POETRY.

The Token and Atlantic Souvenir, for 1840 has the following from the pen of Mrs. Sigourney:

"SHOW US THE FATHER."*

Have you not seen Him when through parted snows
Wake the first kindlings of the vernal green?
When 'neath its modest veil the arbutus blows,
And the blue violet bursts its mossy screen?
When the wild rose, that asks no florist's care,
Unfoldeth its rich leaves—have ye not seen Him there?

Have you not seen Him, when the infant's eye,
Through its bright sapphire window, shows the mind?
When in the trembling of the tear or sigh,
Floats forth the essence, trembling and refined?
Saw ye not Him, the Author of our trust?
Who breathed the breath of life into a frame of dust?

Have ye not heard Him, when the tuneful rill
Casts off its icy chains, and leaps away?
In thunders echoing loud from hill to hill?
In songs of birds, at break of summer's day
Or in the Ocean's everlasting roar,
Battling the old grey rocks, that sternly guard his shore?

When in the stillness of the Sabbath morn,
The week's dread cares in tranquil slumbers rest,
When in the heart the holy thought is born,
And Heaven's high impulse warms the waiting breast,
Have ye not felt Him, when your voiceless prayer
Swelled out in tones of praise, announcing God was there?

Show us the Father! If ye fail to trace
His chariot, when the stars majestic roll,
His pencil, 'mid earth's loveliness and grace,
His presence, in the Sabbath of the soul,
How can you see Him, till the day of dread,
When to assembled worlds, the Book of Doom is read?

*See St. John, xiv. 8.

BED.

Our sweetest and most bitter hours are thine:
Thou by the weary frame art fondly pressed,
Which, grateful, blesses its most dearest shrine,
While curses thee, pale Sickness' sad unrest,
'Tis here the blushing bride receives her lord,
'Tis here the mother first beholds her child;
'Tis here death snaps affection's fondest cord
And changes sunny bliss to anguish wild;
'Tis here the good man, pondering on his fate,
Beholds that bed which this doth typefy,
Made by the sexton, his frail form's estate,
Where in long slumber, it shall dreamless lie;
And he exults, feeling in that dark sod
His robe alone will lie—the rest with God!

[From a late Austrian paper.]

LADY HESTER STANHOPE.

It was at Djuni, in Syria, that Lady Hester has died, after a long illness, at the age of sixty four. That reader must be indifferent who reverts not with interest to his recollections of a woman who has expired on the borders of the Desert, amidst the Druses and Turkomans, over whom that noble daughter of the infidels once exercised so strange & so marvellous a sway! The destiny of Lady Stanhope presents one of those features of which not another instance could perhaps be found in the annals of the East. Only imagine forty thousand Arabs suddenly assembled upon the ruins of Palmyra and there wandering, savage, and indomitable tribes surrounding, in silent astonishment and admiration, a foreign woman, and proclaiming her Sovereign of the Desert and Queen of Palmyra! Convey yourself in thought to the scene of this incredible triumph, and you will then conceive what woman that must have been who imposed silence on Mussulman fanaticism, and created for herself as it were by magic, a Sovereignty in the domains of Mohammed!

"Lady Hester Stanhope," says M. de Lamartine, in his admirable work, "was a niece of Mr. Pitt.—On the death of her uncle she left England, and visited various parts of Europe. Young, handsome, and rich, she was every where received with the attention and interest due to her rank, fortune, mind, and beauty; but she constantly refused to unite her fate to that of her worthiest admirers, and, after spending some years in the principal capitals of Europe, embarked with a numerous suite for Constantinople. The real cause of this expatriation has never been known, some have ascribed it to the death of a young English officer, who was killed at that period in Spain, and whom an eternal regret must render forever present in Lady Hester Stanhope's heart; others have imputed to her voluntary banishment to a mere love of adventure in a young person of an enterprising and courageous character. However this might be, she departed, spent some years at Constantinople, and then sailed for Syria in an English vessel, which carried also the larger part of her fortune, as well as jewelry, trinkets, and presents of all sorts, of very considerable value."

The vessel encountered a storm in the Gulf of Maori, on the road to Caramia; the ship was wrecked. Lady Hester Stanhope's property was all lost, & it was as much as she could do to save her own life. Nothing, however, could shake her resolution. She returned to England, gathered the remainder of her fortune, sailed again for Syria, and landed at Latakia the ancient Laodicea. She had at first thought of fixing her abode at Broussa, at the foot of Olympus; but Broussa is a commercial city, situate on the avenues to the Ottoman capital, and reconing not less than sixty thousand inhabitants, and Lady Hester Stanhope sought the independence and solitude of the Desert. She therefore selected the wilderness of Mount Lebanon, whose extreme ramifications lose themselves in the sands. Ruined Palmyra—Zenobia's ancient capital—suited her fancy. The noble exile took up her residence at Djouni, prepared for every vicissitude. 'Europe,' said she 'is a monotonous residence; its nations are unworthy of freedom, and endless revolutions are unworthy of freedom." She applied herself to the study of the Arabic language, and strove to obtain a thorough acquaintance with the character and manners of the Syrian people. One day, dressed in the costume of the Osmanlis, she set out for Jerusalem, Damascus, Aleppo, and the Desert. she advanced amidst a caravan loaded with wealth, tents, and presents for the Scheiks, and was soon surrounded by all the tribes: who knelt to her, and submitted to her supremacy.

It was not solely by her magnificence that Lady Hester had excited the admiration of the Arabs; her courage had been proved on more that one occasion, and she had always faced peril with a boldness and energy which the tribes well remembered. Lady Hester Stanhope knew, also, how to flatter the Mahommedan prejudices. She held no intercourse with christians and Jews; she spent whole days in the grotto of a santon, who explained the Koran to her; and never appeared in public without that mein of majestic and grave inspiration which was always unto Oriental nations the characteristic of prophets. With her, however, this conduct was not so much the result of design as of a decided proneness to every species of excitement and originality.

Lady Hester Stanhope's first abode was but a monastery. It was soon transformed into an Oriental palace, with pavilions, orange gardens, and myrtles over which spread the foliage of the cedar, such as it grows in the mountains of Lebanon. The traveller to whom Lady Hester opened this sanctuary would behold her clad in Oriental garments.—Her head was covered with a turban made of a red and white cassimere.—She wore a long tunic, with open loose sleeves: large Turkish trousers the folds of which hung over yellow morocco boots embroidered with silk. Her shoulders were covered with a sort of burnous, and a yataghan hung at her waist. Lady Hester Stanhope had a serious and imposing countenance; her noble and mild features had a majestic expression which the high stature and the dignity of her movements enhanced.

The day came when all this prestage, so expensively kept up, suddenly vanished. Lady Hester's fortune rapidly declined; her income yearly decreased: in short, the substantial resources which had at one time sustained the magic of her extraordinary domination were daily forsaking her. The Queen of Palmyra then fell back into abrank of mere mortals; and she who had signed the solute firmans enabling the traveller to visit in security the regions of Palmyra—she whose authority the Sublime Porte had tacitly acknowledged—soon saw her people disown her omnipotency; she was left the title of Queen, but it was but an empty name, a mere recollection and again the monastery's silence ruled over the solitude of Djouni. A Queen, stripped of her glory of a day, Lady Hester Stanhope has expired, the sport of fate, at the moment the East is convulsed. She has expired in obscurity and loneliness, without even mingling her name with the great events of which it is now the theatre.

150 Dollars REWARD.

Ranaway from the subscriber on Wednesday night, the 23d inst. while at Easton, a mulatto boy named about 18 years of age and five feet, six inches high.

Joe Thomas,

He is rather stout made with a mouth somewhat prominent and particularly so when displeased.—He is well supplied with clothing, having among his other clothes two broad cloth coats, one much worn, with a velvet collar, and the other of some fancy color with bright buttons quite new and a fur hat; but it has not yet been ascertained whether he has taken any other clothes than those worn by him, when he left home, which consisted of a round jacket and trousers with a drab overcoat, and a hair cap. He can both read and write tolerably well, and having a brother now residing in Baltimore, it is probable that he will make his way to that place. His mother's name is SOPHY.

I will give the above reward for his apprehension if taken out of the State, or $100, if taken within the state and out of the county, and $50 if taken in Talbot county, in each case to be secured in the Jail at Easton.

SHINN & SELLERS'

CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS AGAIN TRIUMPHANT OVER DISEASE—SPASMODIC ASTHMA CURED BY THEIR USE!!

Messrs. SHINN & SELLERS.—You are aware that for the last six months I have been in the use of your Pills, though you may not know the complaint for which I have used them.

Some fifteen years ago, being sorely troubled with spasmodic asthma, I was relieved from it by lobelia Last summer the complaint returned upon me with increased violence, from which I received not the least relief by the use of lobelia.

A friend persuaded me to make trial of your Pills, though, to be candid, I had not much faith in them, for the reason that, from what I could discover, you had not recommended them in asthma. I was however, relieved by them. Still I had a relapse of the complaint. Again I had recourse to the Pills—and now, after a patient and persevering use of them, I feel that I am cured of 'spasmodic asthma.'

Last summer my eldest son, being at Louisville, Ky., was violently seized with the prevailing sickness, congestive fever, Having recovered from it so far to return home: here however he had a violent relapse of the fever. After recovering from it, he began to feel a pain in the region of the liver, which increasing daily seemed to demand pr mpt attention. Suffice it to say, he was cured by the use of your Pills.

As you have requested of me a 'statement of facts' with respect to the benefit I and my son have received from your Pills, I have given it with a scrupulous regard to accuracy.

Your's, with esteem,
N RUGGLES SMITH.

A FARM
For Sale.

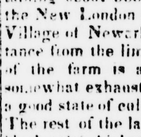

Will be sold at private sale, a farm containing about 300 acres of land, situated on the New London road, two miles above the Village of Newark, and about the same distance from the lime quarries. About one half of the farm is arable land, which though somewhat exhausted, could easily be put into a good state of cultivation, being of a clay soil. The rest of the land is finely timbered with black oak hickory, poplar, &c., except about 40 acres of low ground, which, at a small expense, could be made good meadow land. The farm is well watered, the Christiana Creek running through it, and besides, there is a spring of excellent water in every field. The timber on the farm, if sold, would be more than sufficient pay to the purchase money. Also, a SMALL FARM, containing 150 acres, in Chester County, Pa., known as the Price property. If they are not sold at private sale by the 1st day of November next, they will on that day, be exposed to public sale at the house of Richard Jones, Innkeeper, in the Village of Newark.

For further particulars and terms apply to HENRY WHITELY, in Wilmington, or the subscriber in Newark.
