THE DEW-DROP AND THE STREAM.

BY MARY COLLING.

The brakes with golden flowers were crown'd,
And melody was heard around,
When near a stream, a dew-drop shed
Its lustre on a violet's head.

While trembling to the breeze it hung,
The streamlet, as it roll'd along,
The beauty of the morn confess'd,
And thus the sparkling pearl address'd—

'Sure, little drop, rejoice we may,
For all is beautiful and gay;
Creation wears her emerald dress,
And smiles in all her loveliness;
And with delight and pride I see
That little flower bedew'd by thee:
Thy lustre with a gem might vie,
While trembling in its purple eye.'

'You may rejoice, indeed, 'tis true,'
Replied the radiant drop of dew.
'You will, no doubt, as on you move,
To flocks and herds a blessing prove;
But when the sun ascends on high,
Its beam will draw me to the sky;
And, I must own my humble power,
I've but refresh'd a humble flower!'

'Hold!' cried the stream, 'nor thus repine,
For well 'tis known a power divine,
Subservient to His will supreme,
Hath made the dew-drop and the stream.
Tho' small thou art (I that allow),
No mark of Heaven's contempt art thou;
Thou hast refresh'd a humble flower,
And done according to thy power.
All things that are, both great and small,
One glorious Author form'd them all.
This thought may all repinings quell,
What serves His purpose serves Him well.'
