MARYLANDER'S JUST HONOR.

HON. CHARLES J. BONAPARTE TO BE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Will Assume Office on July 1st, upon the Resignation of Hon. Paul Boynton—President's Close Friend.

Mr. Charles J. Bonaparte of Baltimore will become secretary of the navy when Secretary Paul Morton resigns, on July 1. Mr. Morton has issued a formal statement announcing that on July 1 he would resign the navy portfolio to associate himself with the Ryan syndicate in New York, which owns some 300 miles of crosstown lines, and which intends to compete next fall with the Belmont syndicate for building a vast network of subway lines. When President Roosevelt was asked whom he would appoint to succeed Mr. Morton, he smiled and announced that he had selected Mr. Bonaparte, of Baltimore.

President Roosevelt seemed to enjoy the amazement which his announcement created. There was a general belief that Mr. Morton's successor would be Mr Newberry, who has been named to succeed Assistant Secretary Darling when that gentleman leaves the Navy Department to become collector at Burlington, Vt., a position which will pay him nearly twice as much as his present office. No one believed that Mr. Bonaparte would be chosen to succeed Mr. Morton, because the vehemence with which Mr. Bonaparte had denied every previous rumor that connected his name with a Cabinet place had created the impression that he did not care for such an office.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt has long been anxious to have Mr. Bonaparte a member of his official family. Some time ago Mr. Roosevelt offered Mr. Bonaparte Mr. J. Hitchcock's place as Secretary of the Interior, but Mr. Bonaparte declined the offer. When Mr. Morton announced to Mr. Roosevelt that he intended resigning, Mr. Roosevelt again urged Mr. Bonaparte to accept a Cabinet office. Last Friday Mr. Bonaparte was Mr. Roosevelt's guest at luncheon, along with Consul General Winne, and it is understood that then Mr. Roosevelt finally won Mr. Bonaparte's consent to become Mr. Morton's successor. Mr. Bonaparte, as stated, will enter on his new duties on July 1. How long he will remain is, of course, a matter of conjecture, but there are persons who are acquainted with his impatience of routine and detail, which necessarily forms a vast portion of the work of a Cabinet officer, who do not believe that he will be the last Secretary of the Navy whom President Roosevelt will appoint. He is the fourth man to be appointed to the place by Mr. Roosevelt, his predecessors being Mr. Long, who had held the place under Mr. McKinley; Mr. Moody, who resigned to become attorney general, and Mr. Morton, who now leaves to enter business in New York.

The presence of a grandnephew of the great Napoleon in the Cabinet will not be without sentimental interest here as well as abroad, and the appointment promises in some respects to be one of the most notable Mr. Roosevelt has made. The President and his future Secretary of the Navy have been friends for many years. Bonaparte touched elbows with Roosevelt when both were fighting the battles of civil-service reform back in the 80's. The President demonstrated his confidence in his old-time associate, who is a brilliant lawyer, by naming him as a special attorney in the prosecution of Machen and other offenders in the postal cases. Bonaparte's specialty ever since he graduated from the Harvard Law School, in 1874, has been fighting all kinds of fraud and graft in the public service. He was giving and taking heavy blows in a fight for better municipal politics when Mr. Roosevelt left Harvard, where the name of Charles J. Bonaparte had for 10 years been a prominent one among the undergraduates.

Roosevelt has championed Bonaparte as earnestly as Bonaparte has championed Roosevelt. They have long had many ties in common and it seemed more than a coincidence that last November, when Maryland was trembling in the balance between the two political parties, Bonaparte was the only Republican elector who pulled through and cast the only vote in the electoral college for a Republican president.

No Secret about It.

Terrific Race with Death.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at Smithers' Moreland Pharmacy; price 50c.

Ice in Long Island Sound Was Blown Up to Permit of Navigation.

The severity of last winter in the neighborhood of New York is emphasized by an occurrence at Port Chester, N. Y., on Long Island Sound, says the New York Tribune. Usually the harbor of that place is not closed in the winter by the ice. The steamers from New York are able to make their way up the Byram river, the mouth of which forms the harbor of Port Chester, to the wharves. In the winter just ended it has been impossible for them to do this, for ice more than a foot in thickness formed and effectually blocked navigation in the channel.

The manufacturers became tired of waiting for nature in the form of gentle spring to release them from their icy bonds. When March came roaring in, and the ice was found still to be from a foot to 18 inches in thickness, they decided to treat the ice themselves. Procuring 450 pounds of dynamite, they set to work. Beginning at the open end of the ice field the ice was divided into huge blocks with plows. Then sticks of dynamite were inserted in holes made for the purpose. The dynamite was exploded by an electric current, and three or four miniature geysers of mixed ice and water would shoot up into the air.

Foot by foot the ice was broken away. Finally after five days of ice breaking of this sort the channel was opened sufficiently to permit a steamer to reach a wharf.

AN APPEAL FROM AFRICA.

What the People of the Dark Continent Ask of Those of Other Nations.

It is but very little that we ask—the right to work on our own soil, among our own people, ruled by some, at any rate, of our rulers, and to be permitted to eat and drink what we think good for us, instead of having deadly poison poured down our throats, says an extract from "Africa's Appeal to Christendom," in Century. Even if foreign powers should for a time be financial losers, they cannot eventually be anything but gainers—aided by a country almost unlimited in its capabilities, and the willing, grateful service of 20,000,000 of people rescued from the moral as well as physical death now staring them in the face. They will not have the obstacles presented to them in their own country; all will be with them in this crusade; leaders and people alike are stretching out their hands for aid. We appeal, not to England, not to France, not to Germany, not to other empires and states, but to the consciences of the individual men forming such nations. We appeal, not for a gift or favor, but for our right. Even as the Americans appealed for their rights, and obtained them by heroic measures, so do we claim the right for "freedom to worship God," and to worship Him by sobriety, industry, good will and all the Christian graces.

FOUND IN "LEMON" PIES.

Analysis of Restaurant Pastry Fails to Bring to Light Any Lemon.

Three lemon pies brought from the shelves of downtown restaurants were analyzed in the office of the state food inspector, and this is the composition of the filling of one of them, as announced by the chemist, reports the Chicago Record-Herald.

"Starch, in thick, firm paste, flavored slightly and very little acid; 21 per cent. sugar. Aniline coloring (methyl-orange group). The color is made synthetically from aniline, and aniline from coal. Method—di-methyl-aniline on diazo-benzine sulphonic acid. Methyl orange is poisonous in large doses. Found to contain very little flavoring and acid from lemon. Filling of starch paste, sugar and colored deep yellow.

In plain English, it was explained by the chemist that aniline is used instead of eggs. The butter was neglected altogether and the lemon juice was slighted.

Another lemon pie was beginning to decompose when it was delivered to the laboratory. There was dough at the bottom. The third lemon pie examined was said to be tolerably good. The much-abused mince pie escaped with good reputation, but one of the two pumpkin pies examined was said to be old.
