Mrs Craig gave them their board, I believe and she told me she educated them and that Isabella Stansbury clothed herself and Mr. German clothed Anna Maria German, that occasionally she Mrs Craig gave them presents. I do not think Anna Maria German ever took lessons on the piano. I heard Mrs Craig say she intended giving the piano to Anna Maria German, and also heard her say she intended leaving the watch and chain to Anna Maria German, and also heard her say she intended giving her a silver cake Basket or baskets. Mrs Craig had a great deal of silver and she told me she intended giving a cake basket to Anna Maria German and the rest of her silver to Mary Ann Craggs. That she did not hear of any other expressions from Mrs Craig as to any other property she intended for Anna Maria German, but did hear her say that if Anna Maria German behaved herself she would not forget her when she died. Anna Maria German always went with Mrs Craig to the first Baptist church. does not know that Mrs German was a professor of religion – her family were Episcopalians. They hold a pew in Saint Andrews Church now. They did not I think at that time. Anna Maria German was sent to the Baptist sunday school by Mrs Craig. I believe Anna Maria slept in the same bed with Mrs Craig. I heard Mrs Craig say she had Rail Road Stock, but did not hear her say how she intended to dispose of it. or other houses. Anna Maria accompanied Mrs Craig to the Bedford Springs in 1843, shortly before Mrs Craig's death – she was then about fourteen years of age. I think they also went during the same summer to Bath Springs. On Cross Examination the witness testified that Anna Maria German lived at Mrs Craig's – that she remained with Mrs Craig until her death – that also the witness moved to the neighbourhood in August 1836 and saw them habitually from that time. That Mary Ann Craggs was a visitor and spent much time at Mrs Craigs. – she was grown up in 1836 – she was Mrs Craig's great niece. That she had frequent conversations with Mrs Craig about her intentions as to disposing of her property – that she does not remember the exact words used by Mrs Craig, she said however that she intended to give the piano to Anna Maria German, but do not know whether it was by will or gift – She spoke of a silver set for Mary Ann Craggs. These conversations were at various times – not however very shortly before her death – she was always speaking on the subject. The Plaintiff then offered Mrs Lucy Trott a legal and competent witness who being duly sworn testified that she was slightly acquainted with Mrs Ann Craig, but don't remember when she first became acquainted with her. That she saw Mrs Craig at Mr Jonathan German's house but never saw her at her own House. That she heard Mrs German say that Mrs Craig had given the Piano to Anna Maria German and that she heard Mrs Craig say that if Anna Maria German would be a good girl and mind her, she would never want for any thing at her death. This was about a year before Mrs Craig's death, and it was said at Mrs German's in the midst of the family and Anna Maria German was present. On cross examination witness testified Mrs German made the remark about Mrs Craig having given Anna Maria German the piano about a year before Mrs Craig's death.

The Plaintiff then offered Benjamin German a legal and competent witness who being first duly sworn testified that he is a brother of the deceased Jonathan German that he has lived in Baltimore sixty three years – that Mrs Craig had been a widow twenty years and had never had children, that Mrs Craig had a brother Richard B. Chenoweth senior, and a sister named he thinks Mary Hanck, that Richard B. Chenoweth had several children. Mrs Catharine German was the daughter of Mrs Craig's deceased sister Mrs Stansbury. At the time of Anna Maria Stansbury's visit to Mrs Craig lived in Pratt Street. My brother and his wife were staying with Mrs Craig, they having moved to Mrs Craig's house to live while their own was being repaired. After their house was furnished they removed to it, and Mrs Craig broke up housekeeping and went to live with them. she lived with my brother some years and until Anna Maria German was from five to seven years old – when she (Mrs Craig) went to her own house on Pratt Street near Sharp and took Anna Maria German with her. Mrs Craig manifested as much devotion to Anna Maria German as if she was her own child – That Mrs Craig was a Baptist and went to the First Baptist church in Sharp Street. My brother had a pew in St: Andrews Church but whether Mrs German went there or no I do not know. Anna Maria German went with Mrs Craig to the Baptist church. Mrs Craig assumed the religious training and education of Anna Maria German. My brother's wife told me that the Piano was given to Anna Maria German by Mrs Craig and took me in to show it to me – I think that was after the death of Mrs Craig but I am not certain.

And the said Benjamin German being cross-examined by the defendant's counsel testified – That the Piano was at his brothers – that he can't say whether it was before or after Mrs Craig's death that he saw it there, that he saw it at his brothers at the time Mrs German told him it had been given to Anna Maria. That Mrs German and Mrs Craig were upon affectionate terms. she visited Mrs Craig frequently – That Mrs German when a child going to school was sent up from the country by her father and staid part of her time with Mrs Craig and part of her time with Mr Chenoweth. Jonathan German and Catharine German had other children besides Anna Maria, but all of them except Joseph Stansbury German were small and were not very often at Mrs Craig's. Joseph Stansbury German never lived with Mrs Craig. The Plaintiff then offered Miss Martha Blatchly a legal and competent witness who having been duly sworn testified. Witness was a Baptist and met Mrs Craig at the Baptist Church – she visited Mrs Craig often and sometimes staid with her two weeks at a time, that she continued intimate with her five or six years until she, the witness, went to Philadelphia. That she saw Anna Maria German at Mrs Craig's Mrs Craig took Anna Maria German as her own daughter – Mrs Craig told me so – that she so considered her, – that Mrs Craig was very fond and affectionate to Anna Maria German and spoiled her. Mrs Craig had the religious training and Education of Anna Maria – she thinks Anna Maria was not baptised in infancy and does not know that she has ever been baptised – that Anna Maria German went to the Baptist Sunday School. That Mrs Craig often told her (the witness) that she intended to leave Anna Maria
