. So well did the learned counsel seem convinced of this that he caused Dr. Allender, the claimant, to be arrested while in court, on a charge of false imprisonment. He has given bail to answer the charge in the sum of $500. Mr. Morrill, counsel for the claimant, wishing farther time to procure witness, the farther consideration of the case was postponed until to day. It has caused a great excitement among the colored people.—N. Y. Times.

ED. P. ROBERTS & SANDS & NEILSON

Having purchased the Establishment of the FARMER & GARDENER.

Successor to the AMERICAN FARMER.

And being desirous to place it within the reach of every agriculturist in the United States, have concluded to reduce its subscription price from five dollars, to two dollars and a half, per year, from and after the beginning of the next volume, which will commence in May next.

It is now nearly eighteen years since the American Farmer was first established. Prior to its institution, there were no paper exclusively devoted to agriculture in the country, and it will not be arrogating any thing but what it deserves, to say, that, as it was the pioneer in the good work, the labors of its former conductors must have been productive of much solid advantage to those for whose benefit it was established. In continuing its publication, the present proprietors flatter themselves that its pages will be found to contain matter at once calculated to instruct & interest the agricultural reader. So far as they are concerned, they are determined to conduct it with industry, unflinching perseverance, & with undivided attention to the great and important purposes which called it into existence. They feel certain that none of its patrons will have cause to complain, at the end of their subscription year, that they have left any effort unessayed to render it worthy of their confidence and support.

In reducing its subscription price, they have ventured upon an experiment full of risk and responsibility, and as they have done so under the influence of motives which they must be permitted to say should commend it to a greatly increased subscription—as they can alone look to that as the source of their remuneration—and as in so doing, their labor will be much increased—they appeal to its present patrons to aid them in giving it an extended circulation. They are confident that those who now honor them with their support, can, without personal inconvenience, in their own immediate neighborhoods, and among their persons' friends, by using their deserved influence, procure such an addition to their present list of subscribers, as will not only realize their fondest expectations, but place them under renewed obligations of interest and gratitude, to render the Farmer and Gardener a welcome visitor to the fire side of every farmer and planter.

The farmer and Gardener will at once be a faithful repository of original communications from practical agriculturists and horticulturists, and of judicious selections from every other available source. Foreign, and domestic agricultural, and scientific works, will be constantly resorted to, for the purpose of furnishing materials calculated to advance the prosperity and happiness of the country, and of adding to the intelligence of the American husbandman.

In fine, whatever concerns the business, of the farm, domestic animals of all kinds, new & invented implements of husbandry, those of approved utility now in use, together with the principles and practice of agriculture, horticulture, and gardening generally, will be regularly and conscientiously noticed. The prices of produce in this market, and the value of bank notes will be weekly laid before its readers.

With a view of keeping their patrons advised of all superior breeds of animals already introduced or which may be hereafter imported, they will seize the earliest opportunity of translating all such information to the columns of their journal.

TERMS, &c.

Price two dollars and fifty cents per annum or all subscriptions paid in advance, or within one month from the date of subscription—all subscriptions which remain unpaid beyond that period, will be charged at the rate of three dollars per year.

JOHN HENRY,

Sired by Valentine, will travel through the counties of Talbot and Caroline, & will be let to mares on the following reduced terms, viz: 6 dollars the spring's chance, 10 dollars to insure, and 4 dollars the single leap, 25 cts to the Groom, in each case Further particulars to will be made known in a handbill.
