Young man, stick to your business. It to get along fast, or a dislike of your bonest calling lead you to abandon it. Have some honest calling, and then stick to it; if you are sticking type, stick away at them; it you are selling oysters, keep on selling them; if you are at law, hold fast to that profession; pursue the business you have took at the murderous implement he still chosen, persistently, industriously, and hopefully, and if there is anything of you, it will appear and turn to account in that as well or better than in any other calling; only if you are a loafer, forsake that line of life as quickly as possible, for the longer you stick to it, the worse it will "stick" to you. -Hant's Merchants' Magazine.
