THANKSGIVING DAY.

The following Circular on this subject has been issued by the Most Rev. Archbishop Eccleston, of Baltimore.

ARCH DIOCESS OF BALTIMORE.—Circular to the Catholic Clergy and Laity of Maryland.—The chief magistrate of this State having recommended "that on Wednesday, the fourteenth day of December, next ensuing, the people of Maryland abstain from all secular employment and publicly engage in thanksgiving, praise and prayer to the Almighty, because of the manifold blessings enjoyed by them under divine protection," it is for me a most pleasing duty to invite you, venerable and beloved brethren, to comply with the enlightened and edifying suggestion of his Excellency.—Amidst the vicissitudes of life, its corroding care, and corrupting pleasures, we are too prone to lose a sense of our entire dependence on the great Author and Disposer of all earthly events, and thus by our ingratitude, forfeit our claim on his more special protection. In the privacy of your meditations, you will call to mind the blessings which have been lavished on you, the merciful dispensations by which you have been not unfrequently rescued from spiritual or temporal disasters; and the unmerited interposition of Divine Goodness, by which even your own indiscretion & infidelities may have been converted into occasions of self recollection, of a salutary consciousness of the vanity of seeking happiness in sources not recognised by the maxims of your holy religion, and perhaps of a return to the paths of peace and piety, with an humble and contrite heart.

But whilst as individuals, we bow in grateful homage to our Heavenly Father, we owe him a still more solemn, if not a deeper debt of gratitude, as a great and highly favoured nation. We may have abused the magnificent inheritance that has fallen to us; we may, in the wantonness of impatient prosperity, have too often sought shorter avenues to wealth than those of industry and ability; and have thus justified Divine Providence in entailing on us the salutary, although humiliating, consequences of our absorbing I had almost said our national passion.—But, even in this retribution, we gratefully recognize the intervention of a Merciful Father. By a memorable lesson, he taught us that it is more for our happiness and respectability to seek a competency by industrious and frugal habits, than to hazard conscience and character on the precarious issue of extravagant and unscrupulous schemes of self aggrandisement.

But whilst even the chastening discipline of heaven claims our fervent gratitude, with what effusion of feeling should we not acknowledge the countless blessings that are strewn along our path. If commercial enterprise has been confined within narrower and perhaps more wholesome limits; a new impulse has been necessarily given to the more stable and secure operations of agriculture; if causes which it is not for us to investigate, have oppressed the country with pecuniary embarrassments, has not the earth poured fourth her genial favors with more than proportionate munificence, and placed them within the reach of even the more needy among our fellow-citizens? If we are occasionally startled by the detection of revolting frauds or other baleful enormities of human depravity; are we not also refreshed by the more than countervailing examples of virtue and morality? Religion is rearing her temples and scattering her hallowed fruits throughout the land; temperance points to the countless haggard victims of vice and misery now reclaimed to usefulness and self-respect, education is more and more liberally diffusing its purifying and ennobling influences; peace, which had been threatened by serious differences with a mighty nation, again smiles with in our borders. Have we not then cause to magnify the praises of the giver of all good gifts, and to propitiate the continuance of his favors, by laying at the foot of his altars the homage of hearts glowing with gratitude and love?

To comply with this sacred obligation the reverened pastors of the several congregations, and the directors of Catholic Institutions in this state, are requested to have as far as practicable, solemn services on the morning of Wednesday, the 14th December, and the Te Deum sung or recited after mass. They will read this circular to their congregations on some day previous to that of thanksgiving.

ROBBERY AND ATTEMPT TO MURDER.—A gentleman from Calvert county, informs us that a free negro man went to the house of an elderly lady, in that county in the absence of the male members of the family some nights ago, and after violently beating the lady, robbed the house of about $500 in specie. He was apprehended a day or two after, and after having been hanged up by the neck four or five times, until he was nearly dead, was induced to confess his crime and the whereabouts of the largest portion of the money. He had secreted it in different places.

The lady did not recover until the next day, and was then unable to give any definite account of the matter.

Mrs. Doctor Parlin Divorced—This distinguished suffrage lady is in trouble in consequence of her devotedness to the cause of the people. She made a patriotic speech in New York, at the call of Mr. Slamm, and the fates have rewarded her by a divorce from her husband. It seems that the doctor remonstrated with her on the immodesty and unbecomingness of her making speeches to Buttonders in Shakespeare Hall, which she of course resented, and the upshot is, there is going to be a seperation of this amiable and exemplary couple. This is the penalty paid by greatness for its elevation.—New Bedford Bulletin.

SUCCESSOR TO BISHOP ENGLAND.—It is announced that the Rev. Dr. O'Connor, pastor of the Church of St. Paul's, in Pittsburgh, has been appointed Roman Catholic Bishop of Charleston, in place of Bishop England, deceased.

Advantages of befriending Neighbours—In 1811 George Wilson, of Biddick, Westmoreland, says a late English paper emigrated to north America, having previously borrowed 20s. from Thomas Robson, a neighbor, to assist him in affecting that object, under a promise to remember him if he had it in his power. Robson was then a banksman; but he has lately been employed pumping water in Cassop pit. A few days since, he received a letter from the executors of Wilson, apprising him that he had recently died at Philadelphia, United States, and bequeath him money and property to the value of £7000. The party who has reaped this ample reward for his generosity is now about seventy years of age; but, lucky woman! about a year ago he married a female not more than forty.

A story that made us laugh.—Coming down the river on that pleasant and well officered boat, the Pathfinder, we were told an excellent story—at least so it seemed to us. Joel Green, when commanding another boat, had on board a dry, humorous pilot, named Pennington. A deck passenger, having drowned his cares, if he had any to drown, in "bald face" whiskey, quietly laid down to sleep, and as quietly died. An hour so after, it was discovered that he was dead, the boat landed at a wood yard, and the defunct toper was deposited in an extem pore coffin, and shovelled away. Pennington looked and shook his head, perhaps in discontent with all liquor, because it had killed off one lover of it in this abrupt manner—perhaps dissatisfied with his hasty interment.

The next day a passenger came on board, who had evidently been looking at some one drinking, and whose repeated visitations to the BAR had rather incapaciated him for FORENSIC exercises.—He talked thickly and stammeringly. Having made his way to the hurricane deck, Pennington, who was at the wheel for some time narrowly observed him, and at length thus accosted him.

"Hallo, stranger, you're drunk!"

"Oh no, only slightly interrogated," was somewhere about the reply.

"Well," said Pennington, "let me give you a bit of advice. Don't go to sleep on this boat, for if they don't bury you may I be shot. Why, there was a chap yesterday got drunk and went to sleep, and in two hours they buried him. The man was no more dead than I am. They serve all drunken men so on this boat. Why, I drink myself, and darsen't go to sleep on the boat. I haven't slept for two weeks, for if I close my eyes I know they'll bury me."

Pennington's story so alarmed the passenger, that it perfectly sobered him, and he did not drink another dram on the boat.—Natchez Courier.

The following announciation of the death of the Hon. James W. Williams, one of the Representatives in Congress from this State, is copied from the Republican of Saturday afternoon:

DEATH OF THE HON JAMES W. WILLIAMS.—We regret to learn that our esteemed Representative from Harford, Baltimore County and Carroll, the Hon. James W. Williams, whilst on his way to Washington, in his private carriage, was attacked with a fit of apoplexy.—An endorsement on a package from Abingdon, received in this city yesterday, states that he has died from the effects of the attack.

P. S. We learn from a gentleman direct from Harford, that Mr. Williams died yesterday morning, about five o'clock, having been conveyed back to his residence, from which he was distant about three miles when he was attacked.—There was no person with him at the time of the attack but the driver of the carriage, who did not know of the situation of Mr. W. until the carriage had stopped on the road.

ORRIGIN OF THE MASSACHUSETTS SENATE.—In lecturing before the Hamilton Literary Association of Brooklyn, on the subject of "the Jurisprudence of the Puritans," P. W. Chandler, Esq. of Boston gave the following humorous account of certain difficulties in the General Court of Massachusetts, which resulted in the establishment of the Senate of that State as at present constituted:

In accordance with the charter, the governor and assistant were elected annually by the freemen, and altogether constituted the General Court. In this originated the present representative system of New England.—The representatives and assistants met in common, and the governor presided; but occasionally altercations arose between them, and finally, while gravely discussing a case presented by a poor woman for the recovery of a pig, the breach became so wide that all attempts to heal it were in vain, and the controversy ended in a separation of the assistants from the representatives, and their organization into a separate body—precisely equivalent to the Senate, each house possessing a check upon the other, and in all respects, constituted as now. The lecturer here remarked that the cackling of a goose saved Rome; and it might be said, with equal historical truth that a pig was the father of the Massachusetts Senate!

The following, from the same lecture may serve as a hint to certain fashionables of the present day:

In 1649 the magistrates and citizens formed an association for the purpose of arresting the practice of wearing long hair by the men—a custom which they pronounced uncivil, unholy, and every way pernicious. This was the first associated effort in America for effecting by moral force and suasion, a reformation of bad habits. Besides this, the elders of the several churches were earnestly exhorted to preach against long hair.

THE ARCTIC REGIONS.—The following account of a thrilling adventure in the Arctic Seas is from a magazine published some time since. The circumstances are certainly within the range of possibility, since no putrefaction could take place whilst the bodies of the unfortunate sufferers were in the temperature of a vessel "encased in the thick ribbed ice."

"In the spring of the year 1824, a whaling vessel sailed from the port of London upon a voyage to the Polar Seas. Nothing material is said to have occurred until the arrival in those regions, when it becomes the duty of the crew to keep a perpetual look out upon the horizon in search of fish: while thus occupied it was fancied by one of the seamen that a sail was discernible as far to the northward as the eye could reach, and as the course of the whaler was towards the supposed vessel, a mass became gradually distinguishable amidst the mountains of ice which appeared in that quarter to bound the sea. It was now summer, and the afternoon unusually calm, whilst the whaler gradually neared the object in view; the supposition being that it was a vessel engaged in operating on the blubber in the bay, which would open to view upon approaching nearer the ice. Upon arriving, however, upon the spot, it became clear that the vessel was a wreck embeded in the ice, and could only be approached by a boat. This having been lowered, the captain and several seaman landed upon the ice, and approached the vessel, which proved to be a brig.

The sails were furled, very little appeared upon the deck, and all the arrangements were those of a vessel laid up for a long period of time. Descending to the cabin the first object that was seen was a large Newfoundland dog coiled upon a mat, and apparently asleep—Upon touching the animal it was found to be dead, and the body frozen to the hardness of a stone. Entering the cabin was next seen a young lady seated at a table, her eyes open, gazing with mild and steadfast expression upon the new comers to that solitary spot.

She was a corpse, and in that apparently resigned and religious attitude had been frozen to death. Beside her was a young man, who, it appeared, was the brother of the young lady, and commander of the brig. He too was dead, but sitting at the table, and before him lay a sheet of paper upon which he had written the following words: "Our cook has endeavoured since yesterday morning to strike a light, but in vain; all is over"—At the other side of the cabin stood the cook, with a flint and steel in his hand frozen to a statue, in the vain endeavor to procure fire which alone could save himself and his companions from the cold arms of death.

The superstitious fears of the seamen now hurried the captain away, and from this it appeared that the ill-fated vessel was a brig which had belonged to the port of London, and had sailed for the Arctic regions more than fourteen years before.

The Newark Advertiser, from which we copy the foregoing remarks, "Should Indiana elect a Loco instead of a Whig, as we have set her down, each party will be equal. It will then be left for Tennessee to decide the character of the Senate. The present Legislature of Tennessee having adjourned without electing U. S. Senators, that task will therefore devolve on the Legislature to be elected next August. Our political friends will here see renewed cause for congratulation upon the result of the recent election in New Jersey, which has secured to the country the services of a sound Whig, and perhaps preserved the ascendancy of Whig principles in the Senate."

MR. CLAY.—The Lexington Intelligencer states that Mr. Clay left that city on the 23d instant for the South.

The Louisville Journal mentions his arrival in that city on the 24th instant, and adds that he was to proceed on his journey in a day or two.

---

STAY OF EXECUTION IN TENNESSEE.—The Legislature of Tennessee at the recent session passed a law providing that upon all judgments to be thereafter rendered before any justice of the peace in Tennessee, the defendant or defendants shall be entitled to a stay of execution for eight months, upon giving good and sufficient security therefor, under the same rules, regulations and restrictions as now prescribed by law.

AFFAIRS IN FLORIDA.—The Tallahassee Star says that there are 1278 cases set down for trial on the civil docket before the Supreme Court now in session at that place, and adds—"Property will not command money.—Cotton, the great staple of the country, cannot be sold for cash, in this market—Houses and lands are valueless, when placed in competition with dollars and cents—Property sold under execution at this time, will hardly sell for sufficient to pay the costs of suit sale, and the fees of the officers."

The Philadelphia papers announces the death of Henry Morris, Esq. High Sheriff of Philadelphia county. He died suddenly on Tuesday, the 29th ult. in the street, of apoplexy.

GEORGIA U. S. SENATOR.—The Legislature of Georgia, on the 30th ult. elected W. T. Colquitt, U. S. Senator in place of Mr. Cuthbert, whose term expires on the 4th of March next.

Isaac Hill has, it is said, been engaged as Assistant Editor of the Madisonian, at a salary of $2500 per annum.—Pretty fair for writing political squibs.

NO SENATORS.—The Loco Focos of the Tennessee Legislature have again refused to allow the election of Senators to represent that State in Congress.—We have not yet seen and will wait in vain to see the ferocious denunciation of this disorganizing proceeding by those who were so quick in opening the vials of wrath upon a proposition being made of retaliatory measures by the Whigs of Maryland.

---

American Beef and Tongues.—The Baltimore American says, that a house in that city is now largely engaged in packing beef for the English market.—It is packed in tierces, containing each 304 lbs. and are to be shipped to London and sold on their account. Large quantities of tongues are also being prepared for the same destination; & should the price of hogs justify the experiment, it is the intention of the same concern to make considerable shipments of pork to the same place.

THUNDER COMING.—The Tylerites recently established an 'independent' 'cash paper' in Philadelphia yclep the Evening Express. The editor has recently left it, and issued a prospectus for a genuine locofoco paper, in which he promises some interesting developements. He says:

'Our recent ACCIDENTAL association with the Tyler administration as editor of the 'Evening Express,' (the circumstances attending such connexion, our motives and objects, together with our VOLUNTARY withdrawal in disgust from the paper and party, will be fully explained hereafter) has enabled us thoroughly to understand and appreciate the PECULIAR PRINCIPLES of that branch of FEDERALISM known as the, CORPORAL'S GUARD, and to satisfy our own mind that a more WICKED, CORRUPT and BANDITTI-LIKE SET OF SCOUNDRELS never before leagued together in this Republican country, as a POLITICAL PARTY, CLIQUE, CABAL, OR FACTION."

From the Madisonian.

A uniform Jackson man, and one of the first subscribers to the Madisonian, wishes the privilege of saying, through its now widely circulated columns, that he believes the annexed ticket for President and Vice President would receive thousands and tens of thousands of the Republican votes in 1844.

A JEFFERSONIAN.

For President,

JOHN TYLER, of Virginia.

For Vice President,

DAVID RITTENHOUSE PORTER, of Pa.

On this, the Philadelphia Gazette says—"The above is from the Madisonian of a few days ago, and is a sign worth observing. We cannot imagine a better ticket for some purposes than that which would bear the names of Mr. Tyler and Governor Porter. Each would bring in about the same capital: each has about an equal share of the confidence and regard of their respective friends: each is surrounded by the same sort of dependants. It would be a beautiful mingling of harmonies."

PROSPECTUS

LEGISLATIVE REPUBLICAN.

DESIROUS of giving the public the earliest legislative news, the undersigned intend publishing the "MARYLAND REPUBLICAN" semi-weekly during the approaching session of the Legislature. No exertions will be spared on their part to give full, correct and impartial reports of the Proceedings of both houses.

The approaching session must be one of great interest. Our political opponents who are now in the ascendency in one branch of the Legislature, have, for years promised important reforms in the State Government, and we feel it a duty to give all their opinions and suggestions to the people for their free and candid consideration.

Our arrangements will be such as our means will justify. In saying this, we entertain the hope, that we shall be able to give the earliest reports of all important movements; and therefore, respectfully, ask our friends throughout the State to use their exertions to procure us subscribers for the session—a session which will no doubt, be looked to with peculiar interest by every Marylander who has an eye to the welfare of his native State.

The names of subscribers may be sent to us by their respective county delegates.

The first number of the Legislative Republican, will contain full particulars of the organization of both branches, and the Governor's Message.

We propose to issue on the following days and terms:—

DAYS—Every Thursday and Saturday.

TERMS—For One copy each publication, - - $1 25

" FIVE copies, 5 00

" ELEVEN do. 10 00

Any person remitting as above, free of postage, will be entitled to the number of copies as mentioned above.

Our present weekly subscribers will be entitled to the semi-weekly, and any person subscribing hereafter by the year will also be entitled to the same. The weekly Maryland Republican is published at $2 50 in advance, or $3 00 at the end of the year.

P. S. Post Masters are authorized to frank letters containing remittance for subscription, provided they contain nothing but what relates thereto.
