[Easton Gazette.]

Mr. Graham:—Has it not occurred to you as a remarkable fact, that while the unanimous voice of a suffering community, is eloquently and incessantly heard in the laudable effort to dethrone one species of immorality, vices of a secret & consequently more despicable nature are treated as evils common to the fallen state of man?

For an example;—the Slanderer, whose double faced hypocrisy most fitly qualifies him for an association with animals of another order, is freely admitted into very respectable society; and few persons indeed are found sufficiently brave to soil a suit of lustrous cloth by treading upon such a venemous foe to the human family. He so artfully insinuate himself into the affections of the unsuspecting, that while they hang entranced upon his tale of pi[illegible] (!) for the evil habits and unfortunate dispositions of their neighbours' sons, or the indolence and instability of their daughters, they seem to forget that the same story, with a little alteration, is destined to entertain, at their expense, the next company which our treble faced friend may be called to adorn.

To err, is a frailty peculiar to our species;—to confess that error immediately reinstates, if it does not elevate us in the scale of moral excellence. On the other hand, to deny our faults, is adding niggardly cowardice to falsehood; and we consequently lessen in manly dignity, till we are too treacherously base to handle the character of a brute. The mere act of attempting to destroy the reputation of any one, is a sort of villainy, which, for mischievous consequences is almost without a parallel;—but; when deceit and its concomitants, "I did'nt say it" are added, truth sinks beneath the ponderous weight; and virtue, honor, and moral worth, unable to withstand so violent a stock, must fall, or for a while be swayed by the irresistable force of Public Opinion. A distinguished writer alluding to this subject, says;—"Every body condemns scandal, yet nothing circulates more readily—even gold itself is less current." It travels with the velocity of lightening, and it is an unpleasant fact, that many persons, either from too much credulity, or a desire to propogate calumny, will listen with apparent delight at those tattling libels on God's creation, whose sole business seems to be the destruction of an innocent faultless reputation.

This should not be;—'tis beneath the dignity of American citizens; and while I continue to see a spirit of patriotism manistested, let me fondly cherish the hope that ere long, Slander will be seen in its most hideous form; and that it will be driven from our happy land by the virtuous indignation of a free and noble people.

Is there a more dangerous biped permitted to exist, than that voracious monster, the cravings of whose appetite are only satiated when feeding upon the sacred character of his fellows? Is he not the actual cause of contention, distrust and continual strife? Is there one trait of honourable humanity existing in his breast? No!

'His heart is gall—his tongue is fire—
His soul too base for generous ire;
His sword too keen for noble use.—
His shield and buckler are—ABUSE.'

His presence every where should be regarded as a certain harbinger of trouble; and those whose elastic consciences and tongues, enable them to ADD as well as carry, are by no means inferior;—both classes should be made to wear such marks of infamy, about them that they may be universally known and avoided.

March 28th, 1843.

Extract from a letter to a gentleman in this county.

"The great Fair of St. Onouffree in Asia which lasts four weeks, had a very numerous attendance in 1842. Buyers from almost all nations being present.—200,000 Sheep were brought for sale.—80,000 cattle. 50,000 wild horses were brought in from the plains Tartary; 3000 Arabian horses: upwards of 20,000 swine and about 15,000 Horses of the best breeds were also collected. Leaping and horse racing was the great amusement; a Circassian horse won a race of four French leagues, winning the stake of 3900 ducats and all the horses which were run against him, thirteen in number.'

It is said in the New Orleans Picaune, that among the passengers on board the U. S. brig Dolphin, from Mexico, were Henry Connelly, Esq, a merchant of Chihuahua, and Judge Robinson, one of the San Antonio prisoners, who has been liberated by order of Santa Anna.—While in chains at the Castle of Perote the latter was sent for by Santa Anna, and after a personal interview received propositions thought to be of a favorable nature towards the final independence of Texas. These Judge R. now has with him, and he will proceed with all haste to lay them before the Government of Texas. It is thought by many that the Texan prisoners, now confined at Perote, will soon be liberated.

A Murder Story Exploded.—The Brooklyn Star, alluding to the story of the husband having murdered his wife by cutting her throat, thus explains the matter:

"A lady had been visiting her friends in Connecticut, and was expected home last evening. Her husband went to the ferry to meet her, and found she had previously arrived on the Brooklyn side, and was on her way home in company with her brother. As if his days of courtship were not over, he put chase after her, and concluded to surprise her with a right loving kiss. With this intent, on reaching her, he pulled her head over backwards, and gave her a smack which might have sounded in a reporter's ear like the report of a pistol. The lady being surprised thereat screamed it, and that is the whole of the story."

GEN. CASS AND MR. WEBSTER.

Among the correspondence submitted by the president to congress, in regard to the slave trade, right of visit, &c., are a letter from Gen. Cass to Mr. Webster, and the reply of the latter. The letter of Gen. Cass was written subsequent to his request to be recalled, and before he received the treaty made by Lord Ashburton with the American secretary. It censures that treaty in terms of indignation, and complains that it places him in a situation which would render it impossible for him to remain at the court of France, with either credit or usefulness. It is a sharp rebuke of our government for its course in regard to the right of visit. The reply of Mr. Webster is manly and severe. He plainly tells Gen. Cass that his interference is uncalled for and impertinent. He directs and animadverts on the general's letter shewing that the honor of the country had been maintained in the treaty—that it had received the approbation not only of the president and senate but of all the diplomatic agents of the union, from whom he had heard, with the single exception of Gen. Cass, who had given it an interpretation not warranted, and calculated to do an injury to the country.

DEATH OF JUDGE WAGGAMAN.

The New Orleans papers mention the death of Mr. Waggaman, whose loss of a leg by amputation we mentioned a few days since, the consequence of a recent duel. Mr. Waggaman was one of the most distinguished citizens of Louisana, had held the office of Judge, and had represented the State in the Senate of the United States. The Republican says:

"Mr. Waggaman was a native of Maryland, and by marriage is a near connexion of the President of the U. States. His closing hours were marked by that resignation and character becoming a just man. The private difficulties which embarrassed his last days were closed by a reconciliation which we trust gave calm & quietude to his dying moments. He has gone from us in the midst of health, intelligence and strength. The voice which was heard but yesterday in the chamber of our Senate, is hushed in the silence of the grave. His friends, and they may be called legion, will never forget his good qualities; his errors, (and who is free from imperfection) will be forgiven by his great Creator. We pen this tribute to the departed, not as an attempt to speak his praise, but to give vent in part to the feeling of gratitude and affection which are due to him who is no longer among the living."

DEATH OF SENATOR MCROBERTS.

The Honorable Samuel McRoberts, Senator in Congress from Illinois, died in Cincinnati on Monday, aged about 40 years, after a short illness, resulting from a cold taken in crossing the Mountains, on his way home from the session which has recently closed.

The Elizabeth City (N. C) Advocate complains the several Northern vessels loaded with ice are now in the Narrows near that place for the purpose of taking shad, which, when caught, are packed in ice, and shipped to the North, to the ruin of the fisheries on Albemarle Sound.—The Legislature of North Carolina, at its last session, adopted measures to preserve the terrapins in Pamlico Sound, "and now," says the Advocate, "the Northerners are ruining our shad fishery."

The DEDICATION of the Methodist Protestant Church, at the corner of Pitt and Aisquith streets, took place on Sunday agreeably to announcement. The Church was densely crowded with spectators to witness the ceremonies and hear the Rev'd T. H. Stockton, whose celebrity as a pulpit orator stands deservedly high. The exercises of the Choir were much admired. The Church is of ample dimensions, and erected in an exceedingly neat manner.—Balt. Patriot.

NEW FIVE AND TEN DOLLAR WESTERN BANK NOTES.—The Western Bank has issued beautiful new plates of five and ten dollar notes. The ten dollar note has a vignette of a figure of a man wearing the cap of Mercury, sitting on a bale cotton and holding in his right hand a cornucopia, with a lion resting at his feet. To the left of the vignette is a large X. The left end of the note has the figures of a male and female harvester, with the word "ten" below, and the right end has a figure head with an X above and 10 below.

The five dollar note has the same vignette with the cap of Mercury as in the ten dollar note, and has the figure 5 on each side. The left end has the head with the figure 5 above and below it, and the right end a represen ation of a statue of Washington, dressed in Roman style, bearing in his left hand a bundle of arrows. The statue is standing in a large figure 5.

The notes are signed by C. Brooks, President, (the first signed by him) and Thos. Spicer, Jr. Cashier. They are beautifully ornamented throughout, and are altogether very showy notes, and are very finely executed.

The notes of the old plates of $5's and 10's are not now paid out by the bank, and will soon be superseded by the new notes. Those who hold the $5 notes of the old plates, which have been counterfeited, would do well to return them to the bank, and have them exchanged.—Patriot.

MESMERIC SYMPATHY.—The editor of the Columbus Enquier says, that in one of the experiments recently performend in that city the mesmerizer, after having produced somnambulism exhibited his trembling hands, stating, "I never was so nervous in my life? I'd give a shilling for a glass of brandy and water" To which the sleeper in SYMPATHY responded: 'I should like to have some of the same myself."

Death of Gen. Armstrong.—This distinguished individual died at his residence in Dutchess county, New York, on the 1st. inst. in the 85th year of his age. Gen. A. has peformed a part in the most interesting periods in the history of our country, being first a revolutionary soldier, then Minister to France during the time when Napoleon reigned triumphant, and afterwards Secretary of War, under Madison, during the war of 1812. His autobiography, which it is said he has left behind him, will be an exceedingly interesting one. His conduct, both during the revolution, as author of the celebrated Newburgh letters, and late war, did not escape animadversion, and there are those now living, who attribute the reverses of the day at Bladensburg to his agency. He was a man of great ability.—Sun.

We had supposed (says the New York Courier and Enquirer) that the President and heads of Departments had high and responsible public duties to perform, demanding laborious investigation, and requiring the exercise of much reflection & consideration, and for which they are liberally paid by the people. But such is not their understanding of the obligations they have assumed. The correspondent of the "Aurora and Union," in writing from Washington, gives us an insight into the nature of those matters which occupy their attention, and the objects for which they are administering the Government and dispensing its patronage.—He says:

'Our friends in N. York will, of course be gratified to learn that the recent movements there meet the warm approval of the Administration, all the members of which re-pond cordially to the sentiments and views set forth in the address and resolutions adopted at the great mass meeting at the Tabernacle. I have had separate interviews with the President & each of the members of the Cabinet, all of whom have been very free and frank on the subject of the future course, policy, measures, and expectations of the Administration, which will be developed in due time. The recent change in the post office at Albany will give you some idea of the nature of the movements in contemplation by the Administration, which will be prompt, bold, and decisive in all parts of the country. The work is all laid out, and nothing now remains but to proceed to its execution with spirit and vigor."

We should very much doubt the authority of any one who represents in a letter for publication what the different members of the Administration, in "free and frank" interviews with him, have said. It is certain, nevertheless, that, almost every day, the Official paper in this city endorses the orthodoxy and authenticity of the publications made in this New York paper, which is a sort of auxiliary Madisonian. No longer ago than in its last number, the Official Government paper copies an article from the paper referred to, describing it as being taken from 'that well known and able Administration the journal, the Aurora & Union.' The article thus copied, by the way, of which the Madisonian says 'its tone is so honest, and its sentiments so disinterested and praiseworthy, that we could scarcely fail to endorse every portion of it,' is hardly less curious than the matter of the "Washington letter in the same paper. The pith of it may be found in the following sentences:

"It is, therefore, the Democratic party, its principles, character & nominations, which we desirous to sustain at the approaching charter election. We hope to see friends of President Tyler in no mination; we are sure his enemies will not be recommended; but there can be no doubt that it is our duty and the interest of the country to vote for the Democratic ticket"

A fact that will be laughed at fifty years hence, is this:—The United States have on hand $37,000 for the great and "unterrified" State of Virginia, the "mother of States" and men of all sizes and complexions. This sum is fully hers—so fully so, that if possible in national matters, a Court of Chancery would enforce the execution of the trust.

Now this same Ancient Dominion is in debt—poor, growing poorer and ragged at the elbows.

The United States offered to her the $37 000; her Legislature has voted to refuse it, and are about to lay a direct tax upon the State to pay her bills! This is chivalrous—Worcester Ægis.

BLOOD AND SLAUGHTER.—The Madisonian of the 13th inst. says:

"We will not bandy threats with the Richmond Enquirer. Suffice it to say, that Mr. Ritchie is distinctly to understand that we prefer his friendship decidedly, but if he dares to prick our arm with his sword, we will strike fairly back and WITH ALL OUR STRENGTH INTO HIS BREAST. Our hands are for our friends, our DAGGERS for our enemies.

The trial of Whitney, for robbing the U. S. mail about three years ago, near Stockton, was concluded at Mobile on the 22d March, and a verdict of guilty rendered by the jury. The punishment is death.

The Boston Bulletin publishes an account of a magnificent wedding which took place in that city on Wednesday evening. The bride wore jewels worth $10,000, a lace veil worth 1'200 and the whole expense of the affair was 15,000.

☞The legislature of Maine passed a law at its recent session, to admit every person of good moral character to the practice of law in that State. It passed the Senate with only one opposing vote. Every honest man in the State is now a lawyer.

☞The Philadelphia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, commenced in that city on Wednesday.—Bishops Waugh and Hedding were in attendance, with about one hundred and thirty members.

Mr. James Disney, warden of the Baltimore City and county Jail, died in that city at his residence on Friday last, after an illness of several months, from a complication of diseases, connected with which was Bronchitis.

The death of Mr. Gardner.—The Norfolk Herald, in noticing the tragical death of Melzar Gardner, editor of the Old Dominion, gives the following as a portion of the verdict of the jury of inquest;—"That the said Melzar Gardner came to his death in a scuffle with Mordecai Cooke, Jr. by the discharge of a pistol which the said Gardner drew from his breeches pocket, and which was taken from him by said Cooke and fired off by said Cooke in the scuffle, the ball from which pistol entered the left side of said Gardner, near his heart.

At Norfolk, on Friday, Mr Modecai Cooke, Jr. was examined before Alderman Leigh, in relation to the death of Mr. M. Gardner, late editor of the Portsmouth Dominion, and after a laborious investigation, was discharged.

MR. WISE AND MR. CLAY.

The Hon Mr. Wise, during his present election tour, is said to be very abusive of the great statesman of Kentucky. It may be well enough, therefore, to remain that in 1840 Mr. Wise wrote a long letter to Taylorsville, from which this extract is now circulating in honor of the consistency of the aforesaid Mr. Wise:

"I need not tell you what I think of that man Henry Clay, of Hanover. He has done for himself what friends and fortune can do for no man and has acquired what neither friends nor foes can take away from him—"a fame for which himself has fought," and to whice no man's praise can add, "and from which no man's censure can detract." Office could not add a cubit to his statue."

The reader, we do not doubt, will be struck by the truth of these remarks.

A FAMILY POISONED.—We have not read of a more dreadful calamity than that detailed by a recent number of the Genada (Miss.) Register. This paper informs us of the whole family of Mr. Morehead, residing near the Yazoo Pass, having been poisoned by eating peaches dried on a painted board. One of his daughters was to have been married on the very day she was so suddenly taken from the earth. The marriage clothes were sent home as the funeral bier was preparing, and a cloud of wo, bedimmed the now blasted hopes of the partner of her bosom. The eldest son, prostrated on a bed of death had just returned from a five years' study in the learned cloisters of old Harvard, crowned with its laurel wreath of honour and glory. Death spread his banner o'er the whole. Father, mother, son, and daughter, now sleep the sleep of death stretched side by side, and wrapped in the embrace of the cold earth.—Phila. Enq.

Great Britain buys annually of the U. States, $60,000 000 worth of produce, two thirds of which is cotton. Massachusetts buys of the States $12,000,000 worth annually.

VIEWS OF THE ADMINISTRATION.—After the endorsement given by the Official paper in this city to the 'Aurora and Union,' published in New York (we are obliged in courtesy to regard it as a true exponent of the views of the Administration. We copy therefore from that paper the following very clear definition of the 'position' of the Administration with a chart of 'its future policy,' which it is very proper should be understood by all the People of the United States:—Nat. Intel.

From the 'Aurora and Union' of Saturday.

"President Tyler and the Democratic Party.—Having just returned from a most agreeable and satisfactory visit to Washington, during which we had the most complete opportunity of informing ourselves of the views and sentiments of the members of the Administration regarding its present position & future policy we have the pleasure of announcing to the Democratic party, in this city and throughout the country, that the Government will continue to be administered upon the strictest democratic principles, and that a thorough and perfect harmony of feeling and action with the great democratic interest of the country, forms the basis upon which the Administration founds its claims to the confidence and support of the People. Whatever may be the clamors of interested and ambitious demagogues who control a few presses heretofore considered democratic, we distinctly aver that President Tyler and his administration are one and indivisible with the great Democratic party of the country." 'Already, both in profession & practice, has the President given the most unequivocal evidence of his democratic intentions; & we pledge ourselves that those evidences will for the future, be neither few nor far between. In all his official acts he recognises only the democratic people; and there is not at this moment a more efficient, active, and powerful enemy of the Whig intriguers and demagogues within the limits of the whole Union than John Tyler. This will be still more clearly and distinctly indicated in the communications of the President to the next Congress; and before that Congress rises, we venture to predict, that the Democratic party throughout the U. States will to a man rally to the support of Mr. Tyler as the firm and uncompromising advocate of their principles, and the chief upon whom the hopes of the country are centered."

Married,

At the Bayside Meeting-house on Wednesday the 29th of March by the Rev. Perre Marshall, Mr. Benjamin F. Barker to Miss Mary Jane Hughs all of the Bay Side.

On the 29th ult, by the Rev. J. T. Hazzard, Mr. Samuel Bratten of Somerset county to Miss Mary Mister of Dorchester county.

DIED,

On the Morning of the 21st at 8 o'clock (at the residence of R. A. Robinson, Esq.,) Levin Winder in the 21st year of his age—son of the late Captain E. Winder, of the U. States Army.

In announcing the death of this young man, we desire not to run into the usual train of obituaries (for the most part falsely colored by the pencil of friendship)—But for the satisfaction of his numerous distant friends we may say that though so young, by his prepossessing manners and appearance, combined with a christian character (the brightest ornament of youth and the true glory of old age) he had secured to himself the affection and confidence of all who knew him; and attained in our community, and especially in the Church (with which he was connected) an enviable standing and name, which consistent Godliness alone can secure.

Though far removed from his home, and the sweet ministrations which natural affection would have secured, he lacked no attention in comfort, (during his long illness) from his christian friends; as an observer of their unwearied assiduity by night and by day, we could not refrain from often exclaiming "See how these christians love one another."

His friends personally, and the Sunday School Teachers of the Episcopal Church particularly are respectfully invited to attend the Funeral this afternoon at 3 o'clock from St. Paul's Church.

Louisville Journal, March 22d, 1843.

Died in this county, Bayside, at the residence of his father, on Monday 3d of April, JOSEPH H. BRUFF, in the 29th year of his age. We deeply sympathise with his relatives and friends in their severe bereavement; yet we rejoice that we can say in the words of the Psalmist, "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." He gave a bright, and undubitable evidence, that the religion of CHRIST can soothe the pangs of death and rob the grave of its terrors. In early youth he embraced religion, and exemplified it's influence and power over sinful nature, whilst he lived, and best of all, felt its consolations in death, and exulted in the prospect of living with GOD forever.
