For the Easton Gazette.

Mr. Graham,

Will you permit me, through the columns of your interesting paper, to make a few remarks upon a subject that has long been impressed upon my mind, and one which I fear has not received that consideration from the great mass of our citizens which its importance demands. I trust it will not be doubted that every thing that is calculated to promote the general interests of the community in any form, should receive the undivided sanction and patronage of the public, and although this and more may be conceded on all hands, yet, do we not often witness with regret, that men engaged in public enterprises are frequently compelled to abandon them, or barely make a meagre support for their families, in consequence of not receiving that encouragement in business which their attention & industry justly entitle them to. The thirst for foreign articles of trade (and we would not doubt the necessity for it in some few cases) has contributed in a great degree in bringing about these disastrous results, until the opinion has prevailed to such an extent as to induce the belief that nothing of home manufacture can be as good or as cheap as that purchased & brought from the emporium of our State and it is owing to these absurd and fallacious opinions that enterprising mechanics are frequently deprived of employment until the strong arm of industry becomes paralyzed, & they are compelled, through necessity and must to their disadvantage, seek employment in another quarter. But such deleterious views, although still adhered too by many, yet I am pleased to believe are gradually giving way and I trust the time will speedily come when the people of this county will see their true interests and rightly appreciate them by extending the fostering hand of encouragement to those who merit their patronage and support

Among the various mechanical establishments in Easton, we know of none equal in point of practical utility with the Farmers Foundry and machine shop, conducted at this time by Messrs Hussey and Hopkins. These Gentlemen certainly merit the highest praise not only for their indefatigable industry and attention to business, but for the many important improvements they now make in their line, as well as the superior manner in which they have work executed.

My attention has been recently called (by my old Friend the Register) to a piece of mechanism in the form of a Press and seal for the Orphans Court of this county, which has just been finished at their establishment, that will in point of beauty, neatness and superior workmanship, excel anything of the kind in the State, and will challenge, the scrutiny of the veriest skeptic in the county, as to the possibility of executing a nicer piece of work.

Every part of it appears to be marked with the nicest mechanical genius, and is well worth the attention of a discerning public.

A FARMER.

Marrying in Haste and Repenting Afterwards—A case of peculiar interest has been before the Court of Chancery, New York, of which the Aurora gives the following account: "A lady not yet seventeen, applies to be divorced from her husband, she having been entrapped into a marriage which has never been consummated. She is an only daughter, and heiress to a large fortune. Some months back, a young gentleman, who is studying law here, was introduced to her family at a ball, and wished to visit them.—He made love to the fair lady, appointed a rendezvous, and the twain went to a parson and had the ceremony performed. Things went on as before for some weeks until the quasi bride and her family were about to make a tour to the South, and then the semi-husband declared himself and claimed his bride. A change in the mean time come o'er the papa and mamma and they did not give so much encouragement as before. The real state of things was then discovered, and the delivery up of the young wife demanded. A refusal ensued and a Court of Equity was appealed to to annul the marriage. A decision is looked for with great anxiety by both parties.'

There is a clock maker in Charleston, Mr. Stein, who has almost discovered perpetual motion. He some time since constructed a clock that ran for one year without winding up; this clock was its own pendulum and gave on its face, the time at London Paris and Charleston; it was raffled out for sixty chances at five dollars each and is now in England. The Mercury adds—

Mr. Stein is working at present at a clock which is moved by a spring and can also be propelled by weight; it has only four wheels and its mechanism is very simple; it makes on 41 revolutions during the term of ten years, and it need not be wound up in that time. Mr. Stein avers, that if he puts an additional wheel into this clock with one hundred teeth, it will go one hundred years without being wound up, and nevertheless the whole clock wants only five pounds, weight to be kept going. Mr. Stein will have a clock of the above description ready in four months time, and will then give all friends of curious mechanism an opportunity to judge for themselves.

AN OLD NEGRESS.—We are informed, says the Cheraw (S. C.) Gazette, that on a plantation near Georgetown, there now lives, or did a short time ago reside comfortable and happy in her old age, a negro woman, originally from Africa whose age as near as can be computed is about 132 years. She was brought to this country 90 years ago, and was then the mother of a family in Africa.—The children which she bore since her removal to this country, with her self are all superannuated. The old woman was, when our informant last saw her lively and talkative, and enjoys herself under the protection of a kind master, free from toil and free from care.

Ninth Annual Report of the Union Dorcas Society.

AGREEABLY to the requirement of the Constitution the Board of Officers of the Union Dorcas Society respectfully present their ninth annual report.

The Board feel grateful to Almighty God for having given so many cheering evidences of his approval of their feeble efforts to do good since the formation of the above society. Although the most of us have suffered sorrow and affliction during the past year, Death has passed us over, and we have been spared, we we humbly hope, for future usefulness.

Our Committee have regularly visited all those within their knowledge whom they thought merited assistance. In the month of November (the commencement of the official year) 8 persons were assisted. In December twelve, all more or less indisposed;—one died, for whom grave clothes were obtained In January 9 all indisposed; in February 12, some indisposed; in March 12, several of whom were sick; in April 8, in May 8; in June 6, one of whom was sick; in July 7, several of whom were sick; in August 7, the most of whom were sick; in September 8 were visited, all of them indisposed, several very sick; one died; in October 8 were visited, the most of whom were indisposed.

The Treasurer reports balance in the Treasury, November, 1842 $00 86

Received from annual subscribers	22 50
Donations	48 56¼

("Among the donations received was one of two dollars from a lady or gentleman unknown, who requested that it might be noticed only in this manner.")

Received from Prot. Episcopal Church	$14 07
" " Meth. E Church	11 50
" " Meth P. Church	2 69
Amount received	$100 12½
Expended	100 00
Remaining in the Treasury	12½

Received donations in wood, groceries, drygoods, shoes and medicines to the amount of about $85 00

By the above statement it will be perceived that the treasury is almost empty, and that we are dependent upon the public for the means of supplying many of the necessary wants of the poor during the approaching year. We have too much confidence in you to believe that our society will be permitted to suffer for the want of means. The most of our pensioners are aged and afflicted females who are able to do but little towards obtaining their support, therefore require almost as much assistance (fuel excepted) in summer as in winter. Many to whom we now appeal for assistance are surrounded not only by all the comforts, but the luxuries of life and know not what are the wants of the suffering poor. Were you to go into that forlorn looking room in which are two aged widows (one of whom has seen the frosts of eighty ninety winters) with scarcely a comfort, and almost entirely dependent upon the benevolent for the common necessaries of life, we think that your heart would be touched, and you would regret that you had never given before, or that you had not given more liberally. Though you may be in prosperity now, you know not what a day may bring forth. To morrow you may be in adversity. Should this be your lot, will it not be consoling to reflect that part of your substance was expended in relieving the wants of suffering humanity.

Our Society is so well known that it is almost needless to say that it belongs to no particular sect of Christians, but is composed of Members of almost every Religious Denomination in our town,—and all (religious or irreligious) who are considered worthy are assisted.

We return our thanks to our friends and hope that they will continue to aid us. We know that the times are hard, but none feel it so keenly as the poor.—Are you afraid that you will diminish your property by giving a part of it to your suffering brother? Remember, he that has pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he giveth shall be paid him again.'

[From the New Haven Courier

A MOTHER'S LOVE FOR A MANIAC.

Near the easterly base of the West Rock, opposite the place where the ascent commences, may be seen a small rustic cottage surrounded by a few stunted trees, and standing isolated from the world, by its remoteness from all neighbors. Few evidences of fertility are found in that region. Sterile hill sides and plains where vegetation can find but feeble hold, pervades that Rock, and the chance wayfarer there, wonders how the inmates of such a home can find enough by which to sustain nature. But the wants are few and simple, when reduced to such as are absolutely required to nourish the animal economy, and even upon the desolate heath, and under the shade of the sterile mountain, may be found the means of moderate sustenance and support.

The reader will find in the humble abode to which we have just alluded, but two occupants. In the stillness of that secluded spot, strange faces are seldom seen in winter, although during the summer many visiters to West Rock pass it by. But during the long, dreary inclement months none, save the two we have mentioned, are to found in this isolated abode. And who are they? We commend the reader to go and see. A mother, with her maniac son, and he chained to the floor? None other are there. This mother has had a prepossessing look. Her costume and address are better than the mass of her sex, in such an unfavorable station for the development of character and refinement She was not lonely' she said even during the dreariness of winter. She had her son for society.—She had him to watch over and care for, and now he was chained he was secure. He could'nt get away from her. He had been insane for eight years. Formerly he acted as a guide to the 'Cave' but his insanity increased, and he often wandered, and days would often elapse before he returned. He was subject to fits, but he was now secure in the house and she had him for society and to comfort her! This is the undying nature of woman's love, of a mother's affection for her children!

Such was the cheerful response of a self denying parent, when replying to the inquiries of a stranger whom she accosted at the door. We inquired for the son, and asked permission to see him. In a small dark apartment to which access was had through the little 'spare' room, we found the chained maniac He lay upon a low bed, with a dim light admitted through an opening in the wall. He was occupied in knitting, and thus kept in repose, seldom having any violent paroxysms of insanity, so soothing even to the disordered mind is employment. Rarely heve we seen a face which bore such evidence of character and beauty. None of the usual squalidness of extreme poverty in his looks. None of the fierceness and matted hair of ordinary maniacs! His fine Grecian face and well moulded features pallid from confinement. His dark eye flashed out unnatural fire. His rich beard and black hair drooping in ringlets, over his wild and supernatural face. These were prominent characteristics of the son whom the mother loves, and there he lives, in his darkened apartment, chained to the floor!
