after in this matter what we did not desire to do. The indiscreet course of the friends of Mr. T. will have brought it upon him.

CONGRESSIONAL.—Z. W. Potter, Esq., of Denton, has been mentioned as a suitable person to represent his district in the next Congress. Col. Potter is a sterling Whig and combines with brilliant talents and extensive acquirements highly popular and engaging manner. He would make an excellent representative.

We find on our desk a sample of very superior wheat produced on the land of Dr. Sol. M. Jenkins of this town. We are not sufficiently skilled in the varieties of grain to designate its kind, but commend it to general notice as possessing superior size and maturity.

DECENCY.—The last No. of the Loco Foco paper called the "Standard" published in Baltimore city was the following paragraph—

THE WHIG CANDIDATE.—Mr. Goldsborough, is a gentleman of princely fortune, and is remarkable for his sumptuous entertainments. Calf's head is said to be one of his favorite dishes.

Now we ask the people of Talbot, the respectable portion of both parties, if this is not an outrage upon all propriety and decorum.

DEATH.—The Philadelphia papers announce the death of Joseph C. Neal, Esq. the author of "Charcoal Sketches," &c.—He died of inflammation of the brain, in the 40th year of his age. The N. American & U. S. Gazette holds the following language in animadverting upon the untimely demise of this amiable and gifted man.

The heart that has borne, upon the anvil of a rough world, the blows inevitable to humanity is generally attempted, at mid-life, to a power of surface equal to most ills, and can bear the jar of friendships separated, and look down into open graves, with something of philosophy at least in semblance. But the death of Neal, our own Neal, comes to us with that suddenness, and under such circumstance, that we acknowledge ourselves incapable, in our present state of feeling, to do justice to him and ourselves. To the editors of this journal, all of them, Mr. Neal was, from boyhood, endeared by the most intimate and generous relations. His life was such that nothing could jar with its harmony: he had no enemy; and his friends could not discover that he had a fault.—Those who lament him can remember, such was the singular beauty of his life and character, no passage of unkindness, the presence of no jealous nor unjust feeling No man was bolder in forming opinions nor braver in expressing them; but whether in politics or literature, so prevalent and powerful was the empire of gentleness over his spirit, that no human being ever dreamed of antagonism to Neal. He leaves no foe in the community in which he lived and in which—in the full maturity of his admirable intellect, and surrounded by the earnest and ardent friends—he died. Those who knew him best can look back upon the minutest incidents of his life, and see nothing that they would be willing to forget.

For the Easton Gazette.

MR. EDITOR:—Every town and every city within the confines of our public domain, seem to meet the yearly return of our memorable day of Independence with a welcome of gladness, in rejoicings, feasts, jubilees and pleasures as tokens of respect of this eventful period, and need I tell you, that our (ought to be) famous town of St. Michaels, that history seems to have forgotten her mighty struggle and masterly achevment in the war of 1812, (but never by those who were eye witnesses to the scene of her engagement,) was no less slow to show her feelings of that day, in a manner, too, that should merit the approbation of all. Soberness almost to a fault appeared to govern the actions of her citizens.—All passed off in peace and harmony, nothing even occurring to require the aid of either Aldermen or police, and had it not been for the disappointment of their Baltimore friends, who were to visit them by special invitation on that day, and for whom they promised a hearty welcome and a good dinner,—and I must here add, when St. Michaels undertakes to acquit herself of the honors of a festivity, there is no town or city within the limits of the union can surpass her simple, pure and primitive style of entertainment,—their enjoyment would have been still greater. Suffice it to say, all were pleased and so was I.

At the hour of 11 o'clock I arrived in town and proceed in a straggling mood to see what was to be seen, and the first thing that attracted my eye were the Bayside Dragoons, manœuvering with their soldier-like appearance in the meeting house green, under the command of their intelligent 1st Lieutenant, J. W. Kemp, in consequence of the indisposition of their Captain's family, who I regret to say could not appear, and immediately upon my left was a wide-spread tent, under which was to be set the savory repast, to be served up under the management of a committee, (who knew what good living is, judging at least from the size of one of them.)—Leaving here I strolled down to the wharf, where I found a dense mass of men, women and children awaiting the arrival of the steamer, as now was near the time, and after gazing awhile at a small vessel anchored in the stream, which had brought over the previous evening a Baltimore Club, calling themselves "Canton Wreckers," dressed in a style and taste as suited their name, and for ought I know, their characters too, in a mongrel aboriginee or Indian costume, which seemed not a little to delight the lookers on as they paraded the streets. I retraced my steps up town, there with breathless impatience to await the coming of the boat, which was then past two hours due.

3 o'clock arrived, and Mr. Editor, after numerous conjectures and reports reaching us of the safety of the boat, take my word for it, if the Captain had been tried, you could not have found a jury to have acquitted him. A report at last reached us, that they were aground on Tilghman's Point, which was accredited, so we were determined to wait no longer but march forward and vent our mighty wrath for the Captain on those hams, veels, Lambs, geese and the like which was done, (believe me) to the satisfaction of our inward feelings. After this, was next seen the Bayside Dragoons, and that fine looking and well drilled company, the St. Michaels Guards under the command of their very gentlemenly Capt. W. H. Harrison parading through Town. It would have Mr. Editor, raised your military "dander," to have seen with what precision and order they marched, their determined look, and resolute countenance, would have almost stopped the advance of a Mexican General, without a shot. At 5 o'clock in the evening all having exhibited there patriotic zeal returned to their respective homes rejoicing in the pleasure of the day.

Yours, H.

P. S. Perhaps our Baltimore Friends will let us know what became of the boat Bayside, July 8, 1847.

Later from Vera Cruz.

ARRIVAL OF THE SHIP GALVESTON.

The Olive Branch again Refused—Rejection of Mr. Buchanan's Overtures—Refusal of the Mexican Congress to Treat for Peace—Affairs at Tampico.

The steamship Galveston, with dates from Vera Cruz to the 8th inst, and from Tampico to the 10th, arrived at New Orleans on the 14th By this arrival the Commertial Times has the following important intelligence:

At the moment when the Galveston was leaving Vera Cruz, a courier, with the mail from the Capital entered the city, bringing dates to the 5th inst. The principal item of intelligence brought from the city of Mexico, is of a momentous character, viz: The Mexican Congress, with some difficulty, had been brought together, and Mr. Buchanan's communications, containing the President's overtures for peace, was laid before them. Their decision was immediate and to the effect that Mexico would listen to no terms for peace. Gen. Scott left Puebla at the head of his army, for the capital, on the 30th ult. We received this news from a passenger, and have every reason to believe that it is authentic.

Advices had been received at Tampico, that the American prisoners that belonged to Major Gaines' command and had been sent from Mexico, were detained about 130 miles from Tampico, and were very badly treated. In consequence, Col. De Russy, with four pieces of artillery, of releasing and bringing them into the city. It is probable that some fighting will occur before it can be accomplished.

Some of the prisoners escaped, and six or eight had nearly reached Tampico when they were recaptured. One however got safely into town and reported to Col. Gates.

DEATH BY LIGHTNING.—Mr. Henry W. Long, of Somerset county, Md., was instantly killed by lightning on Wednesday, the 8th inst. Mr. Long was in the field, in the act of placing a log on the fence, when the electric fluid descended upon him like a sheet of flame, killing him and setting fire to the fence. His little son, standing a few yards off, seeing his father's fate, ran and gave the alarm, and when the brother of Mr. Long got to him he found his boots and feet nearly burnt off by the fire from the fence.
