And further gave in evidence the title papers showing a legal title in the plaintiffs in the cause to the locus in quo and the lands so located on the plats and proved the location of the same by witnesses who were on the survey and pointed out the same to the Surveyor. And further offered evidence in like manner tending to show that the defendant broke and entered the said lands and mined and carried away & disposed of to its own use large quantities of coal from said lands at the places located on the plats. And further that seventy acres of said lands were underlaid with the "fourteen feet vein" of coal lying in a contiguous body as located on the plats & which as a whole and intact as a body could have been worked with profit to the plaintiffs. and mined the headings Nos. 1 & 4. and the rooms connected therewith in such manner as necessarily rendered that portion of said coal land lying between "Maidens Delight" and "Mount Clare" valueless to the plaintiffs thence-forth. and further that the mining and taking away of the said coal at the said points designated on the plats necessarily thenceforth diminished the value of the said whole contiguous body of said coal lands, and further offered evidence tending to show the value of each ton of coal in place and when severed from its native bed, and further offered evidence tending to show that at the time the trespasses were committed the defendant knew that the locus in quo, was not its land, but was the plaintiffs land, and further that the coal under the said seventy acres of coal lands was of good quality and merchantable coal, and further offered evidence
