THERE has been much valuable matter omitted this week on account of the extra space we have devoted to the Epworth League. The proceedings of the Circuit Court, an interesting letter from Nebraska and other matter unavoidably crowded out.

THE erudite Ledger man, the suave Democrat man and the bustling Free Press man are requested to put a dictionary in the sanctum. "Hair" lips grow on gentlemen not on ladies, and hare lips grow sometimes on both sexes.

IF there was no such thing as treaty obligations the bill fathered by Representative Bryan, of Nebr., providing for the issuing of $70,000,000 of greenbacks, to be used by the government in purchasing a controlling interest in the Nicaragua Canal and in building the same, now before the House Commerce committee, might be more seriously considered than it is.

GOLD, like everything else, is afraid of this administration. At least, it gets away from it quite fast. Notwithstanding 50,000,000, in gold receeived from the late bond issue, the gold in the Treasury is today below $80,000,000, and according to the opinion of many of the shrewdest observers in Congress, including friends as well as enemies of the administration another bond issue is only a question of time, and if there is not a decided "let up" in the drain on the treasury it will be a very short time.

THE State Board of Health, of which Dr. J. M. H. Bateman, of Easton is President, has issued a strong appeal to the citizens of Maryland to be vaccinated, as the best preventative against the loathsome disease, small pox.

It most strenously urges upon town authorities everywhere in the State, to provide for the free vaccination of their people, at this time when this pestilence is invading our borders from every side, and when aggravated by the multitude of irresponsible, homeless, wandering tramps, who are traversing our towns and cities, in such forms as to be most effective carriers of this dread disease.

We hope these admonitions will be attended to before it is too late and that our officials will see that everything is done to prevent a scourge of small pox from visiting Easton or Talbot.

DOES the sticky trail of the sugar scandal lead to the White House? Statements made by democrats, mind you, not repbublicans, first indicated that it did, and the action of the investigating committee, in pretending to be greatly exercised because three newspaper correspondents—one of them a democrat, the other Senator Murphy's private secretary-have declined to give the names of those who gave them information, has not weakened the indications. The committee may be perfectly honest in its attempt but experience should warn them of the time they are wasting. There is probably not a newspaper correspondent in Washington who would not go to jail and stay there rather than to tell the name of any man who had given him information in confidence, and nobody knows this any better than the Senators on this committee; hence the belief that they are merely using the correspondents in making a play for time, instead of asking the men whose names have been directly connected with the scandal for the information that will establish the truth or falsity of the charge that the sugar trust dictated the sugar schedule of the tariff bill. The present actions of the committee confirm the impression of those who predicted from the first that the whole investigation would be as great a fizzle as that part of it which dealt with the alleged attempt to bribe Senators.

LIGHT HAS BEEN TURNED ON.

We had hoped the Star would have undertaken to vindicate the course of the Democratic party before the country, but it is simply prolific with assertions which it cannot prove. It has bandied words and indulged in wild statements derogatory to the Republican party, interspersed with boast and praise for the Democratic party. In not one instance has this paper attempted to discuss a single issue in justification or defence of the course of the Democratic party since it came into power. It is certainly familiar with the planks of the Chicago platform, and it must know that Congress has already furnished in dubitable evidence that it never intends to carry out the tenets and policy of that declaration of principles. Fifteen long and weary months have rolled down the grooves of time since the "triumphant democracy" came into undisputed power, and during all this time the people have been watching and waiting for the redemption of pledges, for the repeal of the viscious laws and the correction of the evils complained of in the campaign of 1892. And what do they find? The Democratic members of Congress hopelessly divided on the silver question, and worse confused on the tariff question. The seigniorage bill passed by a democratic Congress and vetoed by a democratic President; the Wilson tariff bill kicked aside as if it were a foot ball in the Senate, and the Voorhees' substitute for the discarded bill spit upon as unworthy and side-tracked to give the right of way to the Gorman Compromise bill. The theory of tariff for revenue only has been utterly repudiated by the Senate, and a protective tariff bill has been substituted and is now pending before the Senate. The democratic press all over the country and occasional democratic public meetings are denouncing Senator Gorman as a traitor to his party, and yet the twinkling Star of Easton says: "Already the walls of protection have been broken and shattered by a united Democratic party in the Senate." What has become of the Neal amendment in the Chicago platform that declared for free-trade and denounced the robber tariff? Senator Gorman says: "That there has never been a moment when either the original Wilson bill or the measure first reported by the Senate Committee could command a majority in the Senate." The Senator further states that the compromise bill represents the views of Mr. Cleveland, and that if the country had thought that the President advocated a radical reform of the tariff he would have been overwhelmingly defeated in the campaign of 1892.

Senators Gorman, Brice, Hill, Murphy, McPherson and one or two others, Democrats as they unquestionably are, represent States that embrace an industrial area compared with which no other equal space of territory in the United States bears any parallel whatever. The vast interests confided to their stewardship in the Senate are well calculated to appeal to their judgment and patriotism. The territory represented by these Senators contains the seat of empire on this continent. Wealth, commerce and enterprise dwell in this populous region to an extent that they no where else exist on this hemisphere. Under the provisions of the McKinley act our commerce has been augmented to $1,800,000,000, and our home productions swollen to $15,000,000,000 and our domestic trade amount to $50,000,000,000. These interests have become so enormous that any broad minded statesman would pause before he would consent to destroy the policy under which they have been fostered and developed. Moreover, the country is now awakened to a sense of its danger, the people are moved by suffering and distress and they demand at the hands of Congress the exercise of sense, and can be no longer satisfied or led off by expectations.—They are confronted by realities and mere sound and shadows will no longer suffice. Too dearly have they paid for the delusions hitherto practiced upon them, and hence, they will now demand substance,—they must have relief or they will practically crush those who deny it to them.

Mr. Cleveland, evidently, has abandoned the doctrine of his message of 1887, and like Senator Gorman and other leading Democrats, has become a Samuel J. Randall protection democrat. The free-trade element in the Democratic fold has been taken into the back room and told that, to attempt to adopt their peculiar fiscal and economic views, would wreck the party beyond recovery, and invite greater calamities than any they had foretold in their crusade against the Republican policy of protection in the late campaigns. Hence, our neighbor will have to take the back track and bid farewell to his delusion that the Democrats in Congress and the President ever intented to carry out the wild tariff theories embodied in the Chicago platform. Platforms are written for fools. The pledges they contain are to get in on, but as Burke Corckran said in the National Convention of 1892, not to be observed after you get in. The heresy of free trade is in great agony and will never reach the promised land. Wilson and Voorhees will be "annihilated," and there is little doubt that the "triumphant Democracy" will be relegated to "innocuous desuetude."

News from Bozman.

The rain has delayed farmers very much in working the corn crop.

Some of our people who went strawberry picking have returned, those at Pittsville have not yet arrived. They report the crop as fair.

There is a gun club being organized at Bozman. After a little practice we expect to hear of some brag shooting.

This section of Talbot county is catching the fever that Easton has had for some time, that of trotting horses. Nearly every afternoon you can see somebody out speeding his youngster. I understand there is to be a trotting match next Saturday afternoon at Bozman with several entries.

It is nearly time for our summer visitors to be making their appearance.

Harvest is not very far distant in this section. The wheat is beginning to change color. Some think it will not be over two weeks or ten days.

Rumor has it that Dr. A. C. Lowe is to locate at Bozman and practice his profession, also open a drug store.

Some of our oystermen have gone to crabbing for a summer's work.

The mercantile trade, generally, is dull.

Only one Juror out of Broad Creek Neck this spring.

Mrs. J. T. Prouse and Miss Nannie Bridges represented the Epworth League in Easton this week.

Bozman school is rehearsing for closing day exercises.

Mr. H. C. Neavitt purchased the "Camper" farm last week for $3,050.

Corn is not looking very well this spring. Nights too cool.

COL. GEORGE W. F. VERNON.

FLOWERS FOR THE DEAD.

MEMORIAL SERVICES IN EASTON.

A day of Devotional Exercises in honor of the fallen heroes—Services held in Spring Hill Cemetery. Colonel W. F. Vernon delivered the oration.

Wednesday morning bid fair to anticipate for Decoration Day one of sunshine and though the clouds gathered at times, no rain fell to thwart the objects of the celebration in Spring Hill Cemetery. The program was practically carried out as arranged by Hicks Post, No. 24, G. A. R.; Phil Sheridan's camp Sons of Veterans; Matapeake Tribe, No. 30, I. O. R. M., Patapsco Tribe, I. O. R. M., of Bethlehem and a committee of seven from the Shield of Honor. The Wye Mills band furnished the music, and the procession was escorted to the Cemetery by Co. F., 1st Regiment, M. N. G. The procession formed at Market Space, marched down Dover street to Aurora, across to Railroad Avenue, down to Harrison street, then to the Cemetery. The parade was quite a lengthy one, and when arrayed around the platform made an elaborate spectacle. A large crowd was assembled to meet them, and after Commander Thomas F. Coburn had assigned each company to its proper place the exercises began with "Nearer, My God, to Thee." After that Chaplain Walter H. Thompson, I. O. O. F., read the Memorial Day Prayer, the band played a selection, and Commander Coburn read the G. A. R. Memorial service and a very carefully composed speech for the day which was as follows:

Comrades, the duty of today is of impressive significance. We meet to honor our dead and to deepen our reverence for their worth, to strengthen among ourselves the bond of fraternity by recalling the memory of experiences common to us all; to encourage a more generous charity for comrades who are sick or in distress, and the destitute wards of the Grand Army; to renew our pledge of loyalty to our country and our flag, and to emphasize in the mind and hearts of all who may unite with us, the privilege and duty of patriotism.

Comrades, it is expected that throughout our services each one will manifest the most courteous and reverent decorum, let our soldierly deportment be such that we may worthily honor the graves we decorate, the memories we cherish, the flag we salute, and the Grand Army to which we belong.

To the friends who are assembled here with us I, as commander of this Post, in behalf of my comrades, welcome you to this public service. To us Decoration Day is the memorial of stalwart bravery, of patriotic heroism, of national faith. It is the freedom day of a race emancipated from bondage, and of a nation redeemed from iniquity. It is dear to every soldier. It deepens in our hearts a memory of our brave and our beloved, the Grand Army of the immortals, and the memory that makes precious to us the badge of the G. A. R., which we wear upon our breasts. May we join so reverently in these exercises that what we call a Decoration Day may be to our dead their day of Coronation.

COMMANDER THOS. H. COBURN.

Obedience is a soldier's duty. It is [illegible] however, merely in obedience to the orders read that we assemble here. The most generous instincts of our hearts [illegible] to do what the orders from Head [illegible] command. This day commemorates [illegible] on sea and land that is illustrious [illegible] is eloquent with a patriotism [illegible] not speak only from the lips. This day is sacred with almost visible [illegible] those who, out of prison [illegible] from camps and battle fields, have [illegible] innumerable company of those who [illegible] today upon the parade ground [illegible]

Today is the festival of our dead. We [illegible] to honor the memory of our brave [illegible] beloved, to ennoble our lives by [illegible] public heroism and a private worth [illegible] immortal, to encourage by our solemn [illegible] vice a more zealous and stalwart [illegible] Festival of the dead! Yes, though [illegible] are clouded with fear, though [illegible] are heavy with regret, though many [illegible] still desolate because of the father or brother, the husband or lover, who did not [illegible] back, though every grave which a tender [illegible] erence or love adorns with flowers [illegible] shrine of a sorrow whose influence is still [illegible] tent though its keen poignancy [illegible] ed. Despite of all, today is a festival [illegible] tival of our dead; no less a festival because it is full of solemnity. And now as in this solemn camping ground of dead with [illegible] tenderness and love we garland their passionless mounds, let us recall those who made breasts a barricade between our country and its foes. Let us recall their toils, their suffering, their heroism, their [illegible] fidelity in camp, in prison pen, or on the battle field, and in hospital, that the flag under which they fought and from the shadows of whose folds they were promoted, they may never be dishonored; that the country for whose Union and Supremacy they surrendered life may have the fervent and enthusiastic devotion of every citizen; that as we stand every grave is as before an altar, we may pledge our manhood that so help us God, the memory of our dead shall encourage and strengthen in us all a more loyal patriotism.

It was followed by loud clapping of hands and when the confusion subsided Col. Geo. W. F. Vernon stepped to the front of the stage to deliver an oration on the patriotism of the day. Col. Vernon is an ex postmaster of Baltimore and an able speaker. This oration was delivered in these words:

We have gathered today at the graves of the American Citizen Soldier, to do honor and reverence to his memory. With fair floral offerings we strew these little mounds, and vow to keep their memories forever green in the hearts of their grateful countrymen. In honoring their memory, we honor our God, our Country and ourselves. We have always depended upon the American citizen soldier in time of public peril from early colonial days to the present time, and he has never been found wanting.

The nations of antiquity, whom we term classic, whose history we study, whose patriot utterances we quote, whose patriotism we would emulate at stated periods, did honor the memory of its fallen heroes; but as a matter of fact the world has never witnessed so sublime a spectacle as today is witnessed in America, where all over this broad land of ours, millions of men, women and children with reverent mien do honor to our dead heroes. If such tributes would make the Greek and Roman soldier invincible, and they were verily so, as compared with the co-existent nation of their day and generation, could they do less for the American soldier in this government of, by and for the people, with the inestimable blessing of civil and religious liberty?

Our fathers sprang from a sturdy stock, and they were reared in the best of all schools—the school of adversity. They came not to America in quest of gold, but they came to an inhospitable shore that they might have the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and a voice in making the laws by which they should be governed; and this was the case, whether it was the Puritan of New England, the Huguenot of South Carolina, the Catholic of Maryland or the Quaker of Pennsylvania. They grew by the neglect rather than the culture of the home government.

The late Civil War was inevitable; it had to come. It was to be the last crucial test to which our institutions should be subjected, and it came like a thunder-clap in a clear sky. The guns at Fort Sumpter roused both the North and the South. The most lethargic realized that a long, bitter struggle was before us. The war for the Union was not a war waged for conquest. The old flag was unfurled without a star (typifying the States of the Union) erased from its azure field, and through four long years of trial and tribulation, 'midst summer's heat and winter's cold, on land and sea, through alternate defeat and victory, it was borne untarnished to the final victory without a star obscured or a stripe erased or polluted, bearing for its motto no such miserable interrogatory as, "What is all this worth?" or those other words of delusion and folly of, "Liberty first and Union afterwards," but bearing all over in characters of living light those other words dear to every American heart, "Liberty and Union now and forever, one and inseperable." And today we recognize but one flag in America, waving over an indestructible union of indestructible States. The former Confederate soldier will as willingly fight for the honor of Old Glory as will the Union soldier.

It is a pleasant sight and an object lesson to the nations of the world when the Union and Confederate soldier unite in doing honor to the memory of the American citizen soldier; and the rising generations draw inspiration from the sight, teach them that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. Let the national flags be unfurled on every school house; teach the people what that banner signifies, and let them understand that their primal duty is to honor and protect it even by the sacrifice of life itself.

The Maryland soldier in the Civil war bore no ignoble part in the battle for the Union. Her soldiers and sailors recollected that they were the sons of the old Maryland Line, who did so much for the establishment of the Union. The Maryland sailor was found in all of our fleets, at New Orleans, at Mobile, at Charleston and Fort Fisher—in fact, wherever the American sailors were in the thickest of the fray, you found a shipmate from Maryland.

In the army they fought at Winchester, at Lynchburg, at Gettysburg, at Antietam, at Knoxville, at Atlanta, with Sherman in his march to the sea, and at the final winding up at Appomattox; in all branches of the service, infantry, artillery, and cavalry, her loyal sons did their duty like men.

The war was all for the best probably. The Bible tells us that "the Lord chasteneth those whom he loveth". We are a re-united, stronger nation than ever before. We have learned to better appreciate one another, to admit our faults and to act with mutual forbearance. The country has entered on a long career of peace and prosperity; it may meet with a temporary check now and then but the march is upward and onward. Let us profit by the example of the past, let us remember that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty and guard against every danger that menaces our beloved country. Let us look bravely at danger that threatens the future of our country while offering an asylum to the oppressed and poor of other lands.

We do not want the anarchist or communists amongst us, opposed to both law and religion. We do not want a people who cannot be assimilated in the body politic, who does not comprehend our institutions and cannot be utilized in the army and navy in the time of public peril. Let us keep the race pure and undefiled. Let us teach our children to fear God and love their country. Let us not fail to enact and enforce laws, that whilst protecting capital will not oppress labor, but protect it fearlessly also. Let it be known that the people, and not money and capital, rule the nation. Encourage industry, defend the sanctity of the home and fireside, encourage true manhood and womanhood and teach that the title of American citizenship is worth more than that of prince or king, and teach by our example here today in honoring the memory of the citizen soldier that the highest and most exalted duty is that of patriotism. In doing that you honor yourselves, your manhood and your womanhood, your flag and your country.

Col. Vernon had the attention and appreciation of the multitude. After this Company F. fired a salute in honor of the departed comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic. Rev. J. M. Sheridan then pronounced the benediction, and the flowers gathered were scattered on the numerous graves with many sad and loving memories.

Spring Hill Cemetery is naturally a pretty one, but on Wednesday it fairly outshone itself with its innate beauty, and diversified here and there with the many kinds of fragrant flowers it was veritably an ideal garden of sleep.
