FARMER'S COLUMN.

From the Country Gentleman.

FEEDING CORN vs. BOILED MEAL.

EDS CO. GENT.—On page 172 of the current volume of the Country Gentleman, is a short hint to farmers on the subject of feeding ground or cooked food to cattle and hogs. This is a subject that will bear amplifying, and if I can give a few facts and some comments thereon, in relation to this subject, in such a manner that it will be of benefit to those engaged in fattening animals for market, or for their own use, I shall be well paid for my trouble.

The Hon. H. L. ELLSWORTH, sometime Commissioner of Patents, says that it is a fact, established by long experimenting, that corn ground into meal, and then cooked, is 150 per cent better for fattening cattle and hogs, than corn fed as they usually feed it at the west (in the field.) That is, corn worth 50 cents per bushel to feed raw and unground, is worth $1.25 when ground and boiled or steamed. This difference would soon pay for a mill and steaming apparatus.

Mr. CASSIUS M. CLAY, after a long trial, has given us the following facts. (The same probably as those given in the Co. Gent. referred to above: In making pork, one bushel dry corn made 5 10-16ths pounds of pork; boiled corn made 14 7-16lbs., and boiled meal made in one instance 16 7-16 and in another nearly 18 pounds pork. In other words, dry corn is worth 45 cents, boiled meal $1 31¼ to $1 44c. per bushel, when pork is worth eight cents per pound. Or, one bushel of corn ground and cooked is worth three bushels if fed dry.

In the Genesee Farmer for 1858, page 52, we find the matter presented in another light. Mr. S. H. CLAY of Bourbon Co., Ky., says he has found by careful experiment that pork made by feeding raw corn at 56 cents per bushel cost 9 cents per pound: that made by feeding boiled corn cost 4 cts. per pound, and if the corn was ground and cooked the pork cost but 3 cents per pound.

It may therefore be safely assumed that the value of corn is trebled, for fattening animals, by grinding and cooking. In the Transactions of the New York Agricultual Society for 1855, page 312, in Watson's Prize Essay we find the following elucidation of this subject: "The kernels of corn are exceedingly hard and difficult of mastication, and in consequence a large proportion passes into the stomach entire and without being broken. The process of digesting substances of this kind must be exceedingly slow and difficult; the gastric juices cannot effectually penetrate them until they become softened and reduced by the action of the stomach. This action of that organ is severe, and necessarily irritates and disturbs its coats, and the grain, while it remains in that condition, swells and oppresses the membranes, and passing but partially digested into the intestines, is voided while a considerable portion remains entire. It can require no argument to prove that grain ejected in this state has passed through the system, not only without imparting any nutrition to the animal, but has produced positive injury by its irritating and oppressive effects."

Now, by grinding the corn into meal, it is rendered comparativety easy of digestion, being made more permeable to the gastric juice, and less arritating to the coats of the stomach and intestines. Cooking the meal does not add any nutritive ingredients probably; but softening and changing the character of the starchy constituents, the digestion, and subsequent assimilation. are rendered perfect. It will, therefore, pay any farmer well to get at least a mill to grind his feed, if steaming apparatus is beyond his reach. In the ratio obtained from the above figures of Mr. CLAY, if a man usually feeds 50 bushels of raw corn to his fattening animals, he could sell two-thirds (33 bushels,) and buy a mill, and then have the requisite amount of feed to fatten his pork, as it could be boiled in a common 5 or 7 pail kettle, or even over a stove. This amount of corn at 87½ cents per bushel, the average price here for the last three years, would buy a first-rate mill. Coleman's mill has been highly recommended, and probably is a good one. I have one of Leavitt's "Young America" mills; this will grind not only corn and provender, but also corn and cobs. I never could see the use of feeding cob-meal when bran could be got as cheeply as the millers sell it here, (from 12 to 20 cents per bushel,) but some like to feed it. I do not see how it can have any other than a purely mechanical effect, and bran has the same effect, together with a good deal of nutritive matter. The only use I have for the crushing apparatus of my mill, is to grind bones for manure.

The best mill I have seen for farmers in general, is "Sanford's," manufactured by R. L. HOWARD, Buffalo, N. Y. This mill is not a rotary, but a reciprocatting mill and has the peculiar grinding motion of the jaw of an ox when ruminating: literally chewing up the corn, and spitting it out into the bag at the rate of a bushel in eight minutes. It does not heat the meal, but grinds it fine, even if wet. From the peculiar chewing motion of the mill, it will grind soft corn without choking. I do not remember the price, but think there are two sizes—one $40, and the other $30.

This may read like an advertisement of the mill in question: but it is not. I have no interest in the mill, not even possessing one, and if this is an advertisement, you, Messrs. Editors, must do as you like about publishing it. I believe that the publishers of books usually give a copy to editors reviewing them favorabty; but whether Mr. Howard will give you a mill, or give it to me, remains to be seen! D. A. A. NICHOLS. Westfield, N. Y., Sept. 30th.

A gipsy woman once promised for half-a-crown to show two young ladies their future husbands' faces in a pail of water.—They looked and exclaimed, 'Why, we see nothing but our own faces!' 'Well,' said the gipsy, 'those faces will be your husbands' when you are married.'

CAMPBELL'S PURE ESSENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER—Ginger is a grateful stimulant and carminitive, and is often given in Gout, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Cramp, Cholera Morbus, Cholic, Cholera, &c., &c.
In Nervous and Sick Headache, Sea Sickness, Nausea, Imperfect Digestion, or from Nausea induced by riding in a carriage, &c., it will be found most agreeable to the stomach and palatable to the taste, and affording at the same time almost in all cases immediate relief.
To the Inebriate it is particularly serviceable: a very small quantity used instead of the usual stimulant, will give tone and vigor to the digestive organs, and impart strength to resist the temptation, and may therefore be considered a valuable agent in reclaiming the drunkard.
The traveling public will also find it very efficacious in correcting the bad results arising from a change of water and diet, a few drops of which will give a glow and vigor to the stomach, equal to a wine glass of brandy or other stimulant, without producing any of the injurious and overrating effects which are sure to result from the use of stimuli of any kind. It is also a superior article for Flavoring Jellies, Preserves, Cakes, and for other Culinary uses, besides making a good beverage in hot weather.
DOSE.—An adult may take one spoonful; a child from 8 to 14 years old, half that quanity; and for a child 2 to 5 years old, 10 to 20 drops To be given in syrup or in sugar and water. Prepared and for sale by LEVIN H. CAMPBELL,
