hence the Senate of the United States, to whom these provisions were submitted, fearing that in a settlement the balance might be against us, santioned the report on condition of striking out the second article of the terms of agreement. This second section was as follows:

Article 2d. The Ministers Plenipotentiary of the two parties not being able to agree at present respecting the treaty of alliance of the 6th February, 1778, the treaty of amity and commerce of the same date, and the convention of the 4th of November, 1788, nor upon the indemnities mutually due or claimed, the parties will negotiate further on these at a convenient time; and until they may have agreed on these points, the said treaties and convention shall have no operation.

France accepted the modification thus rendered, with this remarkable addition—"Provided, that by this retrenchment (the expunging of the second article) the two States renounce the respective pretensions which are the subject of the said article." This provision being approved by the Senate of the U. S., to whom it was sent back, became a law, and the claims of our injured citizens were preferred against our own government, which had thus gravely and deliberately assumed the debt.

The most solemn responsibility was thus incurred by our government to its citizens—a responsibility rendered the more binding perhaps, inasmuch as the stipulation was entered into on the part of the United States for the purpose of relieving herself from onerous and embarrassing demands. In the eloquent language of the petitioners' report, made to the Senate by the late Edward Livingston, Dec. 21, 1830, "The government purchased a great public advantage at our expense. We are not disposed to contest the right which has been exercised; but we invoke the eternal principles of justice, enforced as they are by a constitutional provision, when we allege that private property shall not be taken for public use without full indemnity."

Nor has this view of the subject wanted the most ample and honorable support.—Marshall, Madison, Pinkney, Davis, Talmadge, Webster, Everett, Wilkins, Howard, and others, among the most prominent of our statesmen, insisted upon these claims, many of whom furnished elaborate reports upon the subject before the Congress of the United Srates, at different periods.—Thus assumed by the government and defended by the eloquence of her wisest Senators and Representatives, her claims were suffered to lie over from year to year, under the conviction that plenary restitution would ultimately be made. Yielding hearty acquiescence in the laws and ready to take up arms in their defence, the citizens of the United States had a right to demand of the nation to compel a redress of grievances thus inflicted by a foreign power. Was every effort exhausted to obtain this redress from France? In the very midst of negotiation our government, by one act, released France forever from the debt due our merchants and others, and thus beyond doubt assumed the claim, and made itself responsible for the payment. Thus responsible in the face of justice and the world, has the money been paid? Or in the failure to pay, has every honest and chivalric exertion been made towards so desirable a result? Alas! for national honor! after the lapse of so many years of patient endurance on the part of the claimants—after the sanction and support of the greatest men of the nation for so many years, of all political parties and creeds, the whole subject is put summarily to rest by the veto of no less illustrious a functionary, than James K. Polk! For this high-handed measure of outrage upon the feelings and rights of American citizens, upon the sacred principle of justice, upon national faith and honor, there is, there can be no possible justification or even palliation. The act is branded with the basest repudiation, and adds a burning link to the chain of disgraceful events which have marked the administration of the present Executive of the Union. The condition of the Treasury can furnish no honorable apology for such a course; nor the lapse of time during which the claims have been pending. Honesty admits no limitation to a just debt; and although policy might dictate the diversion of the national funds into other channels; or economy suggest the withholding payment of a just claim, these are but the miserable subterfuges of dishonesty. Let us be just or nothing.—Should the Treasury empty itself of the last dollar to pay just claims upon the nation, we say let it be done. Let national faith be first and inviolable.

An able article in the Democratic Review*, for which we are indebted for a lucid and extended review of this whole subject, thus concludes:

"Is it true that this government, the corner stone of whose structure is equal justice to all men—that this government which pretends to hold itself out as a model to other nations, as most careful of the equal rights of all classes and all individuals—that this republic of the United States has really allowed a claim upon its honor and faith, for forty years to lie unanswered and unheeded? Is it really true that, not merely neglectful of the rights of its citizens, it has actually bartered away these rights for a consideration most valuable to itself, and now turns a deaf ear to an appeal to its justice? Is it true, that after the commerce, which it was one of its first duties to protect, has been first despoiled by a foreign government, without either punishment or reparation, it should have been again despoiled by our own government, by trafficking, in equivalent for valuable national inducement, without indemnification, those just claims which, otherwise, the foreigner would not have failed to acknowledge and to pay? These are the questions that vex our mind—to which our national pride would fain give an indignant denial—but to which history, plain facts and naked justice, compel an affirmative response."

COMMISSIONED.—We clip the following from the Baltimore Clipper:

PROMOTION.—We learn that Mr. James H. Smythe has been promoted to the Second Lieutenancy of Capt. John E. Howard's company. Lieut. Smythe was among the first to volunteer at the breaking out of the war, and was appointed Lieutenant in Capt Piper's company of the Baltimore Battalion, but from unforeseen circumstances, was prevented from accepting.

We perceive that a parade sword and belt have been presented to the officers of the company from the citizens of the towns respectively in which they reside. It is due to our townsman, Mr. Smythe, that our own citizens should treat him with the same respect. The cost is a mere trifle, and the gift would be committed we doubt not to gallant and faithful hands.

We have been favored by the Chairman of the appointing committee of the Methodist Protestant Conference, now in session in this town, with the following list of appointments in Easton, for Sunday—

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.
Sunday Morning—Dr. J. S. Reese.
" Afternoon—Josiah Varden.
" Evening—John Morgan.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Sunday Morning—Dr. F. Waters, (if not too unwell)
" Afternoon—L. R. Reese.
" Evening—D. Shermer.

Planting Buggy.

THE subscriber having recently received Letters Patent from the Government of the United States for his improvements in SEED PLANTERS, is now prepared to sell rights for States, Counties or Towns, to those who may wish to purchase for the purpose of building, or vending said machines in any portion of the United States.

It is believed that the great saving of labor and time of those intending to put in a crop of five acres and upwards, either of Corn, Broom Corn, Beans or Peas or even a less quantity of Roots will induce a very general demand for this machine. The advantage of being able to plant from eight to twelve acres in a single day when the ground and weather is favorable, is of itself sufficient to warrant the outlay of a machine aside from the ease and accuracy in performing the labor. Said machine is and may be managed by a boy fourteen years old who may ride upon the machine Certificates in any quantity as to the working of the Planter as above described, might be offered to the public but I choose rather that the purchaser should examine and try the machine himself. No preparation by furrowing or marking is necessary, the Planter doing the whole and rolling in the bargain Those who wish to purchase by States or a number of counties to vend again will have strong inducements offered, The above described machine is a first rate Cultivator when the wheels and dropping apparatus is detached therefrom, which may be done in five minutes

JAMES PUTNAM

NOTICE.—The subscriber having purchased the patent right of the above Machine for this county, respectfully invites the attention of Farmers thereto This machine will plant corn with accuracy each way, either on flashed or listed ground; it can be regulated to plant any distance, and is remarkable for its simplicity as well as accuracy A trial will be made of its capacity on Tuesday the 30th inst. on the farm occupied by T C. Nichols, Esq. a short distance from town—The agricultural community particularly are invited to witness the performance
