me to give my vote against it; but I have not been able to bring myself to believe that a doubtful opinion of the chief Magistrate ought to outweigh the solemnly pronounced will of the Representatives of the people and the States.

"One of the prominent features of the Bill is that which purports to be mandatory on the States to form districts for the choice of Representatives to Congress in single districts. That Congress has power by law to altar State regulations respecting the manner of holding elections for representatives is clear; but its power to command the States to make new regulations, or altar their existing regulations, is the question upon which I have felt many and strong doubts. I have yielded those doubts, however, to the opinion of the Legislature, giving effect to their enactment as far as depends upon my approbation, and leaving questions what may arise hereafter, if unhappily and such should arise, to be settled by full consideration of the several provisions of the constitution and the laws, and the authority of each House to judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members.

Similar considerations have operated with me in regard to the representation of fractions above a moiety of the representative number and where said moiety exceeds thirty thousand; a question on which a deversity of opinion has existed from the foundation of the Government. The provision recommends itself from its near approximation to equality than would be found in the application of a common and simple division to the entire population of each State, and corrects, in a great degree, those inequalities which are destined at the return of each succeeding census, so greatly to augment.

"In approving the Bill, I flatter myself that a disposition will be perceived on my part, to concede to the opinions of Congress in a matter which may conduce to the good of the country, and the stability of its institutions, upon which my opinion is not clear and decided. But it seemed to me due to the respectability of opinion against the constitutionality of the Bill, as well as to the real difficulties of the subject, which no one feels more sensibly than I do, that the reasons which have determined me should be left on record. JOHN TYLER.

WASHINGTON, June 25th, 1842.

THE NEGOTIATION WITH ENGLAND.

We copy the following from the New York American of Tuesday evening.—The Washington papers are silent on the subject, and our correspondent does not allude to the matter. It is probable that the next accounts from Washington may decide how far the report is authentic:

From the N. Y. American of Tuesday.

TREATY WITH GREAT BRITAIN CONCLUDED!—A highly important report, and which we have reason to think well founded, reached the city this morning from Washington. It is substantially, that Mr. Webster and Lord Ashburton had finally agreed upon all the points in discussion between the two countries, and that a treaty was drawn up and ready for signature, and would be signed yesterday, being the 4th day of July.

The North Eastern Boundry is settled by seeding to Great Britain the territory north of the St. John's, and by Great Britain ceding to the United States the strip between our present Eastern boundary and the St. John s river, including the city of Fredericton, now the seat of Government of the British province of New Brunswick—and of course the navigation of the river to the sea.

To this arrangement New Brunswick was very averse, but higher considerations have prevailed, and a settlement that must be deemed by the United States honorable and satisfactory in a high degree has been effected.

As to the details or other points we are without information.

From the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.

THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN.—We have good reason to believe that a treaty adjusting all points in dispute between this country and Great Britain has been concluded between the Secretary of State and Lord Ashburton, and that it was signed on Monday, the anniversary of our National Independence.

On the great and material point of the North Eastern Boundary, a conventional line, we are informed, has been agreed upon, which involves a cession to Maine of the navigation of the river St. Johns to its mouth.

Our next advices from Washington will probably give us more detailed information on this important subject.

THE LAW IN RELATION TO BROKERS.—To-day, the first of July, the law passed by the Legislature at its last session, imposing a tax upon stock, exchange and bill brokers, by requiring them to take out a license for that purpose, goes into operation.

We understand that the law has been submitted to the examination of several legal gentlemen who have given an opinion, that it does not apply to any one who does business with his own money and for his own account, but is applicable only to those who really are brokers, in the technical or conventional sense of that word—'a factor,' 'one that does business for another.'

On this opinion, however, we understand the brokers of the city have decided not to rest; and as the amount charged for the license is so large as in effect to act as a prohibition, no one has felt himself warranted in taking out a license, and therefore to-day it has been found impossible to buy or sell foreign bank notes.—We understand that measures have been, or will be taken, to bring the adjudication of the law before the Courts, and that a decision upon its constitutionality, and its true construction, will be obtained as speedily as possible. The inconvenience, however, to the public in the meantime will necessarily be very great, of which the trouble those have had to-day who had moneys to pay in banks and wanted to dispose of foreign bank notes for the purpose, is but a sample.

We have not understood to whom, particularly, the people of Baltimore are indebted for this law, but a perusal of its provisions will satisfy any one, that though its author may make great pretensions to wisdom, he will never have his pretensions allowed.

The law fixes the license for the privilege of buying and selling bank notes at three thousand dollars per annum; for the privilege of buying and selling bills of exchange three thousand dollars; and for the privilege of buying and selling stocks, one thousand dollars—making seven thousand dollars for the privilege of doing the ordinary business that has heretofore been done by the stock and exchange brokers of the city. Of course no one could pay that, unless he were allowed a monopoly of the business, and should be guaranteed against loss from the depreciation in his hand of stocks, bank notes and other securities he may purchase.

ARRIVAL OF THE CALEDONIA.—The steamer Caledonia, Capt. Lott, arrived at Boston at 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning. She left Liverpool on Sunday morning, the 19th ult, and brings a good complement of passengers. The news by her possesses interest, but we do not perceive that it is particularly important.

OFFICE OF THE KENT NEWS,
CHESTERTOWN July 4, 1842.

Our Town has again been visited by a most destrucuve fire. About 4 o'clock this morning an explosion of powder took place in the store house of Messrs. Jacobs & Hines, merchants, lying on the front street between the dwellings of Mrs. Harriet Tilghman and Joseph Reeve, Esq. The sides of the building were blown out, and the roof fell in. Most of our citizens were asleep, and those who were aroused, supposed it was the report of the gun usually fired at day break on the Anniversary of our Independence. The alarm was soon spread and by the extraordinary exertions of our people, (with a most deficient fire apparatus,) the fire was prevented from extending beyond the dwelling of Mr. Reeve and Mrs. Tilghman. The dwelling and storehouse occupied by Mr. Reeve, and owned by the heirs of the late William McClean, and the dwelling and kitchen of Mrs. Tilghman were entirely consumed. The store house of Messrs. J. & H. with the entire stock of goods, books of the firm and all the books, papers, letters, &c. belonging to the Post-office, (which were kept in the store house) were also entirely destroyed. This House also belonged to the heirs of W. McClean. The only insurance was upon the McC. property—to the amount of $1000. The store house of Mrs. Tilghman occupied by Mr. J. L. Stam, and the dwelling of Mr. N. Wiley were injured to the amount of several hundred dollars. The loss in goods of Mr Reeve and Mr. Stam, will probably not exceed $300.

The cannon cartridges &c. prepared to celebrate the day, had been left in the store of Messrs. J. & H. Mr Jacobs with his clerk had arisen and gone to another part of the town to assist in the discharge of cannon While they were absent, not exceeding 30 minutes, the explosion took place. The buildings destroyed cannot be replaced for less than $8000.

The contemplated celebration, will probably not proceed. We have had three fires in three months.
