THE NATIONAL FAIR.

The extensive and commodious building which is in course of erection in Washington city for the use of this very interesting and important national gathering, is advancing rapidly to its completion, and there is no reason to doubt that it will fully answer every purpose for which it is intended.

That patriotic purpose is to show to Congress and the country the progress which has been made in American art, industry, and ingenuity, under the fostering care of a Protective Tariff, within the last few years. The exhibition of this progress, if it establishes the fact, which the circular issued by the American Institute of New York says can be established, that "every article that can be manufactured at home, and which has received a protective duty for seven consecutive years, has, by home competition, and consequent development of ingenuity alone, been reduced in price to the consumer below the foreign cost at the time of imposing the duty," will be worth all the arguments that ever have been made or can be presented upon the subject.

We are glad to find, from the public journals, that the friends to domestic industry and skill are bestirring themselves, with a most praiseworty zeal, to render the approaching fair worthy of the interests which it is intended to represent, and whose cause it is designed to advocate and advance. A most excellent circular has been published at Boston, addressed "to the manufacturers, mechanics, and artisans of New England," by "the Massachussetts Charitable Mechanics Association." In this circular, after pointing out the Fair, the mode in which its business is to be conducted, and calling upon those whom they address to exert themselves to give effect to the meeting, we find the following excellent recommendation:

"We would, in conclusion, allude to a common misconception prevalent among certain classes of artisans, that their productions are either too rude or not of sufficient value to form part of a public exhibition. Now, we earnestly request all such to consider that the more common and unpretending branches of labor are precisely the most important, as not being matters of luxury, but indispensable to the every-day uses and comforts of the whole community."

We have also, in the New York papers, an extremely well drawn up circular of the American Institute of that city, in which the very great importance of the Fair, and the necessity that every exertion should be made, and every care taken, that the work now about to be done should be well done, are forcibly pointed out. We hope that every artisan, every manufacturer and every friend of American industry will feel an interest in this truly national exhibition, and do every thing in his power to give it effect, and render it creditable to the country, and an evidence of its prosperity and rapidly advancing progress under the present protective system, which it appears to be the suicidal policy of some persons to destroy.—National Intelligencer.

Boston Sept. 10 1845.

To the sick and afflicted.

Dear Sir,—I take pleasure in communicating through you, to all whom it may concern, and the public generally, the astonishing effect your truly wonderful medicine has had upon me. I have enjoyed perfect health for four or five years. Physicians told me my liver was diseased, and that I might some day die with consumption. Last September, 1845, I took a slight cold, which produced a hacking cough; this continued until February, 1845, when I added another cold; my cough increased I soon lost my appetite, and my strength failed. For six weeks I could not lie upon one side; I sweat very much nights, raised considerable blood during the winter and could not speak a loud word for two weeks. With all these bad symptoms, I had very severe pain in my side and between my shoulders; general debility followed. I was confined to my room about eight weeks. I had buried a sister and brother, both died with consumption. I expected to die myself; my friends also despaired of my life. At this time an uncle who had been benefited himself, advised me to take,

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

I accordingly procured a bottle, took it, and felt some better; obtained another, and a third; then I ceased to bleed, and my cough was much better; but my disease was so deeply rooted, I was obliged to continue taking the Balsam until I had taken seven bottles. I can honestly and truly say, I believe Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry saved my life.

Mrs. MARY B. GOULD.

We are personally acquainted with Mrs. Gould, assisted in taking care of her during her sickness, believe and know the above statement to be true.

DIED,

On the morning of April 30th at the dawn of day, Mrs. MARY MATILDA BENNY, in the 32d year of her age.

The last hours of life were devoted to preparation for the seal of the Christian Covenant of grace, of which she had been for some time desirous, and in which she rejoiced, before her exchange of time for eternity. Her own, had been preceded, in the course of two brief months, by the death of a husband, and a daughter in the bloom of youth; and two infant children alone survive, to know—the more as time advances—the deep grief of a mothers loss.

On Wednesday morning last, Mary Grace, consort of James Grace, in the 45th year of her age. Beloved by all who knew her.

In Caroline county on Monday, March 30th 1846, Arthur John, aged 1 month, 3 weeks and 6 days, only son of Arthur J. and Caroline E. Willis.
