The American Sentinel is about to be improved in several of its departments. Additional editorial aid has been secured and the paper promises to assume and maintain a higher position among the influential Journals of the day. As an act of common justice, it is but right for us to say, that the course of the Sentinel for years past has been courteous, manly and dignified, to a degree that has rendered it quite conspicuous among the presses of the party to which it is connected. Doubtless it has during the recent campaign experienced some proscription at the hands of ultra politicians—men who would bind the independent journals of the country to their own personal views and political purposes, regardless of the after effect upon character and veracity. But surely in a community like ours, the intelligent, the patriotic and the just, far outnumber the reckless partisans to whom we have just referred, while we indulge a hope that any proscription for opinions sake—any 'stop my paper" indications from small and prejudiced minds, are far more than counterbalanced by the voluntary acts of those who appreciate honesty and admire independence.—The Conservatives of Philadelphia should in an especial manner stand by and sustain the Sentinel.—[Phil. A NEW PERIODICAL.—Edmund Ruffin, Esq. of Petersburg, Va. proposes to issue a literary periodical, to be entitled "The Southern Magazine and Monthly Review." In one department of the Magazine, Mr. Ruffin designs following the plan of the Quarterly Reviews of Great Britain. The work will have a political tendency in favor of State Rights principles.

REPORT ## OF THE UNION DORCAS SOCIETY.

The period (required by our Constitution) for presenting the Annual Report of the "Union Dorcas Society" to its members, has again rolled round.

The board of Officers in reviewing their transactions during their sixth year, find cause to lift the voice of praise to HIM, who holdeth the hearts of all in his hand, that they have been so liberally sustained in their operations. The object of our association is too well understood, to require an explanation. The same motives which induced us to unite our efforts to alleviate the sufferings of the poor, continue to operate in full force; the same gracious promise and reward still stand fast, "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Subjects of congratulation also arise, our board of managers is unbroken, death not having been permitted to enter our little band; & never, since the formation of the Society has there existed a greater spirit of love and union, or a more fixed and cheerful determination to proceed in our labour of love.

The proceedings of this Society from year to year, must necessarily be marked by a sameness of character. The duties are sometimes diversified, when sickness occurs, or an unusually grateful and interesting pensioner is added to our list. During the past year an aged and helpless female solicited assistance, and surely we can testify, that often while administering to her few bodily wants, we have gained a lesson in humility and contentment. She is now waiting her dismission from the pains and infirmities of advanced life; and we believe the exchange will be, to one of those bright and happy mansions prepared by the blessed Redeemer, for those who love him.

The duties of the year commenced in November, the weather being uncommonly cold, the committee visited and relieved eighteen persons.

In December the duties became more arduous and assistance was extended to forty persons.

In January, our indefatigable Committee, encountered the storm and the pinching cold, to convey comfort and relief to fifty or more persons.

In February, the desolate houses of the poor, were rendered more so, by the continued snow, but our "Sisters of Charity" overcame every obstacle, and carried assistance to forty individuals.

In March, the duties were almost as severe, and thirty persons were relieved. In April, sixteen. May, twelve. June twelve. July, eight. August, seven.—September, eight—and October, nine.

|---|---|
| In November last, there was a balance in the Treasury of | $23 42 |
| The Treasurer acknowledges since, the receipt from annual subscribers of | 20 40 |

| | 216 64 |
| She has paid out to the different Committies, | 137 29 |
| Leaving a balance of | 79 35 |

There yet remains unpaid from Subscribers and Donors $15.

Upon comparing our Treasurer's statement, with that of preceding years, we find a larger amount of funds, was at our disposal, than ever before received. We would not omit to mention, and that too with heartfelt thanks, that wood to the | amount of | $24 00 |

| Merchandise to the amt. of | 40 25 |
| Shoes to the amount of | 5 00 |

and a number of bushels of Meal, were generously given for the use of the Society. Thus we have submitted to our members and friends an exact account of our receipts and expenditures.

To the sincere Christian it must ever be an object of the highest interest, to follow the example of that dear Saviour whose benevolence led him to "go about doing good." His power equalled his inclination to relieve the distresses and afflictions of humanity, he could feed the multitude, could heal the sick, could raise the dead, by a word, or a touch; not so with us—we must first receive into our hearts, (which are hard and selfish by nature) the hallowed influences of his own Spirit, to implant the disposition, to 'feel for others woes"—and then receive assistance from those, upon whom God has bestowed much of this world's goods, before we can extend relief.

Hitherto we have been nobly sustained and encouraged by a generous public and we do not fear, that our Society will now languish and become disheartened, as the approaching cold and piercing Winter advances, for the want of the means of usefulness Those kind hearts, which a merciful providence has heretofore inclined to feel for the accumulated privations of the poor (who are never to cease out of the land) will still throb with charitable emotions, and largely aid us, in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and carrying warmth and comfort into their cheerless abodes. "Charge them that are rich in this world that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate: laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on ETERNAL LIFE."

EASTON ACADEMY.

The subscriber having been elected Principal of this Institution, commenced the duties of his office on Monday the 12th October. An official notice of his appointment and of the time when the School was to reopen having appeared over the name of the President of the Board of Trustees, there seemed no immediate necessity for an advertisement by the subscriber. This has therefore been deferred to the present time, in consequence of the urgency of engagements attending the removal of his family and their settlement in his new habitation. He now begs leave to offer his services to such of the inhabitants of Easton and the surrounding country as have sons or wards for whom they desire an opportunity of procuring a sound and liberal education. His long experience as an instructor and his uniform success, of both which he is prepared to exhibit abundant evidence, unite to inspire a confident belief that in his present situation he will also be enabled to afford, if not universal, at least general satisfaction. At the same time he would respectfully remind parents that the result of the teacher's efforts must ever depend very much on the measure of their co-operation.

The pupils are under the care or supervision of their teacher so small a portion of their time that unless his exertions are constantly aided by corresponding efforts on the part of parents, there is little reason to anticipate very happy results. The course of instruction in the classical department, of which the subscriber has special charge will embrace the classics, mathematics, and the other branches of learning, which with the former serve to constitute a sound and thorough education. With regard to the classics, though unacquainted with the peculiar ideas of individuals in this section of the Union, the subscriber is aware that in many other parts of the country a very general apathy prevails: this indifference, however, he cannot but believe, is confined to those who are themselves destitute of classical knowledge or to those, (including many, who in early life, received instruction in the elements of classical literature,) who have not reflected on the immense advantages that result, not indeed from the acquisition of the ability to read and translate an ancient language, but from the course of mental training incident to the acquirement of this knowledge, from the exercise and cultivation of those intellectual faculties, which are in constant requisition during the progress of a thorough and systematic course of study in the ancient languages. It is with the faculties of the mind, as with the muscles of the body; they both require, and in an equal degree, active and frequent exercise to affect their developement and promote their strength and vigour. Whatever system of education then, or course of instruction is best adapted to call into action the various faculties of the youthful mind and in the highest degree to accomplish not only their developement, but their growth in strength and vigour, must commend itself to the favour of every reflecting parent. That a thorough course of classical instruction is eminently adapted to the attainment of these ends, might, with great ease, be most clearly demonstrated but the advertisement being already long, the farther consideration of this particular subject will be deferred to some future occasion. Let it not be supposed from any of the preceding remarks that undue, much less exclusive, attention will be devoted to the classics; the mathematics will, in all cases, receive that attention which is due to their paramount importance, nor will any of the English branches be neglected. Elocution, and composition in the English language will be particularly attended to. The rate of tuition and the general regulations remain as under former teachers.

The French language will be taught to those who desire it, during an hour that will not interfere with the other recitations, at an extra charge of $5 per quarter to pupils of the school and of $7 per qr. to others.
