AN Apprentice wanted to learn the printing business. An honest, industrious and intelligent boy, 14 or 15 years of age, can hear of a good situation by applying immediately at this office. nov 22

THE first Legislature under the new Constitution will convene at Annapolis on Wednesday next, and as no limit is placed upon its sittings it is probable that the session will be a very lengthy one.

WE issue but a half sheet to-day, and we are thankful that we are able even to do that. We received on Thursday a letter from our paper dealer in Baltimore, stating that he placed four reams of a large size paper on board the Steamer Champion directed to our address, on last Wednesday week; on Wednesday last the Champion arrived at Oxford, and we were informed by one of the hands that our paper was put on board the Hugh Jenkins the Monday previous, in order that it might reach us at as early a day as possible. The Hugh Jenkins did not arrive here until Thursday, and the Captain informed us that he had not received the paper as reported. So what has become of it is difficult to tell. We are indebted to Mr. Jas. K. Harper, Jr. editor of the Centreville Times, for sufficient to print a half sheet, which we received last evening.

THE International Magazine for January is promptly on our table. The publishers are renewing their exertions to keep the lead in Magazine publishing, and have secured a large number of original contributors of high reputation. In quality and quantity of reading matter, and in beauty of typography, this work is unsurpassed. Published by Stringer & Townsend, 222 Broadway, New York, at $3 per year; two copies for $5; five copies for $10.

WHAT has become of the last No. of Gleason's Pictorial Drawing room Companion? It was not received, and we had rather lose any two papers on our exchange list than the Companion, as it is the most beautiful and interesting paper published in the United States.—Send on the missing No. Mr. Gleason.

ANOTHER STABBING AFFAIR.—We learn that an affray occurred at Mr. Blake's store at the Hole-in-the-Wall in this county, on Friday night last, between Thomas Hobbs and Jonathan Faulkner, which resulted in the stabbing of two other persons, Messrs. Charles Ray and John Dobson, who attempted to part the combatants.—Sheriff Clark arrested Hobbs and Faulkner on Sunday afternoon and took them before Justice Wheeler, who, in default of bail, committed them for a further hearing of the case, which will take place on to-morrow. Dobson was stabbed but slightly, but Ray very seriously, and still lies dangerously ill of his wounds at Mr. Blake's house. We sincerely trust that the examination on to-morrow, may elicit sufficient testimony to secure the conviction of the guilty party.—S.

Faulkner was subsequently liberated on giving bail in the sum of $1500.

RETURN OF LOOCKERMAN.—Theodore R. Loockerman, the young man announced by us last week as having fled the county for killing the negro man, John Reason, returned home on Saturday night, and surrendered himself into the hands of the Sheriff on Sunday morning, and is now in jail to await his trial at the first term of the Circuit Court for this county. He has voluntarily surrendered himself into the custody of the law to be tried by his country, and as the issue will be one of serious import to him, we shall refrain from indulging in any further remarks upon the subject calculated to prejudice the public mind either for or against the prisoner.—Star.

Loockerman was brought before Judge Hopper this morning and after examination and argument, it was decided to admit him to bail in the sum of $8000, which was immediately given, John W. Martin, Esq., and Dr. Robert Goldsborough becoming his securities.—Chambers, Hambleton and Carmichael, appeared for Loookerman, and Martin for State.

GOV. KOSSUTH arrived in Baltimore on Saturday last, and was received with all the honors which it was possible to shower upon him. He made one of his great speeches in reply to addresses of welcome by Mayor Jerome, Judge Legrand and others. He left on Monday, for Washington, where he was received with every mark of respect, but not with so much enthusiasm as in some other places which he has visited. The following letter relating to the subject will be found of interest:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.

Arrival of Kossuth—His Reception, &c.—Kossuth and suite, comprising seventeen persons arrived in the city this morning, at eleven o'clock. A large crowd was at the Railroad Station in waiting to see him. There was not so much enthusiasm as we anticipated, although from the knowledge of the character generally of our citizens, we did not expect such extravagant demonstrations as were elsewhere exhibited. We have seen larger crowds and harder cheers on the arrival of Henry Clay. The disagreeable state of the weather, so far as regards the wet and muddy condition of the streets, may have prevented, on this occasion a large assemblage.

General Shields and Governor Seward, two of the Senate's committee of reception, and R. Wallach, Esq., the U. S. District Marshal, received him; but what was the ceremony we did not learn. Police officers were present to preserve order, and were headed by their chief, Captain Goddard.

Governor Kossuth and one of his aids (in Hungarian costume,) General Shields, and Mr. Wallach, occupied the foremost hack; Governor Seward took care of the ladies. As soon as the hacks began to move, hundreds of persons started off afoot, some of them following the train, and others taking a short cut for Brown's hotel—the head quarters prepared for the guests. From the balcony of this edifice were desplayed the Turkish, Swiss, Hungarian, German and Italian flags, with the star-spangled banner flying from the parapet. The crowd in front huzzaed, and shortly afterwards, Kossuth appeared on the balcony, bowed to the sovereigns, and retired.

A paper is circulating to-day, to give Kossuth a banquet; tickets, five dollars each. It is extensively signed. G.

He was called upon by Mr. Webster and Lady, and other distinguished individuals immediately after his arrival.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24, 1851.

Fire at the Capitol—The Congressional Library Destroyed—Over $200,000 Damage to the Building—Destruction of Baker's Hotel, &c.

At an early hour this morning fire was discovered to be raging in the Library of the Capitol, and the alarm was speedily given by the watchmen. Our firemen repaired to the scene of the conflagration with great rapidity, but a delay of an hour or two occurred in getting the engines to work, in consequence of their having been engaged during the latter portion of the night at a fire which destroyed Baker's Hotel, at the corner of Fifth and D streets, at which the hose was frozen. The fire, in the meantime, spread with alarming rapidity, and in a short time the library room, and the document room above it, were completely burnt out. Fully three-fourths of the library were consumed, including the most valuable portion, and embracing many rare works which can never be replaced. No serious damage, except by water, was sustained by any other portion of the Capitol.

The fire is supposed to have caught from the flues connecting with the furnaces in the main basement of the Capitol.

All the fire companies in Washington, and one or more from Alexandria, were on hand and in service. President Fillmore and the members of the Cabinet, the Mayor of the city, Mr. Speaker Boyd, and numerous members and officers of Congress, were early on the ground and active in endeavoring to save the public property.

The mechanics at the navy yard were sent for, and soon arrived with their axes, and in a short time severed the burning part of the roof from the dome, and thus prevented the extension of the flames to the roofs and domes of the Senate and House of Representatives.

The marines from the Navy Yard also assisted the firemen and citizens in conveying water in buckets to the engine, which was placed and worked in the centre of the Rotunda. The whole building was completely flooded with water. The dome of the Rotunda was at one time in great danger, but both that and the two halls of Congress are uninjured, except by water.

The entire library contained 55,000 volumes; of these about 20,000 in an adjoining room, were saved. All the busts, paintings, and elegant fixtures have been destroyed, including the files of the National Intelligencer. The loss is over $200,000 and a greater portion of it is irreparable.

The firemen have worked all day, and have succeeded in extinguishing the flames. A guard of marines have been detailed to keep watch during the night.

PAILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.

Terrible and Fatal Fire in Philadelphia—Particulars of the Conflagration—Three Persons Killed—Loss of $150,000*—Shocking Suicide—Death by Burning.*

The disastrous conflagration of this morning forms the absorbing topic of conversation. It commenced in an upper story of Hart's building, a modern structure erected in 1846, upon the Duponceau property extending 200 feet along Sixth street, by about 40 on Chesnut.—The intense cold prevented the firemen from desplaying their customary promptness, and the fire extended throughout the building in a very short time. Soon after the conflagration became general, an upper portion of the wall fell outwardly, crushing to death William H. Haly, Esq., a prominent member of the Philadelphia Bar, and severely injuring Mr. Thos. S. Grant and another of the Marshal's police, one it is believed fatally. Mr. Geo. Dickhart, of the Weccacoe engine, was also severely injured, and Lewis S. Briest, of the police, much bruised.

This deterred the firemen from going too near the tottering walls, and the heat of the fire soon ignited the Shenkspeare buildings on the opposite side of the street, which quite as extensive as the other, though not as lofty, were also completely demolished. The walls of Heart's block are down to the foundation, and the Sixth street wall of the Shakespeare building has also fallen, carrying with it part of the division wall of the Chesnut street theatre. The latter building was several times on fire, but the firemen succeeded in saving it with but slight injury. On Chesnut, below Sixth, the law book store of Messrs. Johnson, and that of J. W. Moore, with the Eagle Hotel, were also destroyed. There was a large number of stores and workshops embraced in the buildings burned.

The whole loss cannot be less than $150,000, about one-third of which is not covered by insurance. Hart's building was insured for $90,000, and the Shakespeare Hotel for $12,000. The bulk of the real estate belonged to Abraham Hart and Wm. H. Winder, who were partially insured.

Two colored men who have not yet been identified, were also killed by the falling of a wall. The firemen by their untiring exertions saved the State House buildings from destruction. They caught several times.

An inebriated man named Drake was burned to death last night in a lime kiln near the Schuylkill. He is supposed to have thrown himself into the kiln for the purpose of self-destruction.

Mrs. Wheeler, of Southwark, was also burned to death this morning by her clothes taking fire accidentally.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 30.

Destructive Fire at Philadelphia—Barnum's Museum Destroyed, &c.—Our city has again been visited by a most destructive fire, like that of Saturday last, demolishing another of those fine structures that have recently been erected on Chesnut street.

About 5 o'clock this afternoon, fire was discovered in Barnum's Museum, on the the S. E. Corner of Seventh and Chesnut streets, which occupied the upper stories of the magnificent brown stone building erected there some five years since. In a short time, the whole building was one mass of fire, and from the combustible character of its contents, the efforts of the firemen to subdue the flames were altogether unsuccessful. The museum contained the large collection of curiosities known as the Peale's, with many others which have been added since it fell into the hands of Mr. Barnum. The theatrical saloon alone was as large as most theatres, and fitted up in magnificent style. The flames spread with great rapidity, burning downward until it reached the music and book stores on the lower story, the owners of which succeeded in saving their stocks, though in a damaged condition.

What ratio exists between a triangle and the figure formed by joining together the alternate points of trisection of its sides?

Answer to the question of the 20th Dec., is 9.64 pints, the upper segment being the antecedent of the ratio.

EVERETT'S CARRIAGE COUPLING.

PATENTED, Dec. 17th, 1850.

THIS improvement permits the use of large four wheels, with all the advantages derived from them in saving of frarection and surmounting obstacles with facility, and at the same time obviating the disadvantages which have hitherto attended their employment, as with this improvement a carriage can be turned in as small a space as those that have small fore-wheels, which run under the body; and besides the wheels never touch the body, and the parts are so arranged as to give a greater degree of strength than the old method of coupling.

The undersigned having purchased from the patentees their entire interest in their invention and patent for Talbot county, beg leave to call public attention to the same. The improvement is now being generally adopted by Carriage Makers in the principal cities of the United States. To say the patented-coupling will ultimately be universally adopted in the construction of fore-wheeled carriages, would only be repeating the generally expressed opinions of all who have used or seen them. It is believed by many that the additional strength and simplicity of the construction alone would insure its general use; but when the convenience of turning in one third of the space required for the old plan, together with the fact that either fore wheel can be so easily removed by one step of the horse as to be entirely out of the way of getting in or out;—the advantages are self evident, as the wheels never touch the body of the carriage, it will be found the danger of turning over is much lessened.

The undersigned are now prepared either to manufacture new, or alter old Cariages with Everett's Patent Carriage Coupling, at short notice, and solicit the patronage of the public. This coupling can be used with great advantage and convenience on wagons; and persons wishing to have new wagons made, or old ones altered, can obtain individual rights for its use by applying to

We have examined the improvement in the running gear of Carriages patented by Messrs. Edward and Charles Everett, of Washington, D.
