among his children, and I am sure he would not have left her out; I don't say now that he did pay her anything; I don't say it because I can't recollect.

Eighth cross interrogatory. Have you any recollection of ever having paid any other money than the 250 dollars you speak of to Mrs. Kemp?

8 X Answer. I have no distinct recollection of it; I may have done so, but I have no recollection of it.

Ninth cross interrogatory. The 250 dollars, however, which you have spoken of as having been paid by you to Mrs. Kemp, in order to get her to sign the Bradford deed, was paid to her when she was living at the large place you have spoken of, near Frederick, formerly owned by Colonel Maulsby this is correct is it not?

9 X Answer. That is my impression; I am not positive about it; it has been so long ago.

Tenth cross interrogatory. Did Mrs Kemp understand from you at the time you paid her this 250 dollars, that it was for her interest in the property conveyed to Bradford?

10 X Answer I don't think I had any conversation with her on that subject at all; I can only give you my impressions about it; my impressions are that my father gave her that money (I won't say in consideration of her signing the deed, because she either would sign it, or had signed it. I don't know which;) those are my impressions.

Eleventh cross interrogatory. Do you remember saying any thing, whatever, to Mrs. Kemp about the Bradford deed when you paid her this 250 dollars?

11 X Answer I don't recollect any conversation I had with her; I can't - it has been too long.

Twelfth cross interrogatory. Do you know any thing about your father's having promised Mrs. Kemp, that she should get, when your mother died, certain stock for signing the Bradford deed?

12 X Answer. No, Sir; I do not.

Thirteenth cross interrogatory. Do you not remember that a short time after your mother's death, Mr. Lewis E. Kemp, the father of the complainants, called to see you in Baltimore to enquire after the stock, which he stated had been promised to Mrs. Kemp by your father, upon the death of your mother, for signing the Bradford deed?

13 X Answer. No, I have no recollection of it at all; father died first.

Fourteenth cross interrogatory. Do you not remember, that after your mother's death, Mr. Lewis E. Kemp called to see you about certain stock which he said your father had promised that Mrs. Kemp should have after the death of your mother, for signing the Bradford deed; and that you told him you were very sorry, but that the stock in question had all been used for the support and maintenance of your mother?

14 X Answer. I say that such conversation could not have taken place, for my father distributed every bit of stock he had before his death; and it could not have been so, for my mother had a plenty to live on; she had the whole estate as long as she lived; Mrs. Kemp must have gotten her share, for he was a very conscientious man, and he would not have slighted her I know.

Fifteenth cross interrogatory. Were you ever at Mrs. Kemp's house when she lived at the place previously owned by Colonel Maulsby more than the one time you have spoken of?

15 X Answer I can't recollect that:

Sixteenth cross interrogatory. When you went there upon the occasion of which you have spoken, did you not go in res-
