SATURDAY MORNING . . . . JUNE 18, 1859.

Fat Pork as Human Food.

A fat hog is the very quintessence of scrofular and carbonic acid gas, and he who eats it must not expect thereby to build up a sound physical organism. While it contributes heat; not the twentieth part of it is nitrogen, the base of muscle The Scientific American cordially endorses the above sentiment, as being sound practical truth, and says:—"Fat pork was never designed for human food. It is material for breath, and nothing more. See Liebig and other organic chemists and physiologists. It makes no red meat or muscle. The prize fighter is not allowed to eat it. All that is not consumed by the lungs, remains to clog the body with fat."

To the Editors of the Courier, Zanesville:—The short article in yesterday's Courier, thus entitled, is calculated to mislead, and therefore I would offer the following remarks in reference to our great Ohio staple:

A fat hog is truly the quintessence of scrofula, for scrofa in Greek is hog, and the derivative scrofulous means hoggish.—The disease scrofula, was so called when medical science was in its infancy, from its supposed resemblance to some disease of the hog; and then the inference was easy, that eating the hog (scrofa) produced the hog-disease (scrofula.) It is well known, however, that our American Indians and the Hindoos, who never use pork, are liable to this disease; that in Europe it prevails chiefly among ill-fed poor; who hardly taste meat of any kind.

On the other hand, the Chinamen and our own pioneers, who hardly eat any other flesh, are remarkably healthy and exempt from scrofula—a disease we have much more reason to suspect as originating long ago from the hereditary taint of an unmentionable disease, favored by irregular living and poor diet. In the South, from their sleek appearance and exempting from scrofula, you can at once distinguish the bacon fed negro. These examples may suffice on that head.

Fat pork is not in any sense carbonic acid, but hydro-carbon, a combination of hydrogen and carbon. It becomes carbonic acid and water by combining with oxygen in the act of being burned or digested, which is much the same thing—giving off during these processes large amounts of heat and light.

It is true that the fat of fat pork does not make blood or red flesh, though the lean which is always eaten alone does. It is as your article says truly, material for breath. Well that is a good deal. It is supposed that if the writer's breath had stopped five minutes before he took his pen, we should never have seen his article on fat pork.—But it does more. All the fat that goes into the stomach and thence into the blood does not undergo slow burning in the lungs by the process of burning, but is deposited in the body as human fat. Now a certain amount of fat is so necessary for the proper play of all parts—muscles included—that without it, the body, like an ungreased engine, wears itself out by its own friction.—In consumption, the waste of fat is one alarming and most dangerous sympton, and the far famed cod-liver-oil acts perhaps chiefly by supplying the blood with fat.

I am satisfied by experience that fat pork—when the stomach will receive it—does just as well. Moreover, few of those delicate persons that have so great an aversion to pork or other fat, ever live to see forty years. They die young of consumption. Butter, sugar, starch, vegetable oils, act to some extent as animal fat, and in tropical climates are used as substitutes.

But go to the arctic regions and see the refined Dr. Kane and his men, devour raw walrus blubber with a gusto, as we would take a dish of ice cream, and you will conclude that "fat pork," particularly in our arctic winters, is not so bad an institution.

We would not live on fat pork alone—not on sugar and starch—though we could on bread. Bread, the staff of life, contains the materials both for breathing and making blood and red flesh (muscle) in a supereminent degree, greater even than lean beef or any other single article of food; and this, or some substitute, such as beans, peas, potatoes, etc., is always eaten with fat pork, so that there is a sufficient supply of blood and fleshmaking material. However, excess is bad, and the fat pork must not constitute the bulk of a meal.

Chemical analysis is a poor substitute for the observation of facts in the living body; nor can we even base very much on experiments made on Mr. Martin, the man with the hole in his stomach, by which food can be introduced and digestion observed; for that is not nature's way of getting it there, and a stomach with such an unnatural opening, is much like a leaky dinner pot with a hole in the bottom stuffed with a rag. Extended experience alone can settle such a question.

The Greeks and Romans esteemed pork as a luxury, and a most wholesome diet their athlete and gladiators (prize-fighters) were fed on pork. Our own Saxon (Teutonic Scandinavian) ancestors esteemed it so highly that they, even in their heaven, provided a great hog with golden bristles, called Gulliborstli, of whose bacon the heroes of Walhalla dined every day, when at night the picked bones again united and became covered with a fresh supply of fat pork. In this estimate of the hog, the mass of mankind, not of the Shemite race, (Jews, Turks, Arabs, etc.,) who follow Moses' law, that had spiritual and representative meaning, have in all ages, agreed, and will agree, as long as man has canine teeth, and lives by drawing his breath. Whenever the Scientific American or Prof. Liebig will discover a new process of living, without breathing, we may be guided by their opinion; till then. I opine, "good corn-fed (and no other is good) pork" will rule the roast, of which themselves will not be slow to partake.

My remarks are of course, only applicable to men, women and children with comparatively healthy stomachs, who have sufficient exercise, with pure air and pure water. Yours, with respect,

JOHN G. F. HOLSTON, A. M., M. D.

We are not ready to oppose or endorse the doctrines above set forth; but we do know that chemistry is very deficient in supplying all the necessary premises on which to found a system of diet. Those who have visited the hardy soils of the South, who are fed principally on pork, can hardly be ready to endorse either the doctrines of Moses or those of our friends, the followers of Ann Lee, in their trade against hogs' flesh as food. Even those who repudiate the use of this aliment, still continue to use lard as one of the necessary appendages of the cuisine; and we think these rapid reforms, even in our diet, should be jealously scrutinized before their adoption. —[Ed. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.
The free admissions of all Nations, as well as the verdict of the leading Hospitals of the Old as well as the New World stamp this powerful remidial Agent as the greatest healing preparation ever made known to suffering man. Every form and feature of these prevalent and stubborn disorders is eradicated locally and entirely by the use of this emollient; warm fomentations should precede its application. Its healing qualities will be found to be thorough and invariable.

THE Schooner EUCEPHELUS, Capt. Wm. H. CHAMBERS, will commence her regular trips for 1859, on the 24 March, leaving Easton Point, every Wednesday, and Baltimore every Saturday.—Freights at the usual rates.
All orders accompanied with the Cash, will be promptly attended to; no others will receive attention, as it is unreasonable to expect me to accommodate my customers with merchandize on my individual credit; and I have not the money to advance for them. I hope they will not ask me to do it, and force on me the disagreeable necessity of giving them a denial. Orders, letters and money, left at the Drug Store of Dawson & Brother, in Easton, or William S. Pawson, Commission Merchant, Smith's Dock, Baltimore, will be attended to.
☞ My office in Easton, is at the Merchant Tailor's Store of Mr. John Satterfield, opposite the Star Office.

THE FAMILY JOURNAL.
A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER,
Devoted to Literature, News, Romance, Science and Art.
JOHN B. WILLIAMS, } Editors & Proprietors.
CHAS. H. MOORE. }
IT is a well-known fact that the South is almost entirely dependent on the North for its hebdomadal literature. It is to be seen whether the Southern States cannot support a literary journal of its own. The parties undertaking this new enterprise are determined to spare no effort or expense to produce a paper which shall effect this purpose, and deserve a share of the support of the reading public. Such a paper, it is hoped, will arouse the somewhat dormant literary condition of our (Baltimore) city, develop its inactive talent; and offer at our own doors a vehicle for the expression of thought, interchange of ideas, and the imparting of new items of information.
The Family Journal will contain Original Stories, Sketches of Travel, Biographical essays, a Summary of News, domestic and Foreign; Reviews of Books, Dramatic and Musical Criticisms, Reports of Popular Lectures, and such general information as will make it a welcome guest in every family. The proprietors are determined that their journal shall be second to none in the variety, interest and value of its contents; in its literary excellence and high moral tone. Politics and Sectarianism will be most rigidly excluded.
Particular attention paid to "answers to correspondents," a talented gentleman having been especially engaged for that purpose.
Arrangements have already been made with a distinguished corps of American contributers, and negotiations are still in progress which will ultimately secure the best talent in the country. It is intended that the literary matter in this journal shall be chiefly original; the appropriation from foreign sources, without acknowledgement, in the newspapers of the day, is already too frequent.—Should any article be selected on account of its superior excellence, credit will be invariably given where it is due.
Terms, invariably in Advance.
