The Massachusetts Democratic State Convention met at Worcester on Wednesday. The Boston Journal says—

A strong difference of opinion in relation to men, was exhibited by the delegates, and the discussion occasionally assumed an impatient and angry tone, which more than once menaced discord and confusion. Among the most prominent of the delegates, was John A. Bolles, Secretary of state, who was a zealous advocate of the interest of Mr. Van Buren, and B. F. Hallett, of the Executive Council, who led on the party which were favorable to Mr. Calhoun.

Marcus Morton and H. H. Childs were nominated for re election to the office of Governor and Lieut Governor—and an interminable string of verbose resolutions, prepared by Mr. Hallett, in which the question relating to the Presidential candidate, was adroitly waived, were adopted. The test of the true character of the convention, was applied in the shape of a resolution to vote for two delegates at large to represent the State in the Baltimore national convention, which resulted as to lows:

Whole number of ballots,	531
Van Buren Ticket.
George Bancroft of Boston,	335
Henry H. Child of Pittsfield,	317
Calhoun Ticket.
Wells Lathrop of Hadley,	186
Benjamin F. Hallett of Boston,	185

We learn from the Hagerstown News that Robert Wason, Esq of Hancock, has been appointed Register of Wills for Washington county, in place of Daniel Schnebley, Esq. deceased.

General Bertrand, one of Bonaparte's most distinguished soldiers, accompanied by his son, Napoleon Bertrand, arrived at New Orleans on the 7th instant, in the French brig of war Mercure. His reception in New Orleans was very flattering

Another Calhoun meeting was held in the city of New York on Thursday, which was numerously attended:

George W. Niles, Esq. read a preamble and series of well drawn resolutions, in which was set forth the frauds practiced upon the people, by the late Convention at Syracuse. The document states that the delegation to that Convention were chosen by not more than nine thousand voters, or less than the number of votes in any one Congressional District and that there is good reason to believe many of them were self constituted.—After setting forth in strong and eloquent language, the wrongs perpetrated by this system of deception, the resolutions assert the right of the people to choose their own delegates after the old democrat district system, and they conclude by asserting that the people who have thus been cheated out of their rights, will elect their Delegates and send them to the Baltimore Convention, where they will contest their claims to be heard.

The preamble and resolutions were received and adopted with great applause.

A letter from New Orleans to the New York Courier, dated 4th inst. says:

In politics all is calm but it is the calm which precedes the storm. In April we lead off in an election for Mayor, which will be one of the fiercest contests ever witnessed here. Congressional elections follow in July, and in November the great struggle for the Presidency. Our friends already need have no fears for New Orleans or Louisiana—we were caught napping last July, but we will wipe off our disgrace at the very first opportunity—We go to battle under the broad banner of Henry Clay, and we recognise no other leader, with him our triumph is as certain as death. Locofocoism was overwhelmed in 1840.

Crops in Texas.—A letter to the editors of the New Orleans Picayune from a gentleman residing at Lagrange, Texas, under date of August 1, says, the crops of Texas are in a very flourishing condition. Three times as much corn will be gathered this year as will be necessary for consumption. It sells at 12½ cents per bushel, for cash. 'It is the prevaling opinion among the farmers,' adds the writers, 'that if the army-worm should not molest the cotton, and the fall be moderately dry, that there will be gathered from 2500 to 3000 lbs. to the acre, of seed cotton.' Some of the farmers have made an experiment of wheat raising in the vicinity of La Grange. It has proved very successful, the soil yielding from thirty five to forty bushels to the acre of excellent grain. A gentlemen in the neighbourhood of Austin gathered from sixteen acres the nett amount of five hundred bushels of merchantable wheat.

RUSTICATING.— A humorous correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune, writing from some unheard of place in Missouri, enlightens the newspaper reading public touching one of the modes in which loafers pick up a living. He says:—

About two months since there strayed to this village, from parts unknown, a "customer," who immediately attracted the attention of our order loving, peace-preserving gentry. He was evidently of the 'Dicky Doubt' class, but what rendered him particularly the object of attention was a head from one half of which all umbrageousness was shorn, while the other half boasted a fleece of some six inches in length, fiery red, & wiry as the mouetache of a grizzly bear. When we add to this peculiarity a coat partaking somewhat of the characteristics of a certain many colored garment we read of in scripture, we need scarcely wonder that the gentleman was soon fit upon as an escaped 'jail bird'; one perhaps who had flown from the strong cage at Jefferson City. He was soon, consequently, arrested and as his answers were anything but satisfactory, he was accommodated with quarters in our county jail. The keeper of the state penitentiary was immediately written to, but his reply threw no light upon the subject,' moreover the wrong side of his head was shaved, and he could not possibly belong to that establishment Letters were next addressed to the keepers of other penitentiaries in neighboring states, but with like success. What was to be done? The only alternative now seemed a writ of habeas corpus, and a subsequent inquisition for vagrancy.—Accordingly "hopeful" was brought forth, and the following dialogue ensued between himself and 'his honor,' previous to farther proceedings.

Justice.—'What is your name, sirrah?'

Prisoner—Puddin,' sir!

J.—'Pudding?—that is a strange name! Is that all?'

P.—'No—they sometimes calls me Puddin' and Tame.'

J.—'Stranger still! Well what is your employment—how do you obtain a living'

P—'A livin'? Oh, that's easy; sometimes by doin' things 'long shore; sometimes by rusticatin.' I am rusticatin' now—though I commonly do that in winter 'ceptin' when I go South.'

J—'Rusticating! What do you mean by that? Explain yourself.'

P.—,Why rusticatin' is comin' the thing over the verdant—snakin' the green 'uns—goin' into retiracy, as the newspapers says.'

J.—'Come, come, Mr. What-d'ye-call-um, you must be more explicit; speak in plain English, or I will at once commit you as a vagrant.'

P—'Jist as you please, Judge—I'm not at all tired of rusticatin' yet as the yeller fever aint over down South.' I s'pect; and this here's a werry agreeable place, 'specially as you gives us coffee.'

J.—'Then you are pleaed with your situation?'

P.—'Werry much; I assure you; and as you're a clever sort of a covey, considerin,' I'll tell you all about it—'ceptin' the 'long shore business, which belongs to the craft, and I wont dewulge—no, I'm a man of honor! But, as I was sayin', the rusticatin' business is mine—that's my own business, and I hope you wont 'stall me, as nobody knows that branch of the profession but me, and I dont want to let it out yet';

J.—'Proceed I am all attention.'

P.—'Well, see, when I gets tired of the 'long shore business, which, for certain reasons, gits sometimes onpleasant, I jist cuts off this here hair, this fashion and turns this here coat, sorter like the polly-ti-shuns does one half ways, and then people thinks I's a convict, and gives me quarters till they finds out they 've been come it over, like you has, then they gives me a kick, and sets me loose again, as I s'pect you will. I een a'most always selects the country for my operations, as they haint got no tread mills, and gives good prowishons; that's the reason I calls it rusticatin'!'

It need scarcely be added that Mr. 'Puddin and Tame' received notice to quit.

VARIETIES OF DISEASE AND THEIR CURE—Numerous as are the complaints to which mankind are liable, they all spring from one cause, and that cause lies in the stomach. Here the food concentrates for the support of the whole body, & from thence is distributed throughout the frame. How necessary is it then that this particular function of the human form should be looked after in time. Stainburn's Vegetable Extract Pills, formed exclusively from vegitable extracts, are one of the most valuable medicines ever discovered for removing all complaints which become mixed with the system, from errors of diet operating upon the bowels. From this, and this cause alone, arise all complaints which terminate in death.

DIED,

At his residence near this town, on Thursday last, after a lingering illness, RICHARD WARD STEWART, (Printer.) in the 30th year of his age,

This young gentleman we took into our office at an early age and he remained with us for seventeen years, discharging his duties during all that time with an earnest determination to please us. His untiring assiduity to our interest won upon our affections and we followed his remains to his last resting place, with as much sadness as if he had been our own near relative. He was a truly high minded, honorable man—and his innocent and amiable life closed in peace.—Ed.

At his residence, on Kent Island, on Friday last, William S. Hambleton, Esqr formerly a member of the House of Delegates, and a most estimable citizen.

In this town, on Saturday evening last, Mrs. Sarah, wife of James Kersey, after a lingering illness.

Departed this life on Wednesday the 20th inst. Solomon Dickinson, infant son of Dr. Samuel P., and the late Lucretia Thomas Dickinson.

Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not—for of such is the kingdom of God—St. Luke. XVIII 16.

Dear little form! doom'd to awake
The countless joys, that hope inspires;
Those sylphs have fled;
And hope, sweet hope itself retires!
Dear little form, thy visage wrought
With such high skill, such matchless care
Is now despoiled; one tenant yet.—
Thy last sweet smile still lingers there.
To decorate our last adieu
Perhaps that last sweet smile was given,
Or else to meet some peerless cherub
Who waits to hail its mate in heaven.

Suddenly on Sunday evening, 17th instant, in Baltimore, Mrs. Eliza Jones, widow of Dr. Alfred Jones, late of Q. Anne's county, Eastern Shore of Maryland.

At the residence of Thomas Burchnal, Esq. in this county on Sunday evening the 17th instant, Joshua B. Taylor, aged about 24 years, he was truly an industrious, steady and correct young man, and much respected by his acquaintances.
