Grand Jury Report.

The Grand Jury after having been in session six days made its report and was discharged Saturday. One hundred and fifty two witnesses were examined in fifty-two cases and twenty-nine presentments were brought. Repairs were recommended to the jail and the Sheriff's residence Fewer oyster licenses from the clerk's office have been issued than for years. The books of the County Treasurer were favorably commented upon and the financial condition of the county considered most excellent. It was recommended that a special accountant should be secured each year to go over the books of the Treasurer, as neither the members of the grand jury or County Commissioners, they thought, are qualified to do this. The examination of constables was considered unnecessary F. Carroll Goldsborough, foreman of the Grand Jury, signed the report.

Anyone interested in fruits, flowers or vegetables is invited to attend Members are urged to bring their families and friends. Ladies are especially welcome. The program will be of interest to them, also to the younger horticulturists.

Mr. J. Kemp Bartlett, Jr., of Baltimore, on the affirmative side took part in a debate at the Taylor Literary Society the other day. The question was 'Resolved, That Baltimore should issue bonds to the extent of $10,000 000 for the purpose of properly paving all streets as far as this sum would allow, these bonds to be paid off at the rate of $500,000 a year, beginning with the year 1910.' The affirmative won.

The pupils of the Easton Primary School, Mrs. Mason, Principal, gave a delightful little entertainment on Wednesday afternoon to their parents and friends. Besides singing, recitations, etc., appropriate to the occasion, there was a special play in which a doomed prisoner was the leading character—a live 15 lb. turkey. It was the day of his execution, poor fellow, although he was fat He was given to decorate the table of the beloved Examiner, Prof. Chaplain. The pupils of the school all contributed for his purchase, and Mr. Chaplain made some feeling remarks in appreciation of the gift.

GEN. SETH AND THE OYSTER LAWS.

He Will Probably Exercise a Commanding Influence in this Matter.

The Harford county Democrat says: General Seth, Senator-elect from Talbot county, who won his election in part by appeals to the prejudices of the oystermen, has declared in favor of oyster culture The Senator admits the failure of the present oyster laws and their non-enforcement, by reason, he believes, of the almost unanimous opposition of oystermen to their enforcements. He presents no remedy, but criticises and condemns what is known as the Haman bill, now prominently before the State as a remedy for the evils complained of. He points out what he claims to be its defects. If defects they are, the author and the Legislature will doubtless correct them.

It is quite apparent, however, that Senator Seth is hostile to his bill, and will probably be to all bills that do not recognize to the full extent the right of the oystermen to control the waters of the bay. This is their claim, and Mr. Seth recognizes it when he says they have enjoyed this privilege since the settlement of the State and makes no complaint of their pretenser. General Seth is a man of recognized ability, an experienced parliamentarian, and is expected to lead the fight against oyster culture. That he will have many followers in the tide-water counties is apparent from the opposition in past Legislatures. It looks, as an Eastern Shoreman recently expressed it, that the only hope of a successful measure before the Legislature is a union of the non-oyster counties and the city of Baltimore in favor of a law that will be just to the oystermen, but subjecting their privileges to the right of the sovereign State to manage its property, the bay and tributaries, for the best interest of all its citizens.

Quality Appreciated.

We frequently hear from people who purchased Weaver Organs many years ago and were so delighted with the musical qualities as well as their durability that they are anxious for a piano of the same quality.

By purchasing the Weaver Piano and no other, the same high standard of excellence will be assured and the organ will be taken in exchange if so desired. Ask for a catalogue and a proposition.

Philosophical Research.

Next stop, Christmas.

Have you paid your fare in full?

Did you get off at the Thanksgiving station, or stay on board?

It is easy to pay one's fare in 'thanks'. But that currency is not always sufficient. The printer-boy says it won't 'pass' when offered to him at the end of the week. He is told to 'pass on' for that is about all the revenue the proprietor has had.

People, some people, take great unction to themselves in their ability to say 'thanks' feelingly when they know in the depth of their souls they should feel in the depth of their pockets for something besides mere thanks.

It is near the end of 1905, and we are in line for a deluge of 'thanks' for the paper so feelingly sent during the year. We know what to expect—we have been in it before.

Papers are so free, and so common, they are tossed on the door step in sample lots begging a welcome. One kind this week, and another kind next. So during the year there are enough to keep the fires kindled. Then why bother one's self to take a regular weekly visitor, through the mail?

The Gazette doesn't know much, just enough to come in out of the rain, if it rains hard; but it does know that it takes a little wit, a little money, and a host of friends to keep a paper from dying of starvation.

The friends are more important than either of the other factors, and yet without wit and money no paper would have many friends long.

The long and short of it is this: we want more subscribers. We want to give the rural free delivery wagons more work. We want you, kind reader, to interest yourself in trying to give us one new subscriber for 1906. If all can do that our mailing list will be doubled, and in return you will get a far better paper.

In two more weeks the Gazette will be 89 years old. Along side of its first issue, to be seen framed and hanging in the sanctum, Vol. I, No 1, the present paper looks young, vigorous, handsome; as though Time had reversed his wrinkling machine.

Wrinkles come soon enough, and many enough, but sometimes 'new wrinkles' are beneficial.

The prosperous merchant gets a new wrinkle and he advertises it.

The genius hits a new wrinkle and he makes money. The printer also gets a new wrinkle occasionally.

New wrinkles are not old in this office, about the time they become stale, flat and unprofitable they are discarded for other wrinkles.

That is to say, in the line of printing we keep up to date, and fear no competition. This sounds like blowing one's own horn

Well, remember it is approaching the season of the year when others should be told where they can get what they most desire.

Consult the advertisements of this paper and decide. Then if it is some nicely printed or engraved stationery, remember the spot to get it is right here.

Give that distant friend a surprise by sending him or her this paper for 1906. It may begin right away and the charge will only be $1 00.

Can't you stand it? Sit down to it then, and we will stand it. If it does not express your desire exactly, perhaps they will go by freight easier. Well, we pay the freight at this end, after you have bought a through ticket for yourself, or friend, and the old, young, battle-scarred Gazette for 1906 will keep you joyous company.

Try it.
