quently never cared for them, and never labored for their happiness and comfort.

Was it thus with General Harrison?—the tongue which would give utterance to such a foul slander, ought forever to be palsied. The Hero of Tippecanoe acquired the confidence of his countrymen by days of exhausting labor—by nights of wasting watchfulness, spent in the service of his country, on the tented field, by receiving scars of heroism again and again upon his heroic person: by fattening the soil of his country with his blood; by remaining poor in despite of all the golden opportunities of building up a princely estate which were passing in profusion around him whilst in the service of his country; by establishing that humane system of selling the public lands by which the poor but honest farmer may acquire a freehold estate at the small expense of one hundred dollars; by causing the law to be passed by which the old soldiers of the Revolution of every grade of fortune have obtained compensation for the services they rendered in working out our deliverance from British oppression; by advocating the cause of the farmer and of the poor man whenever an occasion presented itself; by supporting every humane and benificent measure which passed in review before him whilst in the Congress of the United States; and by relieving distress and misfortune wherever it crossed his path. These things are true as testimonies of holy writ. Let them not be forgotten.—Raleigh Star,

SENATE.

In the Senate, there was some debate on the resolution prohibiting the issue of small notes. On motion of Mr. Donoho, the resolution was ordered to lie on the table.

On motion of Mr. Ely, the bill for the payment of the State Witnesses of Baltimore County Court, was taken up for consideration and passed with an amendment.

Mr. Mason submitted an order, requiring the Committee on Internal Improvements to inform the House, whether or not the 5th section of the act of 1835 has been complied with by the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road, and if not, has not said Company forfeited one million of dollars to Washington County.

This order excited considerable debate, in which Mr. Bowie, of Prince George's, Mr. Mason and Mr. Berry participated.

Mr. Constable of Kent, moved that the order lie on the table: which motion was carried by a vote of 40 to 19.

The report of the committee appointed to examine into the affairs of the Eastern Shore Rail Road was then taken up. After another debate, the question was put on the adoption of the report of the majority, and it was concurred in by a vote of 37 to 23. The report of the majority does not think that the resolution of last session has been complied with.

Mr. Spence of Worcester, offered some resolutions, relative, I believe, to the Eastern Shore Railroad. The House then adjourned.

The Senate has been in Executive session.

The House of Delegates has fixed upon Thursday next to proceed to the election of a Treasurer for the Eastern Shore.

The Senate yesterday passed seven divorce bills.

CAROLINE ELECTION.

ALL SAFE.—The Whigs of Caroline have reason to congratulate themselves upon the party triumph of Tuesday last, and we chronicle the result with no ordinary degree of satisfaction, as that county is now placed for many a day to come beyond the mark of the spoilesmen. It will be for years, if ever, before the toesin need be again sounded against the spread of principles essentially Anti American in their tendency.—The people have risen in their might and rebuked a party, that sought to elevate to a post of high responsibility one of nineteen men, who thought it no presumption to grasp at the whole political power of Maryland,—tossing her sovereignty in their mad revel, like a ball, from one to the other. The insult has taken deep root in the minds of the people, and a life-time of honest repentence on the part of the actors can scarcely atone for it.

The accounts from our sister county up to the very day of the election were so unfavorable as to create great anxiety here about the result; but if our friends were a little frightened, the alarm did them no injury. Again do we congratulate the Whigs of Caroline. Their opponents turned every stone—rode every hobby and struggled with all the energy of a desperate cause, but were baffled. The election in October was still fresh in the recollection of all, and even the spoilsmen allow that the sentiment of Fisher Ames so meanly appropriated to himself by Martin Van Buren, is a just and noble one. The sober second thought of the people shall be law—The following is the result.

Districts.	J Turner, (W.)	R. T. Keene, (L. F.)
Upper,	202	118
Middle,	201	217
Lower,	199	220
	602	555

Whig majority 37.

Let every Whig in the county lay aside for convenient reference the proofs, we mean from time to time to offer of General Harrison's efficiency in the legislative councils of his country; of his high claims to rank among the distinguished orators of the land. We invite attention to his noble eulogy upon Kosciusko, in another column. His Letter to Bolivar breathing in every sentence the aspirations of a high souled Republican, will be published in an early number, and his literary essays on various subjects will not prove uninteresting to the people, who have called him from his plough to restore to us the principles and practice of the times of our revolutionary fathers.

The 15th of January next, or ten days after the banks in Philadelphia or Virginia find it possible to do the same, is fixed by the substitute of the Senate to the House Bank Bill, as the period for resumption in Maryland.

We understand from a passenger in the Steam boat last night, that on Thursday last the Legislature appointed Pere Robinson, Esq. of this town, Treasurer of the Eastern Shore, vice Wm. K. Lambdin, removed.

ELECTORS OF PRESIDENT.—It will be seen by the following proceedings of the Whig members of the Legislature, that John Leeds Kerr, Esq. of this county and David Hoffman, Esq. of Baltimore City, have been selected for the State at large, as candidates for electors of President and Vice President of the United States.—The selection is good and will be warmly supported by the Whigs of the State.

HARRISON MEETING AT THE CAPITOL OF MARYLAND.

At a meeting of the Whig members of the Legislature of Maryland, convened at the Senate Chamber, in Annapolis, on Friday, 28th February, 1840, the Hon Richard Thomas, of St. Mary's county was called to the chair, and the Hon. Thomas A. Spence of Worcester county was appointed secretary—whereupon the following proceedings were had:

On motion of Mr. Ricaud, of Kent county, the meeting proceeded to the nomination of Electors of President and Vice President for the State at large: whereupon DAVID HOFFMAN, of Baltimore city, and JOHN LEEDS KERR, of Talbot county, were unanimously nominated.

On motion of Mr. Stewart, of Baltimore city; the following resolution was read and adopted:

Resolved, In the opinion of this Convention, that the convenience of the Whig voters of the several Congressional Districts in this State, will be best consulted, by leaving the choice of an Elector for each district, to be made by a Convention of Delegates to be appointed for that purpose in each district—and that this Convention, does therefore, recommend that such Convention be held in each of said districts, on or before the 1st day of June next.

On motion of Mr Gather, of Montgomery county, the following resolutions were read and adopted:

Resolved, By the Whig members of the General Assembly of Maryland, that the nominations made by the Harrisburg Convention of candidates for President and Vice President, meet with their hearty concurrence and approbation.

Resolved, That we confidently anticipate by their election, and the adoption of the principles for which the Whig party contend—a restoration of the currency to the state of uniformity and soundness in which the late administration found it, an efficient and faithful execution of the laws: a re-establishment of the constitutional powers of the Representatives of the people, and the people through them, exercising that check on Executive prerogative and power, which the framers of the Constitution intended.

Resolved, That the present administration of the General Government has shewn itself, both imbecile and selfish, regardless of its imperative duties & high responsibilities, and careful only in the preservation of itself and its supporters in the possession and enjoyment of the offices of the Government and their emoluments.

Resolved, That in WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, we recognise one, possessing that disinterestedness and devotion to his country so characteristic of our revolutionary ancestors, and that in the exercise of authority and power more absolute and undefined than was before confided by his country to an American officer, we see justice and humanity, unite the most important in a civilian—firmness, energy and bravery, those most needful in a military man—and wisdom that most indispensable in both, ever characterizing his course of action.

Resolved, That the ability and patriotism which have ever distinguished JOHN TYLER of Virginia in the Councils of his country, eminently entitle him to the support and confidence of the Whig party.

On motion of Mr. Stewart, of Baltimore city, the following resolutions were read and adopted:

Resolved by the Whig Members of the General Assembly, That they avail themselves of the present occasion to avow before the world their unabated affection for the character of Henry Clay, of Kentucky—their undiminished confidence in his virtue and patriotism and their cherished pride to claim as a fellow citizen, one whom grateful History shall record as the CHAMPION OF CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTY.

Resolved, That in his early and cordial adoption of the "Harrisburg nominations" they realize another impressive instance of his devotion to his country, and a bright augury of the success of the party whose only aim it is to restore to the people the blessings of their own government.

On motion of Mr. Ricaud, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the chairman of this meeting be requested to address letters to John Leeds Kerr and David Hoffman, Esquires, informing them of their nomination as Electors for President and Vice President of the United States for the State at large.

On motion of Mr. Potts, of Frederick county,

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the chairman and secretary, and published in all the Whig papers of this State, and in the National Intelligencer and Madisonian.

On motion of Mr. Frazier, of Dorchester county, the following resolution was read and adopted.*

Resolved, That the issue is now fairly made between the hard money office holders of the Government and the hard cider party of the people, and that it will be very hard if these hard times are not ended before another hard winter.

RICHARD THOMAS, Chairman.
T. A. Spence, Secretary.

*In offering this resolution, Capt. Frazier observed, that before the meeting adjourned, he desired to express as a PLAIN man, in his OWN PLAIN way, his PLAIN views of the political contest which was now going on in the country—that he agreed with all his heart and soul in every dot, comma, letter, and word of the resolutions which had been offered by his friends from Baltimore and Montgomery; but he had a resolution in his hand which, he thought, contained the true, practical, common sense doctrine of himself and his constituents—that he was a seafaring man and had been accustomed to note the signs of wind and weather—that he thought every thing looked very favorable for a good voyage for the old ship Constitution. But the only thing that puzzled him was that, there was a fair wind blowing from every point of the compass, and it seemed to be freshening every moment—that the hands must keep a bright look out: and he hoped that with a long pull, a strong pull and a pull altogether, they would bring the good old ship to safe harbor.

NEW YORK AGAINST THE SUBTREASURY.—A series of anti-sub-treasury resolutions have passed both branches of the New York Legislature. They passed in the Senate by a majority of seven votes and in the house by a majority of EIGHTY FIVE, only seven members voting against them. The favorite measure of the Administration is in bad odor in N. York.

THE GREAT DINNER AT RICHMOND.—The Richmond Whig of Wednesday says: "The dinner went of in the finest style possible. There were between a thousand and fifteen hundred subscribers from Virginia. Mr. Clay delivered a most brilliant and captivating address. For an hour and a half, the fall of a pin might be heard throughout the spacious Hall, except when the bursts of rapturous applause, which were frequent and long continued, drowned every thing. It was all in all the gratest dinner and the greatest speech ever had or heard within the limits of the Corporation of Richmond. Besides Mr. Clay—Mr. Wise, Mr. Botts, Mr. Leigh, Mr. McFarland, Mr. Wyndham Roberston, Mr. Lyons, Mr. Patton and Mr. W. B. Archer, addressed the company in eloquent strains. All who were present, will remember it as an epoch in their lives and in speaking to their children of great national events, say they happened before or after the CLAY DINNER."

For the Easton Gazette.

I am extremely sorry to suppose, Mr. Editor, that the little matter of humor I gave you a week or two since on "the names of our village," has been so unfortunate as to give offence to any one. It is certainly a possibility of which I did not dream at the moment of writing, or you may rely upon it, it should have been suppressed forever. If there be one feeling which I have cultivated more than another, it is to avoid inflicting pain, unprovoked: and so exquisite has that feeling become, that I would not now touch a reptile in my path to injure it, unless it were to escape its venom.

Notwithstanding this deeply rooted sentiment, it appears, by a communication made to your paper on Saturday last under the signature of "A Villager," that some worthy wight has taken my remarks in dudgeon, and thereupon essays, with cudgel in hand, to challenge me to combat. Now, sir, I consider myself in duty bound, before, entering the lists with so gallant a cavalier to acknowledge, at once, that the offence I have given him was in no wise apprehended; and rather than have excited his wrath, I would have contented myself, in obscurity, with the situation which he graphically describes as that of an "honest man making an honest livelihood by means of honest implements of honest husbandry;" and thus have compromitted all hope of "soaring aloft to the station of a Webster, a Clay, or a Calhoun." The piece I wrote, it is true, was not so learned, or so profound, as to suit a taste so cultivated as "A Villager's" evidently is, but as it cost me a small effort and no one else any, I am abundantly rewarded for my pains, if it has caused a solitary smile. As a philosopher, I am of the school of Democritus, "believing it better to laugh at the follies and vanity of mankind, than to distract one's self with care and anxiety." Amid the wide spread desolation which surrounds us, so eloquently described by Mr. Clay in his late speech on the sub-treasury scheme, and of which your paper is always prompt to inform us, I can find an abundance of material precisely to the relish of my favourite sage. Whilst others lament the delusion that impels some, bewildered in the darkness that envelops the many, and curse the knavery that urges a few to the destruction of all, I will sit down and laugh at any thing that may present itself, and thank myself happy if I can induce those about me laugh with me. To refresh this cherished disposition, "A Villager" himself has furnished no small quantity of ailment. His long and stately paragraphs, which like railroad cars, travel from one end to the other of their journey, without a pause long enough to give the travellers breath, his grave and melancholy reflections, on "the vanity of the human heart," accompanied with a face as solemn, portentous and intellectual as that of a Brazilian monkey, his awful throes to produce something—mons laboret—and oh! the result, exerted my visibles to a no small degree; and I resolved in good faith to handle him as gently as the queen-regnant of a hen-coop would a young chicken, with the hope of hearing him crow again.

In reply to one of A Villager's implied charges, I must assert, I do not "soar" to the airy position in which he places the distinguished statesmen whose names he mentions. The ability to "soar aloft" is one which they may enjoy, for aught I know to the contrary, in common with buzzards and eagles: but for my own part I pretend to have nothing more than the locomotive machinery of a wingless biped, and am fain to content myself with such matters as Earth affords to creatures of my class, without a flight into regions of air. Could I "soar aloft" I might possibly personate a bird of carrion, and seek masses of, if not physical, at least moral rottenness, to devour; and then as the most feeble and silly animals are always the victims of such birds, A Villager himself might stand in some danger of an assault from my beak and talons.

A Villager speaks of Phrenology, sir, first as having caused me to "soar aloft" in my own imagination; and secondly, as not having "operated" on what he is pleased to call "a mind of no ordinary powers." To say nothing of the contradiction herein involved plainly evincing the clearness of A Villager's conceptions, I will proceed to say that, I have never yet seen a professed Phrenologist nor do I wish it inasmuch as I lack faith in the details of the doctrine. Of the correctness of the outlines, however, I have less doubt, believing that the general configuration of the head indicates the amount of the intellect and that what is called the "facial angle" varies as that amount is greater or less. Now with Europeans of ordinary capacity it is a right angle, 90°, and diminishes as less intellect is manifested in individual species. What A Villager can boast I do not know, not having the felicity of a personal acquaintance, but judging from such signs as are now before me, I should guess his "facial" was just 45° being precisely the magnitude of that of Peter Simple; the Maltese Ass.

I do not wish to criticise, sir. The efforts of some minds are beyond the reach of criticism, as the putrid carcas of an ox is beyond the culinary skill of a French gourmond. But I would advise your correspondent to seek the company of our village Postmaster. Perhaps, besides the rules he enforces "to drink your grog decently and to pay for it promptly," he could give him some idea of the relation between the nominative case and the verb; or that while A Villager is speaking "of subjects that is originated," of "your columns has since proved the fact," and of "such reflections was brought to my mind," the P. M. could dilate on the merits of the member of the Indiana legislature, as an orator, who rose with all the dignity of a statesman, to announce the death of the venerable pioneer of the West and said "that are the fact, Mr. Speaker, Daniel Boon are dead."

I am done with "A Villager" sir; but with you I must have one word in sober seriousness. It was my design to write for your paper with the view to amuse myself and your readers—not to offend them. I place no value upon my little contributions, but trust implicitly to your judgment whether they be worth publication or not. You have not only a right, but you are bound, to reject them if they are likely to be attended with the slightest evil, and you are likewise bound to shield me from insult after you have published. I do not care a whit for such a half idiotic outburst as that of "A Villager," except that it appears through the same medium I had selected through which to give the results of my lucubrations to the public. I meet him this time, but hereafter I must decline the honor of entering a cowpen to battle it with calves
