Senator pressed this same measure upon the consideration of the Senate when I plead with him not to press it—when I earnestly entreated him to wait but for one day. Yes, and when the Senator from Maryland plead for a single night's delay, he declined it, and when his colleague was absent he would not wait, even one day, his return.

I do not said Mr. Clay, remember these things for evil or in judgment, and I shall certainly submit cheerfully to any proper delay of acuon which that Senator notwithstanding the past, may now ask. The Senator says in spite of the wonderful condemnation of his party, that Gen. Harrison has,—that we have no principles,—that we are a party without principle. Now let me ask the Senator, what kind of a party that must be which has been beaten so signally by a party without principles,—by a party whose banner was, as he says, coon skins or log cabins? Must not such a beaten party have had principles worse than none to have been so signally rebuked?

The Senator, continued Mr. Clay, alluded to prior elections, and thinks that in Congress and elsewhere, when this Sub-Treasury Bill was a question at issue, his party have triumphed. I hope the honorable Senator will not make it necessary for me to review the past, to bring to his remembrance, for example, the New Jersey outrage, an outrage conducted in a manner derogatory to deliberative assemblies, and disgraceful to the epoch in which it took place.

The Chair said the alluston to New Jersey was not in order.

Who can deny, continued Mr. Clay, that the elections of November gave a signal rebuke to this Administration.—The question may have been doubtful before, but all doubts were dissipated in November. The people had put all doubts to rest.

The Senator from New York, added Mr. Clay again, says that the party coming into power is a party without principles. Does'nt he know that we are opposed to the Sub-Treasury Bill—that we are in favor of Economy and Retrenchment—that we are friends of a good Government—of a sate mode of keeping the public money—of a sound currency—that we are against Executive usurpation. The party now in power know well enough what are the principles of the party to be in power.—They know well enough that when the Sub-Treasury Bill is repealed some other measure will be proposed—and sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

THRILLING ACCOUNT AND NARROW ESCAPE.

The National Intelligencer of Tuesday contains the following paragraph:

"The members of Congress who arrived yesterday from the South bring information of one of the most extraordinary accidents and hairbreadth escapes that we ever heard of, which occurred to Gen. WADDY THOMPSON, the distinguished, Representative in Congress from South Carolina. The scene of it was on the rail road, a few miles south of Petersburg, in Virginia. Gen. Thompson with several other Members, weary of the tedious progress of the train of steam-cars which made their way with great difficulty through the snow, had got out of the cars and walked ahead, along the track. The motion of the cars becoming freer, they came down upon him more rapidly than he expected, and, the engineer not being able to check them, they struck Gen. Thompson, knocked him down, and the whole train, engine, cars, and all PASSED OVER HIM! Every one will suppose, of course, on reading this, that the accident was fatal in its consequences. On the contrary, we are happy to say that, if bodily injured at all it was not to such an extent as to leave any alarm as to the consequences on the minds of his friends, one or two of whom staid behind with him at Petersburg."

From the N. Y. Courier, December 15.

ATROCIOUS MURDER.

HORRIBLE.—The disappearance of Mr. Suydam, the President of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of New Brunswick, is at last accounted for, and we are sorry to add, that it is now certain he has been most barbarously murdered. Some suspicious circumstances led to the apprehension of a House Carpenter named Peter Robinson.

These circumstances were, that he has recently had in his possession a gold watch & been unusually flush of money, and a remark he made when purchasing lumber to floor a cellar—that he had paid off a mortgage Mr. Suydam held on his property, but did not dare take it to the Clerk's Office to be cancelled for fear he should be suspected of being the murderer of "Mr. Suydam."

On his arrest yesterday, his replies to the questions put to him were confused and incoherent, and in consequence the Mayor determined his house should be searched. During the search one of the officers observed that they ought to take up the floor of the cellar, which had been laid down in the night, since the disappearance of Mr. Suydam.

Robinson endeavored to dissuade them from it, saying that if they did, the house would fall down. The officers, however persisted, and there found buried three feet under the earth the corpse of Mr. Suydam, the head bearing evident indications of violence, which had caused his death. An inquest was sitting on the body at 7 o'clock last night.

The conviction was general in New Brunswick—indeed, we hardly see how it could be otherwise—that Robinson was the murderer. The mortgage deed was found in his possession, with the signature torn off. We need scarce add that the highest excitement in consequence prevailed in the quiet town of New Brunswick.
