Chilled and cramped though he was, fear of a misstep prohibited an upright position. So, kneeling and crouching alternately, with an occasional vigorous flapping of his arms, he awaited the break of day. At that latitude and season the night is short, but to Pierre it seemed interminable. On more than one previous occasion he had been perturbed by an idea that his eyes might eventually remain sightless by day. He had almost convinced himself that this crowning misfortune had at last occurred when the tardy sun appeared and dispelled the black shadow from before them.

His first glance showed him that unless help came escape was impossible. A cry of despair issued from his lips, but it was inaudible above the clamor.

From the tiny island of rock the foot of the falls could be seen, but the short canon below, a deep gash in the rolling, pond-dotted barrens, was in plain view. Facing about, Pierre gazed wistfully up-stream. There lay his canoe; food and warmth were there, close at hand, yet inaccessible.

The awful vigil of the past night had subtracted much from the sum of his endurance, and Pierre felt that his hours were numbered. His respite from quick death by drowning had left him face to face with the lingering misery of starvation.

The day wore on. No one found Pierre outstretched on the rock, listlessly basking in the sun, his head aching.

He had turned his back on the declining sun and was staring aimlessly toward the rapids above, when a long Montagnais canoe sped into sight. Two others followed at short intervals.

As the third glided into smooth water and swerved gracefully to the landing place, Pierre knuckled his eyes, believing them once more at fault. Surely the figure in the bow flourishing a paddle like one demented could not be that of his lost comrade Camille!

Stepping from the canoe the white man scrambled up the steep bank to a spot from which he could look down upon the falls and dividing rock. Then Pierre saw that it was indeed Camille, who, after waving his hand encouragingly to his astonished friend, rejoined the natives.

A plan of deliverance was promptly devised and executed. One of the canoes, manned by stalwart volunteers, put out into midstream directly above and in line with the rock on which Pierre stood. To guard against accident, a strong rawhide line, one end of which was retained by those on shore, was attached to the stern of the canoe.

A line from the bow, cast by a dextrous hand, was soon in Pierre's grasp. Making it fast about his body, under the arms, he plunged into the river, and was drawn upstream to the canoe, which bore him safely to shore.

A few words explained the mystery of Camille's disappearance and his arrival with the Indians. He had gone astray in the blizzard, and had been at death's threshold when discovered by natives, who carried him to their camp. There he had been seriously ill.

He had but just recovered sufficient strength to travel and was about to return to the cabin when an Indian boy had observed Pierre descending the river. Camille had induced the natives, who were intending to visit the trading post, to hasten their preparations, and they had set out in the hope of overtaking Pierre.

Accompanied by their Montagnais friends, the rejoicing pair arrived at the fort without further mishap. There rest, change of diet and freedom from anxiety, with the perpetual daylight of midsummer, relieved Pierre of his annoying infirmity. Never since then, even during the long nights of the Labrador winter, have his eyes caused him the least inconvenience.—Youth's Companion.

DRIFTING TOWARDS BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Many people who are neglecting symptoms of kidney trouble, hoping "it will wear away," are drifting towards Bright's Disease, which is kidney trouble in one of its worst forms.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

stops irregularities, strengthens the urinary organs and builds up the worn-out tissues of the kidneys so they will perform their functions properly. Healthy kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood as it passes through them. Diseased kidneys do not, and the poisonous waste matter is carried by the circulation to every part of the body, causing dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, sluggish liver, irregular heart action, etc.

If you have any signs of Kidney or Bladder Trouble commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once, as it will cure a slight disorder in a few days and prevent a fatal malady. It is pleasant to take and benefits the whole system.

How to Find Out.

You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased, and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE should be taken at once.

G. B. Burhans Testifies After Four Years.

G. B. Burhans of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes:

"About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick-dust sediment and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed, and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."

One Reason for Japanese Success.

We say of a man, "He has a good knowledge of human nature, and will get on." Similarly the people who study the temperament, character, and needs of other nations, i. e., who understand the geography of other nations, will be successful in commerce. No better illustration can be given than the wonderful development of German commerce with South America, Turkey, and Eastern Asia.

The Japanese successes in the present war are also significant. The Japanese were students of geography, but the Russians were not. If the Tzar had studied the geography of Japan he would have learned that they were being suffocated in their small area, and just as a chicken must burst its shell or die, so Japan must expand or perish, and he would also have learned that a people who had conquered geographic obstacles such as surrounded the Japanese, must be brave, resolute, brainy, and enterprising.

The most backward countries are beginning to take an interest in geography. Menelik, the illiterate and untutored king of Abyssinia, who boasts himself the lineal descendant of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, keeps a telephone at his elbow through which he learns of the latest improvement in rifle and cannon. China, too, has abandoned her policy of satisfied seclusion to which she has clung for four thousand years and is ready and almost eager to learn from the nations.—From "Progress in Geography" by Gilbert H. Grosvenor in The Chautauquan for April.

Huge Task.

It was a huge task, to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone, I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache, and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach."
