At a distance the light looks unlike other illuminations— throwing out most beautiful rays, which, finely colored, spread magnificently from the bright centre. The inventors say they can make the light of different colors, and even alternately change from one color to another. The apparatus for producing this illumination displays great ingenuity, and a thorough knowledge of that portion of science which relates to the principles they have so successfully applied.

THE SINKING FUND.

Efforts are making to suspend, if not destroy, the operation of the "Sinking Fund" of the State, and through which, the principal public debt of the State is ultimately to be discharged. The reason assigned for the attack upon the fund is that the State does not pay the full interest on her debt! But is it not of greater importance, to the public creditors and to the people of Maryland, that provisions should be made for the ultimate extinguishment of the debt, than that every thing should be jeoparded for the present payment of interest? Although we desire to see all the interest punctually paid, yet we regard the "Sinking Fund" as sacred and inviolable, and the Treasurer in his report to the Legislature at December Session, 1841, seems also to have regarded it as a sacred trust. Why should a temporary inconvenience overrule the wise and settled policy of the State? To kill the goose for the golden eggs, would be about as judicious as to take the "Sinking Fund" to pay the accruing interest on the public debt! Let other means be provided, but let the Fund remain untouched. The Eastern Shore has a right to expect that the Fund shall remain untouched. She has no direct interest in the public works, but she has a very direct one in providing for the payment of the State debt.

As far as we understand it, the "Sinking Fund" is principally invested in State Bonds—these draw interest—that interest is placed in the form of Coupons and sold to the people to be received in payment of taxes due the State. These Coupons are sold for more than the State Stock is selling for, although they do not sell at par—the proceeds derived from the sale of Coupons, is invested in the purchase of State Stock or Bonds, and by these means the debt is gradually and steadily diminishing.

If it be objected that the State gets more for her coupons then she gives for her Stock, we answer that a large amount of State Bonds was sold at immense discounts to provide money to carry on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and those who purchased those Bonds, cannot very reasonably complain because the stock is not now upon a price with coupons. But we hope that the State will not change her settled policy, and if we shall not live to see the State clear of debt, it will be a consolation to think that our children will be able to boast that Maryland is free from debt, by the wise provisions of their fathers.

The act of 1835, chap. 395, which authorised the borrowing of six millions of dollars on the credit of the State, pledged to the public creditors that in the event of a public tax becoming necessary to support the credit of the government, that all goods wares, merchandise, ships, vessels, money at interest, stock, &c. should be taxed for that purpose. As a further security, the same act provided the present "Sinking Fund" for the ultimate payment of the debt and directs the investment of accruing interest in that fund as it may arise, and says it "SHALL BE INVIOLABLY PLEDGED, for the redemption of the debt!" And yet notwithstanding this explicit and binding pledge of the State's faith and honor, attempts are in progress to suspend the application of the interest on the "Sinking Fund." Once touch the interest and the fund, losing its sacredness, will ere long be taken for the same purpose. The Eastern Shore and the landed interest of the State have a right to insist upon the inviolability of the fund and the preservation of the State's faith, pledge, and integrity.—Kent News.

THE TEXAS QUESTION.

A movement took place in the Senate on the 5th inst., on the subject of "Annexation," not less important in itself than it was for the indication of sentiment which it drew from several senators in regard to the joint resolution of the House of Representatives, and the light which was thereby shed on that probable fate of the measure.

The bill heretofore introduced by Mr. BENTON touching the annexation of Texas was, at his request, taken up pro forma, to enable him to offer a substitute for that bill. The substitute itself will be found in the proceedings of the Senate under the proper head. The introduction of this substitute the honorable mover prefaced with some remarks, in which he enumerated various objections to the joint resolution of the House of Representatives, and stated clearly, and we may say forcibly, the reason why he could not concur in that proposition. Mr. RIVES also, in the course of a short debate which arose on a motion to refer the substiute to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, very clearly indicated his opinion that the measure of annexation was one which could only be effected by the treaty-making power.

After a brief debate, (of which some account will be given in our next,) Mr. Benton's bill was laid on the table to wait the general discussion of the subject, which is expected to come up next week.—Nat. Intelligencer.

DESTRUCTION OF THE N. Y. TRIBUNE OFFICE.

—We are deeply pained at the subjoined statement, and heartily sympathize with our friends Greely & McElrath, who, we gladly perceive, are insured at least in part. They are gallant spirits, and will rally at this pressure. We copy from the Herald:

At four o'clock yesterday morning, a terrible fire was discovered to be raging in the block of buildings occupied by the Tribune printing establishment, corner of Spruce and Nassau streets. Every effort was made by the fire companies to master the raging element, but to no purpose, and in the course of a couple of ours after the first notice of the blaze, the Tribune newspaper concern, the periodical depot of Mr. W. H. Graham, the bookseller and stationers' establishment of Jansen & Bell, the liquor store occupied by Mr. Kennedy, and the German establishment of the Deutsche Schnellpost—a German journal published in this city for the last 3 years with a large stock of books, &c., were totally consumed with all they contained. Mr. Graham lost not only his stock, but $400 in cash and his gold watch, and narrowly escaped with his life by leaping out of an elevated window upon the deep snow beneath.

The Germans, who had a ball in Tammany Hall, which adjoined the burned building in the rear, were alarmed in the midst of their revelry, when all was going on "merry as a marriage bell," and we understand that the rear of old Tammany got a severe scorching. Some insurance is effected upon these buildings, but nothing like the actual loss. Kennedy had no insurance, and the Deutsche Schnellpost very little. Jansen and Bell's loss is over $10,000, Greely & McElearth at least as much. The origin of the fire is attributed to the negligence of a boy who, in kindling a fire in one of the rooms of the Tribune establishment, made use of a newspaper to promote the draught which not only took fire, but took wing to some other apartment, and set fire to a mass of papers, and as the partition walls in the interior were composed of wood, the progress of the flames was rapid in the extreme. Not a brick remains upon another, at the moment we write, so thoroughly did the work of destruction go on.—We are happy to state that no lives have been lost, although several persons slept in the building where the fire broke out.

There is an insurance of $2,000 on the Tribune Buildings, and $8,000 on the Tribune printing materials.

MARINE DISASTERS—BY THE LATE GALE.

The ship Sheffield, from Hull (England) bound to New York, went ashore on Wednesday night on the south side of Long Island, about thirty two miles from the city. She has since bilged, and will, it is supposed, be a total loss, with a considerable part of her cargo, which consisted of iron, linseed oil, &c. The passengers and crew were all landed in safety.

The Schoomer Reeside from Boston for New York, also went ashore on Long Island, and broke in pieces. It is apprehended that all on board at the time have perished. She was a Boston and N. York packet, commanded by Captain Langley.

The whale-ship Isaac Howland narrowly escaped being wrecked, by having her masts cut away, and subsequently receiving timely assistance from the revenue cutter Jackson and a pilot boat, with whose assistance she was carried into New Bedford. She had made a successfull voyage and obtained a full cargo of oil in an absence of only nineteen months.

The schooner Saluda, from Marblehead for New York, went ashore about a mile from the light-house on Race Point, (Cape Cod,) on Friday night. The vessel and cargo are a total loss, and the following persons perished: B. T. Ames, master; Thomas Payton, of Fredericksburg, Va; and John Williams, (colored,) of Baltimore. Peter Peterson, the mate was saved.

The Boston and New York papers contain, in addition to the above, notice of many disasters to coasting vessels, none of which, so far as we learn, were attended with loss of life. Among them we note that the schooner Texas, from Fredericksburg for Bsoton, went ashore and bilged; and that the schooner Lucinda Snow, from Alexandria for St. Johns, sustained some slight damage.

For the Gazette.

Mr. Editor:—Will you favour a friend with the use of your columns to make some inquiries respecting a Social Club, lately sprung into existence in our town; in which, as you will perceive, we feel an interest.

To the HON. MR. PERFECTION,
Treasurer of the Fairy Club.

Easton, Feb. 3d. 1845.

SIR:—Wishing to become a member of your Club and not knowing the locality of the Officers under their new names, I have I have had recourse to the present mode of soliciting more satisfactory information of the modus operandi, than is given in the article published in the Star of the 28th ult.

I have had considerable difficulty, Sir, in making choice of a correspondent from the members of your Club. I am aware that it would be in accordance with parliamentary usages to address His highness Precious Diadem, but having been early taught to conduct myself lowly and reverently to all my betters, with a low bow I pass by the crowned head, wishing him success in his aspirations and the enjoyment of Paradisiacal bliss when attained. Secretary Zebra, though more elegant in appearance, I imagine may resemble in some of the qualities of the mind, a cousin german of his, celebrated for obstinacy. As for the Jewels, they sparkle in the night only, for the edification of the melancholy minstrels of the midnight hour, and such an everyday mortal as myself might gaze as intently as did the Israelite of old upon the Urim and Thummim, without discovering a ray of light to illuminate his darkened understanding. From the jaw and the claw of the Hyena may Providence deliver me! I raised my eyes and gazed upon his noble rival the Eagle, & paused,—but thinking he might mistake me for a goose and pounce down upon my defenceless head, I turned away in dread and looked towards the Hawk,—but the hawk is a sly bird and right mischievous, therefore I concluded not to trust him. One glance I cast high above all these, even into the Celestial regions, but alas! there is clinging about me too much "taint of earthly sod" to approach a being from the other world.

Earthly Perfection! what more could mortal ask, why did I hesitate a moment! I address you Sir, perfectly confident that you will answer my inquiries with perfect courtesy, having perfect knowledge of these matters, and being perfectly able to express yourself in writing with perfect accuracy and elegance, thus having naught to fear from Quid or even Hoc himself. I wish you Sir, to be particularly explicit as to the manner of initiation, the "Optical illusion" puzzles me greatly. Are the members mesmerized into a state of clairvoyance, and thus enabled to find out the whereabouts of an absentee? You will please not neglect to give me some information concerning the affairs of your own department, as I particularly wish to know to what objects the finances are applied.

I have thus stated the points on which information is desired, and hope you will let me hear from you at your earliest convenience,—and oblige,

Yours, &c. &c.
