Right You Are, Brother.

Did you ever notice that the majority of kicks made against a newspaper are made by spongers? They never pay a cent to support the paper, yet believe it is their bounden duty to direct the paper's destinies, shape its policies, criticise its contents and cuss it generally. Early in our journalistic career it fretted us to rub against this class, but our dislikes have gradually changed to a half-hearted toleration. Maybe they can't help it. Their natures are too warped for them to realize their condition. If they can't borrow their neighbor's paper or read the barber shop and hotel copies, we are really soft enough to give them a copy now and then This earth is peopled with all classes, who are apparently placed on earth to give us an opportunity of contrasting them with the good friends and firm supporters a newspaper really possesses.—Evening Capital.

RUNAWAY LAUNCH THE LATEST.

Mr. Noah Webster's Craft Causes Much Excitement on the Choptank'

There have been runaway horses and runaway automobiles in varying numbers, but the latest form of this sort of vagary is a runaway naphtha launch.

Mr. Noah Webster of Cambridge owns a large launch which managed to create considerable excitement in the Choptank river while on a rampage last Friday. Mr. Webster left Cambridge in his launch and started down the river to tow a barge to the city docks. When within about 100 yards of the barge he set the tiller so as to bring the nose of the launch within a yard or two of the barge and then went to the bow to cast a tow line. He was alone in the launch, which was making about eight miles an hour. Just before he cast the line he lost his balance and fell overboard. The launch went skimming along, turned the stern of the barge to a nicety and proceeded to a graceful and wide sweep over the water, while a negro on the barge was doing his best to fish Mr. Webster out of the river, a feat which was successfully accomplished.

The launch, meanwhile, was plowing the whitecaps gaily, and the sight of the runaway soon attracted about a dozen other craft of various kinds. Some made hot pursuit, but the unmanned launch was going at such a rate of speed that it was impossible to head it off or stop it. It was going so fast that the smaller boats could not hold it without being themselves upset. It went close to shore on one tack and far out among the large oyster fleet on the other. The pursuers increased in number, and confusion and the excitement of the chase was intense and unique. Finally, after about an hour, the launch struck an oyster bed and stuck fast. A negro sailed up in a canoe and boarded the helpless boat and stopped the engine. In the course of the afternoon this launch that has the spirit of 'Wanderlust' in an aggravated form was towed to the Cambridge pier and returned as a wayward child to its owner.—Baltimore News.

'The champion corn producer in Kent this year,' says the News, 'is very likely Mr. Isaac Gibbs of Massey. He had a 22-acre field of white corn which yielded big. He measured accurately three acres of this field, and got 92 bushels an acre. Who can beat it? He used about 500 pounds of fertilizer an acre, and also manured it good, but got results that paid him.'

'THE PEARL AND THE OUMPKIN,'

Amusing Extravaganza at Academy of Music, Baltimore, Next Week.

Klaw & Erlanger's magnificent production of imaginative extravaganza, 'The Pearl and the Pumpkin' is to be presented at the Academy of Music, Baltimore, for an engagement of one week opening next Monday evening, but it is doubtful if the magnificence of production to be seen in 'The Pearl and the Pumpkin' will ever be excelled. It is a unique extravaganza and an imaginative one, the book and lyrics being by Paul West and W. W. Denslow, and the music by John W. Bratton. In each of the three acts are many scenes forming a succession of wonderfully beautiful stage pictures in which are to be seen processions of exquisitely gowned women, very fair to look upon, but handled in a manner so artistic that there is at no time a surfeit. Musically 'The Pearl and the Pumpkin' contains many gems and the book is full of bright lines and exceedingly amusing comedy situations. The story told hinges upon the utter failure of the pumpkin crop all over the world except in one small town in Vermont. Here a farmer's boy, with the aid of a good fairy who has given him some magic seeds, Joe Miller has succeeded in growing a splendid crop of the succulent golden vegetable so sought after for pie filling. Joe, with true boyishness, has cut most of his crop up into 'Jack-o'-lanterns' and when he is sought for by the many would-be purchasers of his crop he has none to sell. They persuade a wicked sprite to change Joe into a 'pumpkin head' and as such his adventures are many and very funny. In the end he is rescued by the same good fairy who has given him the magic seeds, wins his sweetheart and all ends as it should. It requires the services of one hundred and fifty people to present the 'Pearl and the Pumpkin' and the big cast includes the names of many well-known favorites
