October Term 1869.

2 Answer. I have known it forty years.

Third Interrogatory. Did you ever, in the way of your business, do any work at, or in connection with, said property? If so, give the time or times when you so did work, and state in what part of the building the work done by you at each respective time was performed, and the cost thereof.

3 Answer. The first work that I did there was in 1848 that was the new additions on St Paul's street, running down Fayette street some three hundred feet I think. The first bill was one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six dollars and thirty six cents, and the second was one hundred and eighty-nine dollars and forty nine cents. Then the bill for raising the "Brown" and "Birkhead" houses in 1852, was one thousand four hundred and eighty-eight dollars and sixty seven cents. The next work was raising the Calvert street building in 1856, and my bill was four thousand five hundred and thirty two dollars and nineteen cents. There were various other jobs I did, for which I was paid when the work was done, of which I kept no account, from fifty to seventy five dollars each as near as I can recollect; I only kept memoranda of these from one week to another.

Fourth Interrogatory. Did you do any work there in laying stone? If not, who did that work?

4 Answer. I did not. I think it was done by Samuel Emory.

Fifth Interrogatory. Who furnished the brick that were used by you in those several pieces of work?

5 Answer. John B. Emory furnished the brick for the St Paul's street work in 1848, and Washington Rider
