[From the New York Despatch.] I SHARE THEM NO LONGER WITH THEE. BY RICHARD BARRER.

Ah! why do they wish me to mingle In pleasures so frail and so fleet ?-Joys thrilling and merriment's tingle Have long ago ceased to be sweet; Why, why do they force me to baunt them, The scenes where the light-hearted be, And listen to music's glad anthem, When I share them no longer with thee!

To childhood's old fireside they bring me, That once to my heart was so dear-And childhood's old anthems they sing they I once longed so fondly to hear:-To youth's merry, innocent glee, And my sorrow dimmed exclids but glisten, Since I share them no longer with thee! No matter how lively dancing

The sunbeams may glitter and play-What matter how deep and entrancing The bright eyes that circle my way-What matter the smiles and caresses They full not to shower apon me-The charm that once lightened oppresses, For I share it no longer with thee! I wander at eve thro' the wild wood,-The berries are glistening there still,

The flowers that sweetened our childhood Still blossom by streamlet and hill:-Not a wreath has been snatched from the bower-Not a leaf has been plucked from the tree; But ah! where is the soft thrilling power They had when I shared them with thee ! The' oft they have courted and wou me To join them in dance and in ball,

They know not what spell is upon me That turneth life's blessings to gall;-When the charms of the Spring-time are blooming Their beauties no longer I see, For anguish my heart is consuming, Since I share them no longer with thee! Life's terrors no longer alarm me-

Its blessings no more can I prize,-No pleasure it wafteth can charm me-No evils it bringeth surprise, My prayer and my only desire is At once from earth's sorrows to flee, And join those bright scraphs whose choir is Enlivened, enchanted by thec.

HOW TO MAKE GOOD RUTTER. A correspondent of the New England Farmer furnishes that paper with the following rules for making good butter: 1. Milk should never be set for butter in a dark, damp cellar-as it is the case with butter makers in this section-as the cream is thereby moulded before it has time to' rise, which gives the butter a mouldy taste. 2. The milk is allowed to set too long before bring skimmed, which gives it a chee-

3. The cream is kept too long before it is churned, after it is skimmed, which gives it the taste of the other two, and also a sour

4. The butter should never be washed in water, because it takes away that beautiful aroma so essential to good butter.

5. It should never be taken in a person's warm hands, as the heat melts a certain portion of the globules, which gives it an oily taste, and makes it become rancid

6. The milk should be set in good clean tin or earthen pans, in a dry, open, airy, and shady place, above ground, if possible, although a cellar may be so built and ventilated, as to answer the purpose. It should never set over twenty-four hours, in warm weather; and for a dairy of three cows or over, the cream should be churned every morning, and never be kept over forty-eight hours in warm weather; in cold weather it may be kept longer. It should always be about the same heat that milk is when drawn from the cow, and churned steadily, and I have never known it to fail of coming readily; (we use a cylider churn;) it is then taken from the efited by it. Many persons are able to give wooden tray which has been well scalded churn with a wooden butter ladle, into a them handsome donations, and all can give and cooled in pure cold water; the salt is a small one, which if it should be general then worked in, to suit the taste, with the ladle, which is easily done with a little practice, and the buttermilk well worked out; it is then set away in a cool place for about twenty-four hours, when it is well worked you have them lying on your dusty shelves worked out.
