preference claims, and that the following Medical gentlemen be, and are hereby appointed to prepare a memorial to that effect, viz: Drs. Evans and Sewall of Cecil; Drs. Wroth and Davis of Kent; Drs. Boardly and Crane of Queen Anne's; Drs. White and Tatem of Caroline; Drs. Kemp and Jenkins of Talbot; Drs. Bayly and Wallace of Dorchester; Drs. Jones and King of Somerset; and Drs. Gilless and Jno. Martin of Worcester—which was agreed to. And upon motion of Dr. Robertson, it was resolved that the Secretary be directed to inform those gentlemen of their appointment, and annex a copy of this resolution.

Dr. Crane, from the committee appointed to consider the expediency of establishing a College of Pharmacy in the State of Maryland, to regulate the business of Apothecaries and to draught a memorial to the Legislature on said subject made the following report, viz:

"Whereas Physicians are too often much disappointed in their expectations in the effect produced by prescriptions made, owing to the adulteration, and improper pharmaceutical preparation of Medicines, as well as the ignorance of the technical names of Medicines, this convention do deem it expedient to petition the Legislature to pass a law that shall compel all apothecaries, druggists, or others, that vend Medicines after the first day of January, 1839, to have a license from a regularly appointed Board of Examiners, which was adopted. The committee also presented a memorial which they had prepared on this subject, which was agreed to.

Dr. Crane from the committee appointed to report what support this convention will yield to the cause of Temperance, produced the following, viz:

The committee appointed to consider what support this convention should give to the cause of Temperance ask leave to report the following resolutions, viz:

1st. "Resolved, As the unanimous opinion of this convention, that the use of intoxicating drinks being injurious to health, and destructive to the moral feeling of the community and it universally indulged, calculated to sap the very foundations of our civil and social institutions, should be discouraged by the members of our profession.

2d. "Resolved, That this convention consider the efforts of the Temperance Societies, praiseworthy in their motives, highly beneficial in their effects, and worthy the patronage of all philantropists," which resolutions were adopted.

Dr. Wroth from the committee appointed to enquire into the expediency of establishing County Societies to meet annually or semi-annually to further the interests of this association reports as follows, viz:

"The committee appointed to enquire into the expediency of establishing county societies, beg leave to report, that to establish societies for each county, exceeds, in their opinion the powers claimed by this convention. The convention however most cheerfully agree in recommending to all the counties the adoption of that measure as one well calculated to promote, not only, the interests of the profession, but the general good. The committee propose that this convention resolve itself into a Medical association of the Eastern Shore.—and to perpetuate its usefulness, that biennial meetings be held at Easton, Cambridge and Centreville in succession.

Which report and recommendation were agreed to by the convension.

On motion, it was resolved, that the memorial upon the desturbed state of the University of Maryland, with a copy of the resolution by which it was unanimously adopted be copied and signed by the President & Secretary of this convention—and also that of the memorial upon the report of the college of Pharmacy, and sent to the next Legislature for its consideration.

The following preamble and resolution were submitted and agreed to, viz:

Whereas, unfortunate differences of opinions, &c. between medical men too often give rise to hostile feelings, and interrupt the social and professional intercourse between them, therefore, Resolved, that this convention recommend to the county Societies (proposed to be established) the appointment of three Censors for each county, to take into consideration such differences, and use their influence to compose and settle them, and that the decision of said Censors should be considered binding on the parties."

On motion,

EASTON GAZETTE

EASTON, (MD.)

Saturday Morning, December 2.

Congress will meet again on Monday next—We will endeavor to spread the Message before our readers in our next.

We conclude to day the Address of Dr. J. E. Muse, of Dorchester, Md. delivered before the Agricultural Society of that County.—"The Farmer and Gardner says, we have read, with feelings of pleasure and pride an Address of Dr. Joseph E. Muse,—To say that it is able, learned and eloquent, is but to do it but half justice, &c."

The Chronicle of the 30th ult. says

"We hold the address to be most able and highly interesting, and if properly studied and acted on, capable of exerting a very salutary influence on this great department of human employment which lies at the foundation of all the rest."

"As a practical farmer, who has been liberal in the expenditure of both time and means, in efforts to improve the existing system of agriculture, Dr. Muse has heretofore conferred signal benefits upon his fellow countrymen; and with the most useful of these, we should not hesitate to rank the Address above mentioned."

The Baltimore American of the same date says—

"As a practical as well as scientific farmer, Dr. Muse is extensively known, and it is but justice to say that to him perhaps as much as to any other of her citizens is Maryland indebted for valuable experiments on her soil & its capacities for cultivation. With ample means and untiring zeal, this gentleman has for years persevered in testing practically the application of manures, and the introduction of new crops to supply the place of those for which, owing to circumstances the soil has become unfit."

We had prepared an article on the appointment of a U. S. Senator, in place of the late Gov. Kent—but the following from the Baltimore Chronicle embraces all our views; and far better expressed.

[From the Baltimore Chronicle of Dec. 1.]

THE UNITED STATES SENATOR.—In a few hasty remarks yesterday, we endeavored to enforce the necessity of the choice of a man of first rate ability as our representative in the Senate of the United States. Did not the situation of Maryland make this duty imperative on the Legislature, State pride should dictate such a choice. It is the boast of Massachusetts that she is represented by a Webster—it is to the honor of South Carolina that she has a Chalhoun and a Preston, it is to the glory of Kentucky that she has a Henry Clay. What would be thought of the Legislature of these States, if they should so far forget their own true fame as to elect to the Senate in place of such men as these others of less exalted intellect? And, we might also ask, what would be thought of the modesty and self-denying virtue of the man of ordinary mind who should seek to obtain place with such men and to combat with them as equals? To ask the question is to answer it. The Legislature that displaced a Sprague to make way for a Judah Dana would sink into contempt, and the Judah Dana who aspired to membership in a body where the talents of a Clay were necessary, would become immortal in his folly! It is true that it should be understood, not only in our own State, but in all the States of the Union, that mediocrity is not allowed to Senators and will not be tolerated by the people. This is the prevailing sentiment among the people of Maryland, and we hope to learn that it is universal with the Whig members of the Legislature.

Most Melancholy Event.—Death of Senator Kent.—It is with feelings of more than ordinary regret, that we learn from a gentlemen who arrived in this city last night, that the Hon. Joseph Kent, Senator in Congress from this State, was thrown from his horse yesterday while riding through his farm, and immediately killed. We have not the leisure at this time to dilate on the many virtues of the deceased—affable, mild and unobtrusive in his manners he enjoyed the respect and esteem of a numerous circle of acquaintances whose grief at his melancholy decease will be sincere and poignant.

[Balt. Chron.

Captain Mitchell, the reputed pirate, has addressed a long letter to the editor of the Mobile Mercantile Advertiser, defending himself against the allegations of piracy which have been brought against him. He asks a suspension of public opinion, and bases his demand on the broad and correct ground that a man "shall always be considered innocent until his guilt is established."

TEMPERANCE MEETING.

The Chappel District Society convened at the Methodist Meeting House near the Old Chappel on Sunday last at 11 o'clock, A. M.

The object of the meeting being made known, the Rev. M. Hazel addressed the Society much to the satisfaction of all present, after which the Society tendered him their thanks for the favor conferred. New members were then solicited, and several added their names to the list.

The appointment of officers at a former meeting was confirmed.

On motion, The Society unanimously appointed William H. Tilghman and James Arringdale as Delegates to the Peninsular Temperance Convention, to be held at Denton, Wednesday 6th of December next.

On motion,

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the newspapers at Easton, and signed by the President and Secretary.

LETTER V.

On leaving the falls of Mohawk we soon obtain a fine view of the German flats, admired for their fertility; the inhabitants are mostly of German extraction, preserving their language and the customs of their ancestors. They are mostly laborious and provident farmers, but little inclined to learning, or the useful arts.

The scenes presented along this part of the rail-road to Utica, bear a resemblance to some of the best cultivated meadows, &c. in any part of the state of New York.

Utica is located on the site of old Fort Schuyler on the banks of the Mohawk, nearly 100 miles west of Albany. It was chartered as a village in 1798 and as a city in 1832, and the population now may be estimated at about 11,000. This is one of the largest and most important inland cities in the state. All the great canals, rail-roads, and turnpikes leading from the east to the west, through the valley of the Mohawk, centre in this city.

Various public institutions are located in this place: the Oneida Institute of Science and Industry, which has a large farm attached to the Institution, on which each student labours from three to four hours each day, a Lyceum, Museum, two banks and ten or eleven churches. There are several handsome buildings in Utica, and a number of well kept hotels; where every necessary comfort may be obtained. In this city the Roman Catholics have recently finished a neat-looking church, their old one not being sufficiently large to contain their increasing congregations. Some of the other denominations, as I was informed by Dr. L.—were injured, and their congregations diminished, through the excitement which their ministry and membership had produced by advocating modern abolitionism. One peculiarity I observed in this city, the factories, stores, &c. had their signs, not over their doors, but over the roof, even as high as the highest chimnies, but this strange display of signs is not universal.

From Utica to Rochester we crossed the lakes of Cayuga, Seneca, and Geneva, the country is interspersed with beautiful and flourishing villages, and the counties through which we passed, are generally in a high state of cultivation.

Rochester, on the Gennessee river, is one of the most populous, and important cities in the western country. The first settlement was made in 1812, and the Legislature granted a city charter in 1834, and now it contains a population of 15,000 or 16,000 inhabitants. The mills in this place can make nearly 400,000 barrels of flour annually. Millions of feet of lumber are sawn here. Here is a cotton factory with 1400 or 1500 spindles, between thirty and forty power looms, wollen factory, &c. The water power of this city is calculated equal to 1,920 steam engines of twenty horse power each. The whole river supplies 20,000 cubic feet in a minute, a fall of 12½ cubic feet of water in a minute, twenty feet, is equal to the power of one horse. Near the centre of the city the canal crosses the river by a splendid aqueduct 809 feet long with eleven arches, elevated fourteen feet above the surface of the water. It is constructed of red free stone, and cost 80,000 dollars: it is no less remarkable for its usefulness than for its architectural beauty and strength. The river rolls rapidly along beneath, and boats and passengers, glide safely above. The great falls of the Genessee river, 97 feet in height are about 500 feet below the city. From the centre of these falls, the celebrated Sam Patch, of immortal memory, made his "last jump," in the fall of 1829. He precipitated himself from a scaffold erected twenty five feet above table rock, making an elevation of 125 feet, an immense number of persons had collected from many miles around, to witness his fatal leap.—His body was found the ensuing spring. An arcade was erected in the city eight years ago. It is 100 feet front by 135 deep, and four stories high, exclusive of the attic & basement. An observatory, in the form of a Chinese temple or pagoda, is erected on the top, from which the visiter may obtain a magnificent view of the surrounding country.

PLANTAGENET.

MARY'S DELIGHT HALL INFIRMARY.

An extraordinary case of Lithotomy successfully performed at the Mary's Delight Hall Infirmary on the 11th inst. by Absalom Thompson, M. D. Surgeon and Physician to said institution.

Captain Holland, of Somerset county, Md. wrote me a letter on the subject of his wife and sent me two perfect teeth, of the size of a childs teeth of five or six years of age with the enamel uncorroded, the one an incisor tooth and the other a cuspidates or canine tooth stating that they passed from her into the urinal, and that she felt a large lump in her bladder which rendered her case unsupportable, as she could not then stand or walk without excruciating pain, and begged of me to write him whether I could do anything for her, as her then attending Physician, Dr. King, said he could not do anything more for her and advised her to go to some infirmary. I wrote Capt H., that if there was a calculus or any thing else in his wife's bladder I did not hesitate to say that I could give her perfect relief.

Mrs. H. arrived at my Institution on the 10th ult., accompanied by her sister and sister-in-law. I made a strict inquiry into the case and she and her friends detailed it to me as follows. She became pregnant about ten years past and carried in regular order without any unusual occurrence for five or six months at the end of which time she was threatened with a miscarriage and after a considerable suffering her midwife advised her husband to send for her Physician, Dr. Ballard. He saw her and attended for a long time but she obtained no relief for five months and was confined to her bed in dispair for the whole time. However at the end of that time she gradually made a partial recovery but (to use her own language) she always felt a large lump in her abdomen and did experience unceasing pain and suffering in the enlargement until about three years past, when she says, something broke in her and she discharged a large quantity of matter from her bowels and at or about the same time she had a great discharge of matter from the usual outlet of her bladder, and she has experienced a constant pain and suffering in that organ ever since.

I immediately made the examination with the female sound and struck the calculus which had the feel of an unusual production. I ordered her under a preparatory course of medicine and regimen for four days, I then proceeded to perform the operation with the female director and female gorget and made a tolerable free incission into the bladder but on introducing the Lithotomy forceps and making a firm grasp on the stone, I found that it made a perfect resistance, I then made a more free incision and introduced the index finger of the right hand into the bladder and found a bulb, or a large portion of the calculus imbased into a cyst or membrane at the fundus of the bladder, which rendered me considerable difficulty to detach it.

However on removing the stone, I found it to be of a very curious shape somewhat resembling the inferior maxilla or the lower jaw bone of a child with a coagulum of blood between the angles of the jaw bone covered with a civit of calcareous earth from three to four lines in thickness with two perfect teeth implanted in it.

The wealth of this anomalous production from angle to angle is one and three quarter inches. Its length is one and five eight inches. It is not quite one inch thick.

This case I conceive to be an extra uterine conception where the ovum was not detached from the ovarium after impregnation and gestation was carried on there, or more likely and which I believe to be the facts, that the ovum dropt from the ovarium into the abdomen and through nature was balked and interrupted in her usual course of operation yet there is complete sources from the sympathy between the parts after the impregnation of the ovum to carry on gestation in the abdomen and outside of the womb to perfection until the full time of delivery at which time there being no way of delivery the child dies and becomes a foreign substance which almost always destroys the mother after a long course of suffering.

In this case, nature had exhausted all her store to relieve the patient, and after a constant suffering of seven years, there was two fistulous opening, the one into the rectum, and the other in the bladder, and a great part of the fetus was carried off by stool & the inferior maxilla & teeth was carried into the bladder & formed a nucleus for the deposite of the calcareous matter which would have soon destroyed the patient if it had not been removed by an operation.

In conclusion I am happy to state that Mrs. H. is now perfectly well and will return to her family and friends in a few days, I am confident as she is but twenty eight years of age that she will receive one million per cent reward for all the suffering she experienced in undergoing the operation as she did not suffer more than five minutes, in the whole from commencement to the end of the operation, and has made no complaint ever since, which I trust will be encouragement to many and very many people, labouring under such misterious diseases, to submit to operations which cannot be avoided, and which will give them immediate relief, and snatch them from a bed of suffering and a premature grave.
