POETRY.

THE DOG.

BY ELIZA COOK.

A Song for the Dog, ay a song from the heart—
Let the sensitive leaf of man's vanity start;
But a Song for the Dog shall be merrily troll'd,
As the meed of the honest, the fond, and the bold.

Ye heirs to a bright immortality born,
Oh! lift not your heads in the triumph of scorn;
Take some heed how ye sneer at the cur o'er his bone,
Whose good work, fairly weigh'd might out-balance your own.

Come hither, blind pilgrim, say who is thy guide?—
No son of proud reason is found at thy side;
How is it thou darest, all sightless, to roam,
And canst track out the pathway safe back to thy home?

"'Tis my Dog that I trust to," the dark-en'd one cries,
"And he ministers well to my visionless eyes;
"He leadeth me gently, and heralds my feet
"Through the world's busy mob and the city's long street.

"Ah! where is another, whose patience and care
"Would endure, so unwearied, the task and the fare?
"'Tis my Dog that I trust to; and ne'er can I find
"Such a friend to the palsied, the poor, and the blind."

Rigid limb'd traveller, mounting the peak,
With the blood curdling fast in thy heart and thy cheek,
Thine eyelids are heavy—thy breathing grows deep,
And sleep hath come over thee—terrible sleep!

Who shall discover thy snow-curtain'd bed?
Who shall stand up between thee and the dead?
Who shall tear off the cold wrap from thy form,
And call loudly for help through the shriek of the storm?

It is not man's footstep—that ne'er would have found thee;
It is not man's hand—that would ne'er have unbound thee;
It is not man's wisdom—his powers had fail'd;
'Tis the Dog that has come where the man would have quail'd.

The lisping child snatches the blossom and brake
That spring by the side of the blue-bosom'd lake;
Till, heedless with laughter, he slips from the brink
And a horror-struck mother beholdeth him sink.

But, hark!—there's a plunge, a brave diver is out,
Whose ready zeal needs no encouraging shout:
'Tis the Newfoundland playmate—the soulless, the mute,
And God's beautiful image is saved by the brute.

There's one that is keeping the wide-scatter'd flock;
Now pacing the moorland, now perch'd on the rock;
Now quietly watching the lambs at their play;
Now arresting the steps that would wander away.

He rules, as all should rule, with merciful peace;
He preserveth the sheep, yet he covets no fleece;
He is true to his charge when the red sun gets up;
He is there when night closes the gold-blazon'd cup.

His master may conjure some love-whisper'd dream;
He may rove in the shade—he may rest by the stream—
He may pillow his head on the heath-cover'd steep:
If the dog is awake—why the shepherd may sleep.

"Yoicks! yoicks, tally-ho!" and away rush glad men,
Over hill, sod, and furrow—through copse, wood, and glen;
"Hark, forward!"—on, on, with a cheer and a bound,
But man, mighty creature, must trust to the hound.

"Up, up with the barrel, the pheasant is nigh;
"Quick, quick, to the shoulder—he rises, let fly;"
The bird's in the bag, but who will not confess,
'Twas the nose of old Ponto ensured the success.

Weary and lonely, the beggar goes by,
No warm heart to expect him, no friendly hand nigh;
But among all sorrows that misery deals,
We may see the starved cur ever close to his heels.

The one who for years has been miss'd in his place,
May return with strange shadows of Time on his face,
Friends may have forgotten the wandering boy,
But the old dog remembers and hails him with joy.

Then a health to the noble, the honest old Tray,
The watchman of night, the companion of day;
And a Song for the Dog shall be merrily troll'd,
As the meed of the faithful, the fond, and the bold.

LETTER FROM GEN. TAYLOR TO THE HON. J. R. INGERSOLL.

Head Quarters Army of Occupation,
Camp near Monterey, Aug. 3, 1847.

Hon. J. R. Ingersoll—Dear Sir: I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your esteemed letter of the 7th ult., which has just reached me, in which you say, "I had the honor of being called on last evening to address a Mass Meeting of the Whigs of the city and county of Philadelphia. At that meeting your name was frequently mentioned, in connection with the office of the Chief Magistracy. I stated at that meeting, as I had before stated, in my place in the House of Representatives at Washington, that you were a whig, not indeed, an ultra partisan whig, but a whig in principle." All of which is entirely correct, and after the discussion which occurred in both houses of Congress, at the last session, growing out of the capitulation of Monterey, in which discussion, you thought proper to defend my conduct, in regard to that transaction, when assailed, if not entirely on party grounds in the house of which you were a member, for which you have my sincere thanks—which was done in such a way by those who disapproved that measure, I can hardly imagine any one who was present, and heard the speeches on that occasions or read them after they were published, could well mistake the complexion of my politics. At the last Presidential canvass, without interfering in any way with the same, it was well known to all with whom I mixed, whigs and democrats, for I had no concealments in the matter, that I was decidedly in favor of Mr. Clay's election, and would now prefer seeing him in that office to any individual in the Union, certainly much more so at any time than myself. Independent of his great talents and long experience in government affairs, I consider his views and those of the whigs, for the most part, are more nearly assimilated as regards political matters, to those of Mr. Jefferson, than their opponents, in whose political creed I was reared, and whose opinions in matters of state, I have never lost sight, as well as endeavored to conform to them as near as circumstances would permit. My commission as a Lieutenant in the army was conferred by him a short time before he retired from public life.

Although no one can appreciate more highly than I do, the too favorable opinion, I fear you have formed as regards my fitness for the first civil office in our country, (which I consider, should I reach it, rather too much of an experiment,) as well as duly grateful for your aid, in bringing me so prominently before the nation, for the office in question, yet, I cannot permit the present opportunity to pass by without repeating to you what I have said to others in connection with the subject of the Presidency—which is—that I am no politician. Near forty years of my life have been passed in the military service of the republic, nearly the whole of which in the field, the camp, on our western frontier, and in the Indian territory. I may well say constantly on duty, the two last in Mexico, or on its immediate border, during which time, I have not passed one night under the roof of a house; you may, therefore, very readily suppose, under such circumstances, I have had but little time to devote to the consultation or investigation of great political questions or subjects, or to their discussion nor have I attempted to do so, or be mixed up with political men or measures in any way, not even having voted for one of our Chief Magistrates since I joined the army; having, for the most, been serving or stationed beyond the limits of the States. I must say, I have no wish for the Presidency, and cannot consent to be exclusively the candidate of a party. And if I am one at all, or to be made so at the coming election; it must be born in mind, that I have been or will be made so by others without any agency of mine in the matter; independent of any wishes, I greatly doubt my want of the necessary qualifications to discharge the duties properly of an office which was filled and adorned by a Washington, a Jefferson, as well as by several others of the purest, wisest and most accomplished statesmen and patriots of this or any other age or country. I almost tremble at the thoughts of the undertaking; yet, if the good people think proper to elevate me at the proper time to the highest office in their gift, I will feel bound to serve them, if not from inclination, from a principle of duty, and will do so honestly and faithfully to the best of my ability, in accordance with the principles of the constitution, as near as I can do so, as it was construed and acted on by our first Presidents, two of whom acted so conspicuous a part, in aiding and completing that instrument, as well as putting it in operation.

But very many important changes may take place at home and abroad between now and the time for holding the election for our next Chief Magistrate, so much so as to make it desirable for the general good, that some one with more experience in State affairs, should be selected as a candidate than myself, and could he be elected I will not say I would yield my pretensions, for I have not the vanity to believe I have any for that distinguished station, but would acquiesce not only with pleasure to such an arrangement, but would rejoice that the republic had one citizen more worthy, and better qualified than I am to discharge the important duties appertaining to that position, and no doubt there are thousands. Be this as it may, if ever I occupy the White House, it must be by the spontaneous movement of the people, without any action of mine in relation to it, without pledges other than I have previously stated, a strict adherence to the provisions of the Constitution—so that I could enter on the arduous and responsible duties appertaining to said office untramelled—so that I could be the President of the country and not of a party.

With consideration of the greatest respect and esteem,

I remain your ob't. serv't
Z. TAYLOR.

DR. THOMPSON'S
MEDICATED SYRUP OF CASTOR OIL.

THE Subscriber would most respectfully inform the Citizens of Cambridge and the Public generally, that he has succeeded in making Castor Oil perfectly agreeable and while it is rendered agreeable to the taste, the Cathartic properties are very little if any diminished; and by the medication all that acrid quality of which oil is generally possessed which rendered it inadmissable with some persons, especially with infants, is entirely destroyed.

It is well known that Castor Oil is almost an universal medicine—entering into the use of every family, and administered in the treatment of almost every disease—and would be much more frequently prescribed by physicians, was it not for the great aversion to its use. But in this preparation, the subscriber can assure physicians and patients, they will find it so perfectly agreeable to the taste, that infants and ladies of the most delicate stomachs can take it without the least inconvenience. Indeed it is so perfectly palitable that should it be found necessary to take a little more in a dose it will not be found objectionable to the patient.

The Medicated Syrup of Castor Oil may be had at the store of E. M. DAWSON & BROTHER, in Easton. Wholesale and Retail orders from a distance promptly attended to.

Mrs. C. M. KIRKLAND,
Author of a 'New Home,' 'Forest Life,' etc.
AND FILLED WITH
Contributions from the most eminent writers of the country.

The Second Volume commences with the January Number, 1848.

AT the conclusion of the first half year of the 'Union Magazine," the Publisher feels impelled to make some acknowledgment of his sense of the favorable reception accorded to it by the public. Its success has certainly been unprecedented; and while it may be pardonable to ascribe this in part to the merits of the work it must not be denied that public good will and kindness have been abundantly demonstrated. The press, in all parts of the country, have given its voice liberally and heartily in favor of the new aspirant.

To flag after this would be dishonorable indeed. It is the hope of the publisher that the courage and enterprise which belong to success will be found rather to have stimulated than slackened his exertions. If there be talent of a suitable kind in the country he is determined to make it available to the Union Magazine in the various departments He will continue to give superior engravings in Mezzotint, Line and Wood, by H. S. Sadd Thomas Doney, M Osborne, Hinshelwood, W. S Barnard, B F. Childs, P. Loomis, &c, from original designs by T. H. Matteson, who has the sole direction of all the designs for the Engravings.

The Literary matter will continue to be under the exclusive control of the Editor, Mrs. C. M. Kirkland assisted by a corps of contributors who are either established favorites of the reading public or worthy to become so. Such as Dyspepsia Cured.

MARTIN & WHITLEY'S NATIONAL TONIC is the best remedy ever offered to the public in all cases of Dyspepsia and Ague and Fever. A healthy condition and a natural action of the functions of the Stomach and Liver are necessary to healthy Digestion The Stomach has been called the centre of Sympathies. It may therefore be truly said there is no disorder of the humane body, which does not, more or less, affect the functions of the Stomach. "Indigestion is rarely, if ever the sole cause of organic disease of the Stomach." It is however a very fruitful source of it in other parts of the system. It is, then, evident whatever will restore the tone or healthy action of the Stomach, when impaired by disease, is the only proper Medicine as a curative. Such, we feel assured is the national Tonic.

We give below a certificate of a highly respectable gentleman, a merchant in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, who last summer came to consult a distinguished Physician in this City. He had also sought the aid of several, who rank high in their profession in Philadelphia, and in the State of Pennsylvania.
