THE PRISONER'S DEMEANOR, AND SUBSEQUENT EXPRESSIONS AND CONDUCT.

While the sentence was being delivered, large number of persons in court watched attentively the countenance of Crop for me indications of penitence and feeling, t not a muscle of his face changed. Ev- when the judge alluded to his aged fath- whose white hairs his conduct would ing in sorrow to an earlier grave—and en the judge pictured the grief of his other weeping over her erring son, the isoner manifested not the slightest emo- n.

During the delivery of the sentence the isoner chewed his tobacco and expecto- ted as usual.

At the conclusion of the sentence the isoner was taken immediately to Balti- ore jail.

The prisoner's conduct and expressions mediately subsequent to his sentence—the awful sentence of death]—only served confirm, in the opinion of all who were itnesses thereto, the general impression to his reckless and daring character, and ntributed to the weight of public opinion support of his criminality, and the just- ss of the verdict in his case. When Cropps came out of the court house some ne said to him, "Now come out and tell ll about it." To which he replied. "Oh, o you think so." He said to one of the eputies privately as he was leaving 'Ev- ns, the people will hear from me in a day r two."

In his conversations with the deputy heriffs who conducted him to the Balti- more jail, and in his general deportment, e maintained his reputed hardihood of character. On reaching the Cold Spring Hotel, when the carriage which they oc- upied was halted in order to water the orses, the prisoner espied from the car- iage one of the jurors who had convicted him, who was on the porch. He immedi- ately menaced him in the severest terms, called him a perjured man, and begged his keepers to allow him one minute to pitch into him, after which they might torture him, "even if they pulled his finger nails out by the roots."

The juror, Mr. Ware, very properly endeavored to calm his feelings, told Cropps he had but a short time to live, and heard that he must know the verdict which condemned him was a just and righteous one. On his way to Baltimore city the prisoner made many excuses in the most imploring manner to induce his keepers to permit him to leave the carriage for a few moments, which they refused, and which appeals were afterwards proved to be based upon falsehood and a mere subterfuge. Before reaching the jail his denunciations of Captain James, the warden of the Baltimore city jail were severe, and he threatened his life; if an opportunity could be obtained by him to destroy it.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3d.—The Senate today unanimously confirmed the nominations of Col. Samuel Black; for Governor of Nebraska, and of Wilson McCandless, for judge of the western district of Pennsylvania.

CONUNDRUMS—ORIGINAL.

BY SALT WATER.

Why is it likely that B. H. and L. R (two noted vapers) will never fall out?
Because they agree on every (pint) point.

Why was the success of a former filabustering expedition considered very doubtful?
Because it was led by Capt. (can be) Kenny?

When should a man practice the most economy in his household affairs?
Whenever a (cry Sis) crisis occurs.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS—OVERFLOW OF BILE. A constitutional predisposition to bilious disorders is very common in this country. We find that in a large proportion of the ordinary cases of cough cold, intermittent fever influenza, etc., the liver sympathizes violently with the pulmonary organs. Acting directly and simultaneously upon both, the Pills soon bring them back to a natural and healthy condition. The impurities of the system are discharged through the bowels, the organs of respiration are relieved by the operation of this great counter-irritant upon the fevered blood, and the functions of the liver are regulated and restrained. Thus the primary and subsidiary causes of the complaint are reached and subdued at the same time.
