THE LIGHT AT HOME.

The light at home, how bright it beams,

To love and rest and comfort call.

And strife for glory, gold, or fame,

Where loving lips will list our name,

When through the dark and stormy night,

low cheering is that twinkling light,

And softly through his bosom steals

The light at home, whene'er at last

He feels no more thechilling blast

Long years upon the sea have fled,

That beats upon his manly form.

Since Mary gave ber parting kiss,

But the sad tears which then she shed,

The light of home! how still and sweet,

The weary laborer to greet-

It peeps from yonder cottage door-
