[For the Easton Gazette.]

TO THE COMMISSIONERS FOR TALBOT COUNTY.

Gentlemen,—My attention has recently been called to a 'Notice' in the 'Easton Star' of my appointment by your honorable body, as 'Collector of Direct Taxes for 1842 and 1843 for District No. 3 accompanied by a request that I would signify at my earliest convenience, my acceptanceor non-acceptance of the aforementioned appointment. As your communication was made through the public press, I presume that you intended me to reply to it through the same channel.

I beg you to accept my profound acknowledgements for the confidence which you have manifested in me by the voluntary offer of a responsible trust, In bestowing an office upon an individual whose political opinions are known to be entirely at variance with those entertained by a majority of your honorable body, you have exhibited a degree of independence which is the more to be admired because it is so rarely met with and which relieves the individual upon whom the appointment is conferred from the suspicion of having sought to obtain it by improper means. whatever motives may be supposed to have influenced you in making the selection. Presuming that you were actuated by a sincere desire to carry out the excellent recommendations of our Executive, and to uphold the faith of the State by the collection of the tax which has been levied for the payment of the interest upon her public debt, I regret that your selection should have fallen upon an individual whose duties as one of the Representatives of the State in the meetings of the several Canal and Rail Road companies are calculated materially to interfere with those of Collector of Direct Taxes It may be said that this difficulty could readily be obviated by a resignation of my present office — But as that can be filled by the Legislature alone and therefore would remain vacant for nearly a year, it appears to be more advisable that I should decline the one which can be filled at the pleasure of your honorable body Not having solicited either of them or even been consulted with regard to them until after the appointments had been made, I may at least be permitted to decline the acceptance of one of them, and especially of that one which is the more profitable of the two. To accept both, would be in opposition to those republican principles which require that both the duties and the honors of the State should be distributed generally among her citizens and which I must be excused from violating even at the risk of incurring the displeasure of your honorable body. These are reasons which apply peculiarly to myself and which I hope will be deemed sufficient to justify the course I have determined to pursue.

There are others, however, which although of a more general nature are nevertheless equally applicable. In popular governments the execution of the laws depends in no small degree upon the support which they may receive from public opinion; and they are more likely to receive that support when their execution is entrusted to those who coincide in their political opinions with that portion of the people which is supposed to be in a majority at the time. and where, as in this case, efforts are known to have been made to envite the people in opposition to a law, it appears not unreasonable to suppose that it would be more cheerfully acquiesced in, if the officers who are to execute it were selected from among the political associates of those to whom that opposition is chiefly confined.

For these reasons, gentlemen, I have determined to decline the appointment which you have conferred upon me; but I shall always be ready to give my aid as a citizen to those who may be appointed to execute this and all other laws that may be enacted by the Legislature and which the courts, (the only proper tribunals for the decision of such questions,) may not have already decided to be in violation of the constitution and therefore not binding upon the citizens of the State

I beg you to accept the assurances of the distinguished consideration with which I am gentlemen,

Your obt. servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

BONNETS, &c. IN NEW YORK.—A Correspondent of the Boston Transcript thus describes the fashions in New York:

'Within the past week an invoice of bonnets has arrived from Paris, and on Sunday the congregations of the fashionable churches looked like beds of lilies and roses. At an early hour on the morning of this arrival, Park Place was thronged with carriages, and Mrs. Lawson's spacious rooms were filled with eager belles, all anxious for the first choice.—The latest style is really very beautiful. or as the ladies say, 'sweet.' The one I have been most pleased with is a perfect flower. The material is white figured muslin delicately trimmed with ribbands and roses, in form like the cup of a morning glory. If the humming bird & honey bees don't light upon it in Broadway, I shall think they show a great want of taste. For dresses, chameleon silks are much worn—three distinct colours, by some magic of art, being thrown on a plain ground, looking as if 'Iris dipt the woof.' A new style of evening dress appeared at the last 'hop' at the Astor, which attracted the attention of connoisseurs as something quite original and beautiful. A white muslin, with two broad and richly colored borders, looking like an illuminated title page.'

PHILADELPHIA CUSTOM HOUSE. We are informed that there were fourteen dismissals from the Custom House on Monday. Cause, anti Tylerism, or a suspicion thereof. Their successors had better make hay whilst the sun shines.—They have just a year and a day to do it.—North American.

DREADFUL MURDER.

About a quarter before six o'clock on Monday evening, a cold blooded murder was committed in a small frame house in Vine street, a few doors below Nixon, and within a short distance of the river Schuylkill. The name of the murdered man is James Lemon. He was the occupier of the house in which the tragedy occurred, and obtained a livelihood by selling oranges, lemons, and other fruit. The murderer is a travelling clock maker, calling himself John Farkin. Farkin undertook to repair a clock for Lemon, agreeing to wait for his money; but he had no sooner finished his job than he demanded his pay, and threatened, that if his request was not complied with, he would break the clock to pieces. He attempted to carry his threats into execution, but was prevented by Lemon. In the struggle, however he drew a file, or some sharp instrument from his pocket, stabbed Lemon, in the right breast, who dropped down dead; he then stabbed the son of the latter, a small boy, about ten years of age, who struck him with a broom handle when he saw him assail his father and made an attempt to stab the wife of Lemon and another woman, who were in the house at the time, on their endeavoring to arrest his flight. He fled from the building, pursued by the wife of the murdered man, crying 'stop the murderer!' The cries of the woman roused the attention of a lad, who with some others followed Farkin. A carpenter of the name of J J. Morris, in attempting to secure him, received a thrust in the body, which it is feared will terminate fatally; as did also a man of the name of Henry King A large crowd had been collected by this time, and pressed closely on the murderer, but he kept them at bay with the instrument in his hand Twice he was knocked down by stones, but rose again, and pursued his way, until he reached the corner of Schuylkill Fifth and Vine stree's, when a blow from a stone felled him to the earth, and a man of the name of Baney Smith rushed upon him and secured him.

He was taken before Alderman Potter of Spring Garden, who having ascertained the circumstances of the case, committed him to the County Prison to await the result of the Coroner's Inquest. On his way to prison in charge of Police Officer Evans, he heard that Lemmon was dead when he said, he wished he had killed them all; and exulted in what he had done.

An inquest was held by coroner Brelsford, yesterday morning, at the house of the deceased, when the following evidence was adduced in relation to the murder.

Ann Delvin who was in the house at the time the murder was committed, stated that the deceased and Farkin were both sober. When the latter asked for his money, he told Lemmon that he was a travelling man and it could not suit him to wait until Saturday. Lemmon then told him that if he was short of money he would give him a supper, and lodging and breakfast in the morning. When Lemmon was stabbed his son, who was s a dog in the room behind Farkin, seized a broomstuck, and struck the latter. Farkin then turned round and said 'You d—n rascal, you are at me too,' hit the boy on the head with his hand, and stabbed him in the thigh with the instrument. He then left the boy and made a thrust with the instrument at the witness.

The jury, after deliberating for a few minutes, returned a verdict—that the said James Lemmon came to his death in consequence of a wound in the breast inflicted by a sharp pointed instrument in the hands of a man calling himself John Farkin.—Chronicle.

RIGHTS OF CONSCIENCE—Important Decision.—The Hon. Judge Banks, in a case recently tried in Lehigh county Pa., has given an opinion directly the reverse of that given by Judge Lewis of Lycoming, a year or so ago, respecting the rights which a parent has to control his minor children in their religious opinions. It appears that a father entered a Methodist Episcopal Church for his daughter, a girl of fifteen years, of age, took her by the arm, raised her from her knees and told her to come home. This produced excitement, which terminated in violence and assault and battery, upon which an in indictment was found and the case tried.

In the opinion of Judge Banks, given on this occasion, the constitution guarantees the right of every individual to adopt any creed or mode of worship which his conscience approves, though this liberty of conscience is restricted to the worship of Almighty God and extends to no other worship whatever.

The constitution declares that 'no human authority can in any case whatever control or interfere with the rights of conscience.' The exercise of parental authority by a father, so as to control or interfere with the rights of conscience of a minor child, would, in Judge Banks's opinion, be an exercise of human authority, so as to control or interfere with the rights of conscience in a particular case, whereas it is declared that it cannot be done in any case whatever. This, he says, is the fundamental law of the land. It is binding upon all parents.

Judge Lewis, it will be remembered gave his opinion in a similar case, that during legal minority, the law of filial obedience takes the precedence of all other laws which are binding on the child.

DESTRUCTION OF SHEEP.—The Upper Marlboro' Gazette of Thursday says a flock of valuable sheep belonging to William B. Hill, Esq. near this village was destroyed by dogs on Sunday last There were one hundred sheep in the flock eighty of which were killed, and the remainder injured, probably beyond recovery.

WORCESTER COUNTY.—At a mass meeting of the Whig voters of Worcester County, held at Snow Hill on Tuesday, 26th of March, for the purpose of electing Delegates to represent the County in the Gubernational Convention, which is to be held in the in City of Baltimore on the 30th of April, the following persons were elected:—Teagle Townsend, Zadock P. Henry, Dr. Wm. H. Selby, Edward Lamdin and Dr. John S. Martin. Flour of this delegation, (if not all) are for J. J. Speed, of Baltimore for governor.

KIDNAPPERS CAUGHT.—The Westchester, Pa., Herald, records the arrest there on Tuesday of two men supposed to be kidnappers. They had in their custody a colored citizen; and on refusing to give him up, rescue was determined upon and effected. One of them was shot in the shoulder before they were captured. They had two companions, who fled.—It is said these kidnappers are citizens of Maryland.

APPRECIATE HEALTH —It has become a fact too well established to be overthrown by the dogmas of sceptics, that animal food tends to make the blood impure, while a vegetable diet preserves it in all its pristine purity. So well convinced of this, are most medical practitioners, that they now invariably prescribe medicines. the component parts of which are derived from roots and plants.

Stainburn's Vegetable Extract Pills being composed of the purer and finer parts of vegetables; well known, & described in the materia medica as possessing renovating qualities, are now administered in preference to any other physic. Their effects are truly wonderful, and their immediate and direct action on the system, has given them a character unprecedented in the annals of physic. Such as have a regard for their health; should not omit to make use of them.

Price 25 cents per. box. Office 338 Broadway, N. Y. next door below the Tabernacle.

Said pills are sold in Easton by the agent E. M. DAWSON & BROTHER, and by agents published in another part of our paper.
