T. J. Neavitt & Co's. Celebrated Ague and Fever Pills.

The efficacy of their Pills has been tested within the last few years, every experiment made with them has been attended with the most satisfactory results. Being perfectly innocent and pleasant—containing nothing to derange or disorganise the stomach, they may be given alike to infants and adults with the utmost safety, and without reference to diet, and irrespective of the avocations in which the patient may be engaged. They will allay any disposition to a feverish temperament, promote harmony between the action of the stomach, liver, and other important functions, and restore the system to health and vigor.

They do not recommend their Tonic Pills for every disease to which the human race is subject but do particularly and confidently recommend them as the best remedy hitherto devised against fever and its consequences. As unequivocal proofs however of their efficacy, the proprietors have numerous certificates from professional gentlemen and others who have tested their superiority over all former discoveries for the speedy and radical cure of that distressing disease the Ague and Fever.
