After looking wise and examining her heart, tongue and hands he informed her that she needed more exercise. The woman is said to have fainted.

Chamberlain's is the best of all. Vincent J. Barke, of Danbury, Iowa, has used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever in need of a medicine for coughs and colds, for the past five years and says: "It always helps me out. If anyone asks me what kind of cough medicine I use, I reply, Chamberlain's that is the best of all." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Harry Roberts, druggist, Easton; A. D. Harrison, druggist, St. Michaels.

—An editor in a neighboring town created a sensation in church recently while the congregation was singing a well known hymn by shouting in a spirit of absent-mindedness, "Let every kindred, every tribe, on this terrestrial ball, put down their money and subscribe, and we'll receipt for all."

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y. on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Harry Roberts, druggist, Easton; A. D. Harrison, St. Michaels.

—The first Maryland wheat of the present season was sent to Baltimore on Thursday from Dorchester county, and sold at 60 cents per bushel. The berry was a little soft, but was plump and well-filled out. The consignment was an unusually early one, as Maryland wheat seldom makes its appearance on the market in Baltimore before July 1.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingsville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the diseases for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Harry Roberts, druggist, Easton; A. D. Harrison, druggist, St. Michaels.

—Some Talbot farmers planted about three acres of winter oats last fall, when wheat was being sown. The oats stood the winter equally as well as wheat. The oats are now about five feet promising a large yield. It is claimed that oats will endure the severest cold of winter and will produce a larger yield when planted in the fall.

Last June, Dick Crawford brought his twelve months old child, suffering from infantile diarrhoea, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and being sickly everything ran through a sieve. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases and without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used, a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this Remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Harry Roberts, druggist, Easton; A. D. Harrison, druggist, St. Michaels.

W. C. T. U. AT OXFORD.

Many Speeches Made. An Additional Fervor in the Good Work.

The annual gathering of the Union of the county at Oxford, July 4th, was a pleasure to all privileged to be there. The charming spot selected by our temperance workers, in full view of the river and its pretty scenery, was truly a rest and a treat for tired mortals. The program of the morning was missed by many that were not able to reach the place in time for the session. After the dinner feast came the hour appointed for discussing plan of work. While our prohibition brothers worked earnestly under their secure tent, the sisters of the various unions drew modestly aside, and selected a clean grass plot, on which to hold the last executive meeting of the year. With light overhead and a solid foundation underneath, we had nothing to fear. The breezy air was our inspiration, the faithful sisters our comfort, and the children our hope. The decision reached, as regards our annual convention, in brief is this: that it should be held in Easton the first Tuesday in September, the place to be selected by the President of the Easton union. The lady speaker of the evening to be secured by the Pres. of the county. While in consultation we were not forgetful of the bereft home of our faithful corresponding Secretary and remembered that the gathering of the previous year was a joyful day to the little life that went out so suddenly. The session closed abruptly as we heard the call of music from the camp, and we accepted the kind invitation to be present at the afternoon and evening sessions. The music rendered was fine and the addresses made were earnest and entreating. The great central thought of each speaker was the individual responsibility of christian citizenship. To do honor to a just cause seemed a fitting way to celebrate our nation's birthday.

The business meeting of our W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Mullikin, Wednesday, June 11 at 4 p. m. In the absence of our President the First Vice Pres. Mrs. N. K. Jarrell will preside.

Cream for Six Please.

The proprietor of one of the Dover street ice cream parlors was smiling placidly in front of his establishment one evening this week, when six pretty young ladies entered and called for cream for six. The proprietor not quite understanding the order, asked to have it repeated. One of the ladies then explained that they wanted a five cent plate of cream with six spoons in it. Imagine the proprietor's feelings when he found that he would be only five cents in pocket when he expected sixty. However, they were served with the cream and six spoons, and it would have made a sick man laugh to have seen those six girls devour that small plate of cream. We have always heard that girls have a mouth for cream, and now we believe it. They were not long, (about 30 seconds) in devouring it, and they departed wishing the proprietor good luck and promising to call again, as they like to patronize home industry

TWO YEARS A CATHOLIC PRIEST.

IN A BEFITTING MANNER AND

Surrounded by friends Father Waldron Celebrates his second Anniversary.—Singers render excellent music. Visiting Priests Assist.

With ceremonies befitting the occasion, and the congratulations of a host of friends that attest his popularity and usefulness, Father Waldron, of SS. Peter and Paul [illegible], celebrated his second anniversary as a Priest. Father Fallon, of Wilmington assisted in a Priestly capacity at both morning and evening services and Father Campbell, of Baltimore, accompanied by quite a number of Baltimoreans lent their presence and who extended many congratulations. Father Waldron was the recipient of many beautiful presents, among which was a costly and beautiful set of vestments worn at the celebration of the Mass Sunday morning. They were red Otoman silk covered with raised designs emblematic of the crucifixion, and embroidered in pure gold. The altar decorations were in red and very handsome as usual. The celebration services commenced with a procession from the Priest's house to the church and down the centre aisle to the Sanctuary. First came the crucifer, followed in turn by the censer bearer, the little girls of the Sunday School, and lastly the officiating Priests and assistants. Father Waldron was celebrant of the Mass, assisted by Rev. M. X. Fallon, as deacon; Mr. Jas. Hartnett, subdeacon; Mr. J. P. Hughes, master of ceremonies.

REV. THOMAS F. WALDRON,
Pastor of SS. Peter and Paul Church.

The music, under the direction of Miss Mary Connor, of Wilmington, who was assisted by able singers from the same city, was excellent and the people of Easton fully appreciated the same [illegible] of approval go to show. [illegible] will ever be welcome to our beautiful little city, and a hearty reception accorded them. They rendered Hayden's Mass in B at the morning services, and in the evening the following was the musical program:

Vespers in G,	[illegible]
Veni Creator,	Gounod.
Ava Maria,	Rossini.
Magnificat,	Mozart.
Salva Regina,	Millard.
O'Salutaris,	[illegible]
Tantum Ergo,	Millard.

Father Waldron entertained the choir at a sumptuous dinner on Sunday. Covers were laid for fifteen. It need not be said that the choir enjoyed [illegible]. Father Waldron's fame as a host is wide and he does nothing by halves. During his pastorate in Easton, there has been many marked improvements in the church, the large and increasing membership, the great number of communicants, and the yearly addition by conversion has been a very great source of gratification to [illegible], and the cause of congratulation from Bishop Curtis. His friends wish him many happy returns and that his days of usefulness, which have so promisingly begun, may extend over a long number of years.

PUBLIC BUSINESS.

A Summer School in Easton.—Town and County boards' proceedings.

The Town Commissioners of Easton held a regular monthly meeting on Monday, the [illegible]. Owing to the difficulties that have arisen over the renting of space on Market House walk for the sale of watermelons, the board has decided to lay off the walk in blocks 16 feet long and 4 feet wide and rent them for the season, instead of charging each melon vender 15 cents a day as heretofore. The blocks range in price from $8 to $4.

Alexis G. Pascault was appointed collector of town taxes for '94, vice G. H. [illegible], whose bid of 5 per cent. was [illegible] cent. higher than Mr. Pascault.

School Commissioners.

The Talbot county School Board met on Tuesday.

The Board decided to open the summer school in Easton August 13th, and to open the county schools Sept. 17th.

It was also decided to build three new school houses, one at Kirkham, one at Skipton, one at Cambridge Ferry Neck. The first one is to consolidate the school now at Miles River Ferry and the one in the vicinity of Kirkham. The second is to [illegible] the one at Skipton and the one at Hickory [illegible]. The third is to take the place of the present Cambridge Ferry Neck school house.

The board postponed [illegible] of teachers to a future [illegible].

Orphan's Court.

COON SKINS AND HARD CIDER.

The great Whig meeting of 1840 An epoch in Easton's history.

The great Whig meeting of 1840, during the campaign of log cabins, coon skins and hard cider, was an epoch in the history of Easton. It was held on the grounds of which Spring Hill cemetery now forms a part. This with the adjoining land comprising quite a field. Large shade trees were taken from the woods and planted out over the grounds in great numbers. Invitations were extended to most of the leading Whig orators and statesmen of the day; Clay had a special committee to wait on him in Washington and insist upon his attendance. The old chieftain told the committee that his public duties might preclude his attendance in person, but if he did not come, he would send in his place "a man who could beat the world upon the stump—"old Crit," of Kentucky," and him he did send. Our people were charmed with the homely looking and plainly dressed old Kentuckian, and roused to the highest enthusiasm by his burning words of eloquence and power One of the most sumptuous dinners ever seen on such an occasion was prepared, to which the old Kentuckian was invited, but after his speech he went up and surveyed the dinner table, spread with all the Eastern Shore luxuries. He looked at it some time in silence and then said: "I have never seen anything like this, even in old Kentuck the land of barbecues and stump speakers. The people too look like my people. I must dine right here!" Graves of Kentucky was present and spoke at the meeting; Reverdy Johnson and Geo. R. Richardson and many others. The enthusiasm was kept up until late at night. Some steamboats from Baltimore and elsewhere aided in bringing the multitude. The fine cool spring in the meadow adjoining supplied water for the thousands. In the evening the speakers' stand broke down whilst Mr. Graves was speaking; fortunately no one was hurt. The numbers present were variously estimated at between fifteen and twenty thousand. The Whig avalanche over the country that year is well known, resulting in the election of Gen. Harrison as President.

THE LAWYER FAINTED.

A good story on a certain member of the Talbot bar

A good story about a certain Talbot lawyer was started in this county some years ago. It was in the state where he formerly resided and it was about his first case. It seems that a tramp was indicted for stealing a watch. He was arrested and plead not guilty. Having no counsel and being without funds and a total stranger, the court assigned his defense to the attorney in question. The tramp was as guilty as a man ever was, but as the attorney was young in practice and desirous of rubbing off some of his wire edges against the district attorney, he accepted the task. Nothing daunted, he rose before the jury to sum up his case. Providence had endowed him with a tongue capable of almost anything. He had his address at his tongue's end, and the manner in which he reeled it off established his name in the community [illegible] as the rock [illegible] old Gibraltar. He held "twelve men tried and true" spellbound. They gazed at him in open mouthed wonder. Alternately they [illegible] and people in the audience followed the example. It took the jury just eight minutes to white wash the tramp and provide him wings and a halo. The verdict was for acquittal. The tramp, so thoroughly surprised and overcome with emotion that he could hardly speak, rose from his seat, the tears streaming down his cheeks. There was stillness in the court room. "Mr. Lawyer," he exclaimed brokenly, "you don't know me an' I don't know you. I—I want to thank you. I—I ain't got no money—but—but—here's that watch."

NEED A REGISTER.

The young ladies of Easton might save their beaus much trouble.

At several of our churches every Sunday evening numerous young men are noticed to drop in after the service has commenced, or [illegible] in the doors or loaf around the lobbies, just to see if some particular lady friend is present. It has grown to be quite a nuisance and [illegible] of considerable annoyance to [illegible] congregation. An exchange, commenting on the same subject, suggests this remedy. Place slates at the church doors so that the girls may register their names as they enter. The boys can step into the lobby and quickly learn if the ladies they seek are present. If so, they can enter [illegible] and listen to the sermon. If their names do not appear on the first slate they can go elsewhere or to rooms until they are found. This would save church goers a good deal of [illegible] and no doubt effectively do away with the very prevalent practice of the youths of the town "lining up" just outside the [illegible] and ogling the people when coming out.

RETURNED WITH HONORS.

Company I is to be Congratulated in being able to carry off the Prize.

Let all feel proud of company "I." They have returned from Frostburg and with them they bring honor and words of praise. It was their good fortune to bring the regimental colors home. A great cause of satisfaction is that the company was free from serious illness, and they returned feeling rather improved than otherwise.

The ride home on Sunday was tiresome, but the boys knew that a warm reception awaited them. Capt. Adams speaks in the highest terms of the excellent behavior of his men, and they, in turn, speak in glowing terms of their Captain. Much credit is due him for his earnest efforts in behalf of the county's militia.

Unusually Abundant.

It is reported by the crabbers that the supply of soft crabs is unusually large in our waters this season and that the crabs are of fine size. A glut of soft crabs occurred in Baltimore last week. A certain firm there is reported to have handled 5000 dozen of them which they were glad to sell at 8 to 10 cents a dozen wholesale. Possibly this abundance is attributed to the warlike attitude and threats of Virginia against Maryland crabbers on the lower part of this peninsula. Alarmed by the hostile tone of Virginia's sons, perhaps his crabship and family have concluded to seek the more hospitable waters of Maryland. Certainly he seems to have been promptly taken in here.

Notice to Cyclers.

The National Circuit meet of the Maryland Division, L. A. W. will be held in Baltimore July 14th. The secretary of the Avon Cycle Club has received word from Mr. Frank W. Kirk, chairman of the transportation committee, that he has secured a reduction of rate. The fare to Baltimore, during the meet will be $1 the round trip from Easton, Oxford and Cambridge via Choptank Steamboat Co. provided a party of 25, all told be secured from these three points. Particulars of the meet will be published later. All wheelmen desiring to take advantage of this low rate will please address the Secty. of Avon Cycle Club, Easton.

Transferred to Ocean City.

The polite and popular agent of the Baltimore and Eastern Shore Railroad, Mr. M. L. Marvel, who for the past two years has had charge of the Easton station, has been transferred to Ocean City this summer. He left for that place on Monday, where he will immediately take charge of the company's business there. Mr. Marvel has made quite a number of friends since he has resided in Easton, who will be glad to learn that the company appreciates him so highly, and we are sure the company will have no cause to regret the confidence placed in him.

Old Point Maryland.

Mr. Zenas Burns has been hard at work on his summer resort enterprise for the past two months, and has now stopped until after harvest is over. He has had a large force of men at work clearing away the woods, which almost cover the entire point. Work will be resumed immediately after harvest and the carpenters early in the fall. He has given it the name of "Old Point Maryland."

The Voter's Creed

(Republished by request.)

One of our Democratic friends who has been an ardent supporter of that ticket, has arranged a unique creed that seems to fit the average democratic voter about now.

"The politician is my Shepherd, I shall not want for any good things during the campaign. He leadeth me into the saloons for my vote's sake. He filleth my pocket with fine cigars and my beer glass runneth over. He inquireth concerning my family, even unto the fourth generation. Yea, though I walk through mud and rain to vote for him and shouteth myself hoarse, if he is elected he straightway forgetteth me. Yea, though I meet him in his office he knoweth me not. Surely the wool has been pulled over my eyes all the days of my life and I shall dwell in the house of obscurity forever.

THE FOURTH AS SPENT IN EASTON

AND ELSEWHERE. A FEW ARE

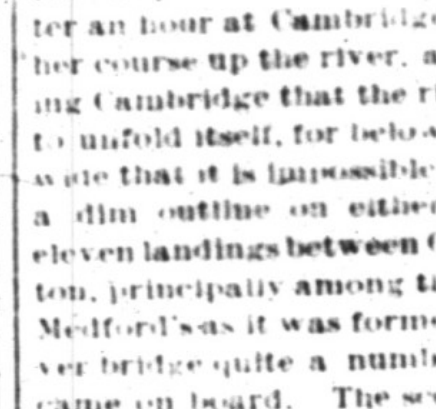
Content to Remain at Home, While Others take an Outing.—An Early Morning Parade.—Fireworks in the Evening lend a patriotic Appearance.

The Fourth did not go unobserved in Easton. From as early as 5 o'clock in the morning until mid-night every one seemed bent on enjoying himself. About 30 young men accompanied by a drum and fife corps paraded around town. All were masked and the only mistake made was that they did not start at a later hour, as many people missed seeing a really good turn out, in fact the best of the kind ever seen in Easton. From the most ludicrous Dutchman, negro minstrel, Jew pedler, and Uncle Sam, to the fetching Lillian Russell like prima donna in blue, all presented a gay appearance.

Some went to Ocean City and others went around the Choptank. GAZETTE reporters went to both. Some went down to spend the day with our friend Swift while not a few paid a visit to "The Villa," and those who did were amply repaid for their trouble. The beautiful grounds and ample shade makes this the garden spot for pleasure seekers. Oxford was not forgotten, and many attended the Prohibition meeting there. In the evening the display of fireworks was very good. Father Waldron did his share, and the catholic choir sang patriotic airs much to the pleasure of quite a group of music loving Eastonians, as their repeated encores proved. Later in the evening they drove through town making merry music wherever they went.

Easton is to be congratulated in being one of the most orderly towns in the State. No drunken disorder is to be witnessed, and every one, both old and young, seems bent upon enjoying himself, but in a legitimate manner, and last Wednesday was no exception to the rule.

BEAUTIES OF THE CHOPTANK.



INNOVATIONS should not be started by the GAZETTE, at the same time one can but wish to present to the people of the country at large all the advantages our county may possess and a trip the entire length of our beautiful Choptank river is not the least of its charms. Many Eastonians availed themselves of the opportunity to spend a day on this Hudson of Maryland on the Fourth. At the Point a goodly crowd of pleasure seekers were gathered on the pier as the beautiful steamer Enoch Pratt glided up to it about 5 o'clock in the morning. Shortly after the boat left the wharf and sped swiftly on the beautiful Tred Avon, past the lovely homes which line its banks, the splendid old estate of the Ratcliffe Manor, where Senator Gibson lives, past the beautiful homes of the Dixons of Baltimore, on down this noble estuary, making landings here and there, and finally arriving at the charming little town of Oxford. Leaving there the Pratt turned into the Choptank and made for Cambridge. After an hour at Cambridge the boat resumed her course up the river, and it is after leaving Cambridge that the river scenery begins to unfold itself, for below the Choptank is so wide that it is impossible to see anything but a dim outline on either shore. There are eleven landings between Cambridge and Denton, principally among these is Choptank, or Medford's as it was formerly called. At Dover bridge quite a number of excursionists came on board. The scenes along the river were wonderfully soothing upon the nerves, for they were the perfection of tranquility. The marsh grass is bright gold, and along the shores are interminable stretches of ever green. Beyond is the dark soil, colored with the evidences of a bountiful harvest. All this and the blue sky and the clear water, and occasional houses in fresh whitewash, passing along before the eyes, was a panorama of peace inviting the onlooker to forget that nervous haste and exhaustion is the curse of American life.

No doubt many of the GAZETTE's readers will recall a play, "Two Johns," a screaming farce by two famous fat men. The leading characters establish their home on the Choptank, and above the landing known now as "Two Johns" is a commodious residence surrounded by a park and quite a settlement. Denton is not far away, and shortly before eleven o'clock the boat is at the wharf. From the bridge which crosses the river a good view of the town can be had. The trip down the river in the afternoon was even more delightful than the trip up in the morning. One could feel the intoxication of the air. It made you better, and it seemed to soothe and purify, and do all the things that one could expect.

As one travels along the Choptank the beautiful scenery is not only enjoyed, but one constantly wonders why there is not more of life and activity there, why its manifest advantages are not appreciated and realized by men, why its health giving qualities have not attracted people who want a safe climate. But no one seemed to be in a critical mood. The day seemed too peaceful for faultfinding and the passengers were only too glad to give themselves up to the general serenity and loveliness of everything.

The excursionists amused themselves in various ways. Those not content with quietly enjoying the scenery from the decks, contented themselves with dancing, singing and reading. Only too soon the day came to a close and the familiar [illegible] of Easton appeared in the distance. Home again.

THE DELIGHTS OF OCEAN CITY.

Your correspondent having decided to lay aside the cares of life and take a day off, proceeded to look around for a comfortable place to spend the Fourth. After a careful survey of the situation, and the reading of much free literature in which the rosy, not to say brilliant halo of each successive place was set forth in glowing colors like unto the sun, the decision was reached, and Ocean City selected as the place best suited for the destribution of surplus patriotism. It is unnecessary to give any discription of this seaside resort and its many attractions, most of the GAZETTE readers have been there, and many have come away precisely under the same circumstances, and with the same impressions. It is really a grand place for the health and pleasure seeker, likewise the healthy. Ocean City is not a prohibition place by any means, this is not least of its attractions to some who go there.

So filled brimfull of patriotism and regaled in the coolest possible costume, I sallied forth to put in a full day. The B. & E. S. did its duty, and after passing through the beautiful intervening counties dotted here and there with a diminutive oasis lost in the Sahara like sand fields, was landed safely at my destination. The cool salt breeze was refreshing and the resort had on its best Fourth-of-July attire. No festive hokey-pokey ice cream man dared obstruct my progress and I preceeded to invest my hard earned money in a bathing suit. Now, it is not my intention to give any of my friends away, but my friend H. N. of Railroad Avenue must not be forgotten. He had arrived the evening before, and had installed himself at the Atlantic. Being a man of rheumatic tendency, (so he had informed his wife,) had "come down don't you see," to brace up, and when I met him on the walk, our mutual surprise was great. He had a fearful attack of "that cussed rhumazizulm-don't-yur shee," so I pilotted him into the bath house and insisted that he take a plunge with me and try to remove a few of those rheumatic stains. After some difficulty in which my friend insisted in disregarding propriety and going out on the beach without any bathing suit on, we found ourselves in the serf. Oh, the glories of a sea bath! One is really repaid for any inconvenience he or she may suffer in taking a plunge in the Atlantic. I can see now in my mind's eye the waves as they dash you about as so many laughing little nymphs, occasionally a two hundred pound, redheaded, cross eyed nymph will give you a whack that will send you high and dry. That's exactly what happened to me, and I landed on top of my friend H. N., who had insisted on piloting a big German woman across the Atlantic and I made my arrival during the heated part of the argument, knocking them both down. The old lady immediately mistook me for her would be gallant, and proceeded to make mince meat of my bathing suit. She possessed a Jim. Corbett muscle, and when I at last got loose from her my suit was in shreds. Of course I had to either hire more clothes or leave the beach. I did the latter, and found, after paying for the ruined bathing suit the sum of $2, I had no finances left. In vain did I earnestly expostulate with the man in charge, and that I had had no dinner and that I had neglected to bring along enough money to buy the beach, but no go, and I was forced to pay over my last dime. H. N. had been removed to the hotel in a state of total insensibility, while I wandered round a wiser and sadder man. It was sometime before the earliest train would start for home and I decided to rest myself on the hotel veranda, but no go. No sooner had I gotten comfortably seated, and was becoming reconciled to my dinnerless fate, when I observed suspicious glances cast in my direction and heard the words, "assaulted the poor woman and tried to steal her diamond ear rings that she had negligently left in her ears, wretch—should be lynched." Good Heaven thought I, they are magnifying that unfortunate accident. Suppose they should take into their heads to do me bodily harm. I got up and sneaked around the back way and down toward a more unfrequented portion of the beach. Every where, I seemed to be looked upon with suspicion. O, how glad I was to hear the blast of the whistle that announced our departure. As the train sped toward home I commenced to once more feel secure, and fanned by the cool evening breeze I delighted to see the sun set as it grew red and redder it was only rivaled by the vermilion hue of my nose. Thus ended my glorious Fourth, and when the conductor called out "Easton," it was then that I thougat of "rumazizulm-don't-yur shee," and wondered. P.

A LEADING SPIRIT NOW.

Remarkable success of a former Easton pastor.

Rev. John A. B. Wilson, formerly a pastor of Ebenezer M. E. Church of this town for a short time, and brother of Rev. W. W. W. Wilson, also stationed at Easton some years ago, is winning for himself an enviable reputation in New York. The following from the Commercial Advertiser of that city speaks of his work in glowing terms. It will be remembered that Mr. Wilson accomplished wonders during the short time he was in Easton, and it is not with surprise that our readers will read of his success. He is now pastor of the 18th street M. E. Church which is one of the leading churches of that denomination in the city. Says the Advertiser:

Rev. John A. B. Wilson is in every sense one of the leading spirits in the field of religious work of the day. His work is done in a manner that makes its influence felt over the entire city. He is not only pastor of the church but is also a missionary in an unlimited field. He works day and night, summer and winter for the good of the poor, often walking the streets all night, going into the vilest districts and with his own hands providing the hungry with food and offering solace to the sick and despondent. No one ever goes away from the door of his house without the comfort of a cheering word or the help most needed. Dr. Wilson is up to date in everything that tends to advance the condition of women. He is heartily in favor of woman suffrage. He is liberal in his views on all subjects, believes in the education of the masses and fights the rumsellers and granting of licenses.

He has established a home for respectable self-supporting girls in his parish, where for $2.50 per week they are given the best of care and feel independent in that they are paying something for their board.

In Dr. Wilson's church all are made welcome, not by big printed posters, but by the pastor himself. He stands at the door to greet strangers as they enter, and he asks them to come again when the service is ended. All seats are free, and the congregations are always so large that people have to go early to get seats.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Democrats that will represent Talbot at Ocean City on the 27th.

The Democratic County Convention held here on Tuesday last selected the following delegates to represent Talbot county in the First District Congressional Convention to be held at Ocean City July 26.

Chas. S. Carrington, J. Edward Mortimer, Col. J. Percy McKnete, P. A. Morgan, F. G. Wrightson, Chas. R. Wooters, William S. Merrick, and W. T. H. Lee.

Chas. R. Wooters, as chairman of the State Central Committee, called the convention to order at noon and the following officers were chosen:

President—J. B. Bennett. Vice-Presidents—Joseph Horney, and George C. Moore. Secretaries—James M. Leonard, George A. Seymour.

President Bennett made a speech, after which the Convention selected the following committees.

On Credentials—W. P. Chaffinch, Thomas F. Burns, Berry, Leslie Beauchamp, Joshua G. Wrightson.

On Resolutions—George E. Haddaway, S. F. Lewis, Samuel B. Melson, E. W. West, J. T. May.

Mr. Chaffinch, from the committee on credentials, reported the following delegates entitled to seats in the convention:

Easton District—J. B. Bennett, W. P. Chaffinch, G. E. Haddaway, A. Y. Longnecker, Daniel Frampton.

St. Michaels District—Thomas E. Burns, Silas F. Lewis, Joseph H. Newnam, George A. Seymour, Alex. C. Mortimer.

Trappe District—J. M. Leonard, Berry, S. E. Merrick, S. B. Melson, T. F. Norris.

Chapel District—Thomas A. Dudley, J. L. Beauchamp, Thomas Hopkins, Jr. Baptist Smith, Elijah W. West.

Bay Hundred District—Joseph Horney, J. G. Wrightson, John T. Harrison, Robert G. Kinnamon, John T. May.

Death of Robert Fountain Stewart.

On Sunday, July 1st, at 2.45 p. m. Robert Fountain, youngest and beloved son of Major William Eccleston and Margaret Douglas Stewart, died at the home of his parents on Washington street. He was only sick three days, so his death was very sudden and a shock to the community. He was five years and six months old, and a very bright boy for his age. Robert was very popular among all his companions, and loved by all who knew him.

The funeral services were held at SS. Peter and Paul church on Tuesday morning at half past nine with Father Waldron as celebrant, Father Fallon deacon, Father Conelly subdeacon, Mr. Hughes master of ceremonies and Mr. Hartnett, censer-bearer. The pall bearers were: Wilmer Adams, James Bateman, Harvey Wooters and Herbert Martin. The flowers were beautiful, and the church was full of the many friends of the family. Mass was sung by the famous cathedral choir of Wilmington.

Ice Palace Invented by an Eastern Shore Man.

Mr. James L. Kernan owns the Ice Palace on Howard St., Balto., and has opened it for the season. About five years ago a young engineer from the Eastern Shore went into the office of James L. Kernan and suggested that Mr. Kernan build an ice skating rink to be operated particularly during the summer months. He thought he had struck a queer piece of humanity when the proposition to run the ice skating rink in August was made to him. The interview terminated by Mr. Kernan telling his visitor he was crazy.

Now Mr. Kernan has changed the Howard Auditorium into a skating rink and the engineer who was considered crazy five years ago has charge of putting in the plant and freezing the water. He is an Eastern Shoreman and his name is G. R. Jarmin.

"THE VILLA" AND ITS HISTORY.

A BEAUTIFUL SOUTHERN HOME.

A haven of rest where Boss Tweed was wont to seclude himself.—An unlucky investment for several owners.—Beauty and hospitality once reigned supreme.

On a beautiful piece of land projecting into Miles River surrounded by rare and stately trees and still retaining marks of former beauty is situated "The Villa," known all over the country on account of its supposed connection with Boss Tweed, and to Talbot county as the handsomest place within its bounds. It is now rented to a Mrs. Bailey and is used as a summer resort. The wide fame of the place has made for it many acquaintances and the constantly crowded house attest its popularity. The following is an interesting article which appeared in the New York Sun several years ago and gives some interesting history of the place:

"The Miles River, for thus the St. Michael's has slipped its consonants, is one of those broad salt water streams, the home of the oyster, crab, terrapin, and wild duck, that pierce the peninsula of the Eastern Shore of Maryland until there its scarcely so much land as water. This part of the peninsula is called Talbot county.

A tongue of land thrusts itself out into the river. There is a tasteful boat house and pier, besides which a yacht lies moored. Above the thickly set trees a square red tower, capped with white, indicates the site of "The Villa"—such is the distinction of the name of the most beautiful place in the county.

As with families, so it is with land. Some tracts undergo a quiet humdrum existence from century to century, others are as full of affairs as a bailiff. This tongue of land, with its neighboring estate, is one that seems to be inextricably woven into the fate and fortunes of men. In 1661 occurred in Boston the memorable trial of

for the crime of being a Quaker, of which the quaint old volumes of Besse give so full a story. Having been exiled, he returned to protest against the murder of a fellow Quaker named Ledda, where he was seized by a mob headed by the Rev. Seabury Cotton, club in hand. Christison had a robust tongue of his own; and after his trial was, with other Quakers, condemned to death by Gov. Endicott. The day before the execution, came the pardon of the King, and the prisoners were released, the Governor being obliged to satisfy himself with whipping two of the men through the streets.

Wenlock Christison then emigrated to Maryland, taking advantage of the religious toleration extended by the Calverts. Here, in 1661, he obtained a grant of land from Lord Baltimore, including this tongue on which the Villa stands. He became one of the substantial men of the colony, and the late criminal took an important part in the House of Burgesses, of which he was a member.

The descendants of the Christisons here dwelt in peace and prosperity, and in time estate fell into the hands of Isaac Atkinson who had married into the family of Christison, and their house of old English brick remains in part upon the land until this day. After the Christisons had married, born, and died the family gradually dwindled away, and the estate passed into the hands of

RICHARD FRANCE.

Richard France was the lottery king of Maryland. The State recognized and legalized the business, and Richard France waxed rich and prosperous. He built a palace, the word is used advisedly, on Mount Vernon square, and he bought an estate on the Eastern Shore. Here he built "The Villa," with its red tower overtopping the trees. In magnificence nothing in the vicinity rivaled it. There were winding walks and fountains, rich vases and marble statuary, glass houses and everything else that money could buy to make complete a gentleman's country seat. It was the wonder of all the county roundabout, overshadowing "The Anchorage," the seat of Commodore Lowndes, and "The Rest," the beautiful home of Admiral Buchanan, confronting one another on the river just below.

So enviable was the prosperity of Richard France that a man named Broadbent set up an illicit lottery known as the "Lottery Policy Company," which in time made such inroads into Richard France's business that he was forced to admit Broadbent into partnership. Then Broadbent also waxed rich and prosperous, and built himself a superb place beyond the limits of Charles street, a place now owned by the Perrottes.

But the conscience of Maryland had become tender. In time the lottery license to Richard France was revoked. He then, with Broadbent, went to Delaware, which being a small State, he with great simplicity bought up the Legislature. This was not in each case a private sale. One of the members also had a tender conscience. For him Richard France built a church, where his constituents worshipped for many a year.

Then Delaware in its turn became sensitive to the enormity of the lottery, and revoked the license of Richard France. Meanwhile Broadbent had been plundering the business with rapid hand. It became necessary to buy up other States. In this Richard France failed. Baffled and plundered, when the lottery king came to take stock of himself and his belongings he found he was in debt everywhere and a ruined man. Going back to Delaware in the desperation of his affairs his person was seized for debs, and he died there in prison and a pauper.

In the wreck "The Villa was sold to

of Baltimore. This was before the war. In his hands the career of the place was renewed. It was still the finest place for miles about, and again were renewed the scenes of hospitality and of luxury which distinguished the old Maryland days. Then the war broke out. With great shrewdness Henry May immediately invested his fortune in gold. His broker was a banker named Carson in Baltimore. All went well until the surrender of Gen. Lee, when gold declined and swept May along with unfulfilled margins.

But between him and ruin stood the broker Carson. He, abandoned by May, went down in the crash. In vain he called upon his client to protect him. A suit was brought and, against the feelings and temper of the community, it was won by Henry May. The broker Carson never recovered, but died a few months after literally of a broken heart.

Henry May returned to Baltimore, but his old friends turned away their faces. An isolated, ostracised man, he returned to the Villa, and in a few months he, too, died, it is said, out of pure chagrin.

The Villa was then bought by a young man named who, with his young and gay wife, more than revived its old reputation for luxurious hospitality. The fun was fast and furious, and with it slipped away the great fortune to which Randall had fallen heir. In a few years, utterly ruined, young Randall was obliged to give up the Villa, and live a humble life as a railroad employe, and died in Baltimore, his wife supporting herself in some feminine vocation.

The Villa was then bought by a man from Greenwich Point, as it is known in Talbot county, named Brady. Greenwich Point is better known in this section as that of Greenwich on which stood that notable resort much frequented a dozen years ago by the men of "Big Six" and Blossom Club. The county marvelled much at the advent of a man of the type of Brady, a blacksmith, it is said, but a blacksmith who had found his trade most lucrative, since he was able to pocess the Villa.

He had none of the qualifications for a country life. He was the owner of a superb place, with its walks and fountains, its vases, its marble gods and goddesses half clothed in foliage. That fact seemed to content him. He strutted about in his shirt sleeves, and, if it so inclined him, in his bare feet. The neighbors ceased to marvel, and in time left this strange and new type at the Villa to his own company and habits of life.

After a time there came a rumor, told about mysteriously to the negroes, of the yacht flitting about the river, and of a strange man, bearded and old, seen by chance, but furtively keeping out of the way. So isolated is the Villa, the tongue of land stretching out far into the water, and the gates as usual kept locked, that there could be no better place for concealment. The rumor spread further, and was confirmed in details by the curious negroes. Then came the news of

BOSS TWEED'S ESCAPE.

Some people remembered that the owner of the Villa came from Greenwich Point, a haunt of Boss Tweed's. Others remembered that in the earlier days of the occupant of the Villa he had been heard to say he knew or had met Boss Tweed. There were stories of the sort of men who were the old chair maker's friends, and stories of how he enriched them. So the rumor grew, and was confirmed in the belief of the people of the neighborhood that the stranger of the Villa had now his chance to return the favors of his old friend and possible benefactor, and what better place could a hunted old man find? To complete the tale a party of officers descended upon the place, but whatever might have been going on there nobody was found by them.

But the story was believed and contributed to the interest in the place and its changing fortunes that every one feels. Without further knowledge than crystalized rumor affords, the Villa is pointed to the stranger as the place where Tweed lay hid when the newspapers believed him in Florida. The story is plausible, because he could be removed by yacht down the Chesapeake and off to Cuba. But more—the story is true. My own knowledge is more direct, although one treads gingerly about names. It was here Tweed lay concealed, and from here he was taken away by night by the son of a prominent democratic politician of Maryland, who was ally the political of the dethroned boss. The story is too direct for doubt, since it is on the authority of one of the principals of that midnight adventure, the young man himself, and through unquestioned channels.

The Villa has fallen from its high estate, the walks are overgrown, the fountains tottering and the marble gods overthrown. When misfortunes overcome a pane of glass or mildew attacks an ornament it never recovers. The gate is still kept locked, but the yacht occasionally glides through the water. The Villa is still a show place with its past grandeur and memories, but the finger is pointed from afar, and every one wonders what next?
