morous conversation between Messrs. Martin and Loveday, the subject of the resolutions was again resumed.

Col. Hambleton withdrew his motion to lay on the table, stating that the delegates to the State Convention, were empowered to nominate all State Officers, and that it had been the custom of the Whigs in this county to send their delegates to the Conventions untramalled, and without instructions, leaving them to act according to their best judgment.

After further discussion by Messrs. Cox and Loveday, Dr. Cox withdrew the first resolution and that portion of the last resolution instructing the delegates, and the resolution was unanimously adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That the delegates appointed at the last meeting of the Whigs of this county, to represent the county in the State Convention be also expected to sustain the same relation to the E Shore Convention, which will be held at the same time.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

For the Easton Gazette.

Amid the variety of political topics and controversies which are now agitating and exciting the minds of your readers, it may perhaps be a little recreation for them to turn their thoughts for a few minutes into another channel. If, therefore, you will allow me a small niche in your columns, I will give them a brief account of an examination and exhibition which it was my good fortune to witness at one of our country schools on Wednesday of last week.

In Edmonson's Neck, not far from the main road leading from Easton, the good people of that neighborhood have lately erected a new school house, and have been fortunate enough to secure an able and competent teacher to take charge of their school. I allude to Mr. P. Smyth, the present incumbent, who is not only a finished scholar, but judging from the manner in which his pupils acquitted themselves on the occasion to which I refer, seeming to possess that peculiar talent of imparting instruction to youth, which is so often deficient in some of our most learned teachers. Through the polite invitation of the Trustees I was induced to attend the examination, and was much pleased to discover a great interest taken by the patrons of the school. Not a parent or guardian was absent but from some uncontrolable cause. This speaks well for the cause of education. When the neighborhood take that interest in watching the progress of their school it gives a stimulant both to the teacher and scholar, which usually insures attention and improvement. The want of this co-operation on the part of parents and guardians with the teacher, has been the greatest obstacle to the success of education. We are glad, however, to find this unanimity of feeling and action between patrons and teacher is greatly on the increase. We cannot help mentioning this circumstance as it was so manifest in the conduct of Mr. Smyth's pupils, and manner in which they acquitted themselves in the various exercises of the day. The beautiful order which was observed by the classes in coming up to recite, and the erect and manly posture of the young pupils, showed at once that the discipline which they had been accustomed to, was of no ordinary character. The promptness and correctness with which they answered every question put to them, gave the most satisfactory proof of the good mental training which they had received from their learned and competent instructer.

We have not time to go into any of the details of the examination, but suffice it to say, that it was upon the elementary branches usually taught in our public schools, such as English Grammar, History, Geography, and Arithmetic. We must not forget to mention the small Latin class which Mr. Smyth has lately formed in his school. Their translation of the various parts of "Historiæ Sacriæ," was a good index of the foundation which they were laying in the rudiments of the classics. Whilst we were truely pleased with the proficiency which Mr. S.'s scholars exhibited in all those branches, we were highly delighted and entertained with the exercises in Elocution which closed the proceedings of the day. The dialogue of "our duty at School" which was recited by Miss Hoxter and Miss McFarland who personated the character, of Harriet and Sophia' was highly creditable to the young Misses The "importance of a good education"—The "advantage of History" and that beautiful piece of composition "The creation of the world" were admirably declaimed by the young Misses Kinnemon, Ashe, and C. A. Leaverton. Master W. G. McFarland, who recited the "soliloquy of Selkirk on the Island of Juan Fernandiz" acquitted himself with great credit. The Dialogues of the "Cottagers" and "The vices of men should excite compassion" were beautifully illustrated by the two Messrs Leaverton's who personated the character of "Everard" and "Charles" and the young Messrs Kinnamon, that of "Democritus" and "Heracletus" The Dialogue of the "Fickle Youth" by C. A Leaverton and J. A. Leaverton who took the part of "Tristran" and "old Fickle" could not fail to amuse and delight any audience. After these exercises in which every one present were so highly entertained, the vacation was announced by one of the Trustees and the whole affair wound up by all present adjourning to a table beautifully decorated with flowers and filled with confectionary of every description. Thus we enjoyed one of the most delightful recreations which it had been our fortune to enjoy this season. SPECTATOR.

KOSSUTH AND HIS COMPANIONS.—The Board of Aldermen of New York have adopted a preamble and resolution, to extend to Kossuth and his immediate associates, a kindly and hospitable welcome on their arrival in that city; that the Mayor be requested to tender to the hospitalities of the city; and that Kossuth be received by the Common Council in a manner worthy of the man and the cause he espoused.

IMPORTANT.—The Norfolk Herald states that a private letter has been received in that city, by a friend of the Cuba cause, which states that Gen. Gonzales has, before this, left Savannah with two thousand men in a steamboat and two sail vessels. The steamer is fully prepared for a conflict with any of the Spanish cruisers.—The Herald adds:

The letter hints at difficulties between Lopez and the other leaders in America, which was probably the cause of the failure of the late expedition. This account tallies somewhat with the news of the movement at Jacksonville, and Gen. Gonzale's presence at Charleston on the 2d inst.

One of her front teeth is a little decayed; with that exception, her teeth are good. Her form is unusually good—indeed, she may be said to be handsome. It is supposed that she left the Camp ground in either the steamer Dupont, Mary Washington, or the Lancaster, from Dover ferry.
