POETRY.

NATURE.
A PRIZE POEM.

Written for the Philad. Saturday Chronicle.
BY ROBERT MORRIS, ESQ.

"Nature,
That formed this world, so beautiful, that spread
Earth's lap with plenty, and life's smallest chord
Strung to unchanging unison, that gave
The happy birds their dwelling in the grove,
That yielded to the wanderers of the deep,
The lonely silence of th' unfathomed main,
And filled the meanest worm that crawls in dust,
With spirit, thought, and love,"
P. B. SHELLEY.

Heaven's earliest born and still unsullied child
Whose smile is morning and whose frown is night,
Around whose brow Earth's earliest roses smiled—
THINE was ths glow of beauty—THINE the light
That beamed o'er Paradise, when Woman there,
Fresh from her Maker's hand—a faultless thing—
With dove-like eyes, and shadowy golden hair,
From grovelling beast, or bird on tireless wing,
Won homage as she passed. THINE, too the glow
That flush'd her cheek, or beamed from her white brow.

Beauty is thine in all her changing dyes—
Colour, and light, and shade, and sound and song,
Morn's purple hues, and Evening's golden skies—
The whispering summer breeze—the whirlwind strong.
Night with her starry strain, a shining band—
Each wandering meteor of yon trackless deep—
Italia's greenest spot—Zahara's sand—
The thunder's roll—the lightning's living leap—
The lark's light note—the murmur of the bee—
All speak of Heaven, of Order and of Thee.

The Seasons are thy handmaids, and the flowers
Fair emblems of thy beauty—bending grain
Made golden by the sunshine's magic power—
The howling tempest—and the gentle rain
Of Summer's softer mood—blossom and fruit—
The bending willow and the creeping vine—
The rattling hail-storm, and the snow-flake mute.
The time-worn oak, the cedar and the pine—
Niagara's roaring Fall—the noiseless rill—
Were Nature's at the dawn—are Nature's still!

Mighty or gentle as may suit thy mood—
The whirlwind and the earthquake tell by power—
Thy hand scoop'd out old Ocean—Ætna pild'd—
Bent the first rainbow—painted the first flower!
But loveliest is thy face in Spring's glad hour—
The meadows green—the waters leaping free—
The earth yet wet with mornings dewy shower;
Thy sunlight beaming o'er the distant sea—
When new-born winds their freshness first disclose,
And wanton with the violet and the rose.

Thy temples are upon the lofty steeps
Of Andes and the Appenines—and where
The coral insect toils beneath the deep,
Or the lone Arab pours his soul in prayer,
The meanest intellect—the mightiest mind—
Master and slave alike admit thy power—
Monarch and nation—hero, prince, and hind,
Must yield at Nature's tributary hour—
Before Thee forests tremble, mountains nod—
How feeble Art to Thee—'a worm, a god.'

Oh, Nature! is it strange the forest child,
The tawny tenant of the boundless West—
With none to lead his mind beyond, the wild,
Or point his thoughts to regions of the blest;
Should deem Thy glories god-like and fall down
A savage worshipper? Should see in Thee
The spirit of the leaping cateract—
The powers of Life, and Death, and Destiny;
Should, as the light'ning flashes through the sky,
Believe it fire from some Immortal eye?

No—rather marvel that the letter'd fool—
The worm whom Heaven has given the power of thought,
Seeing thy glories, and the magic rule
That governs all thy works—should set at naught
The lesson that they teach—should mock the Power
That call'd from chaos all that mingles here,
The loftiest mountain and the lowest flower—
Earth, Air and Ocean—each celestial sphere—
Should look from sea to sky—from dust to man—
And see no God in all the wondrous plan!

The value of cattle imported into Liverpool from Ireland in the first eleven months of last year amounted to £2,900,000; and the value of the insignificant article of feathers imported into England from that country is estimated to amount annually to £500,000.

THE RIGHTS OF WOMAN.—A good looking young person, dressed in a bottle green frock coat and light pantaloons, passing under the name of John Mackey, apeared at one of the polls of the Fourteenth ward, on the day of election, claiming the right to deposite a vote.—This was resisted, and it afterwards turned out that the elector was a woman, who had taken that method of ascerting her right to a participation in public affairs. The Express is of opinion that she was one of 'the largest liberty people.'—N. Y. Post.
