CLEVELANDISM ON TRIAL.

MILLIONS of men in the United States still believe we are in the midst of the darkness of the future. Dismal forebodings of what is still to come confront a discontented and suffering people whose daily prayer is to be delivered from the uncertainty and unrest that has entailed upon them the curse of enforced idleness and consequent distress and suffering. They are sleeplessly striving to find some one wise enough to solve the problem that will bring relief from existing evils, and shield them from a recurrence of so unhappy a lot.

The twenty millions of people in this great American Republic who are willing to toil that they may enjoy the comforts and safety of peaceful and happy homes, wonder why it is that the most prosperous period of the young Republic—a period in which their industry had been so amply rewarded as to have no parallel,should be so suddenly followed by business disaster, non-employment and pinching want such as has afflicted them in the first eighteen months of the Democratic administration which they were promised by the democratic free-trade philosophers would place them in a democratic paradise.

With this thought uppermost in their minds, they turned their anxious faces towards Washington, and hoped and prayed that another Lincoln or Washington, another Morrill or McKinley might come forth in the White House, or in the Halls of Congress, who would still the tempest and bring repose and prosperity to a desolate and distracted country. Hon. Senator David B. Hill from the great State of New York said, that Congress should either pass a tariff bill of some kind or announce to the country that it cannot do so, and adjourn.

The Senator was partly right and partly wrong. The Congress should not pass a tariff bill of "some kind." It should frame a better one than the McKinley tariff law or none at all. It should frame one for the best interest of the whole country and the whole people or no bill at all. Senator Hill is wrong in urging the passage of a base, corrupt, cowardly measure such as the amended Wilson bill is. Senator Hill is right in advocating the adjournment of Congress. It has been one of disaster, ruin and disgrace. It has benefited none. It has injured all. Capital has been hurt by it. Honest labor has been dragged down to the starvation point. The black shadows of poverty have been projected by it across the industrial landscape of the fairest and greatest country in the world.

We have said the Wilson bill as amended by the Senate should not pass, but it has passed, cowardly as it is, by an exhibition of supreme cowardice on the part of the House such as has never disgraced the annals of this country; and it now awaits the action of the President. If it ever goes into our National statutes it will stand out among them as a monstrosity of corrupt legislation,unworthy of the enlightened judgment and moral instincts of the American people. It would be surprising if there were one generous soul in the United States which preferred the heavy sleep of slavery to the active life of liberty; yet, if Grover Cleveland allows the Gorman-Compromise bill to become a law, we must conclude that the Democratic party has a master, and that it has been lashed into submission by Senator Arthur P. Gorman, of Maryland, who denounced the President on the floor of the United States Senate for insincerity and arraigned him for unduly intermeddling in the deliberations of Congress; dictated the provisions of the tariff revision bill that should pass the Senate; steered the Senate conferees in the conference committee on the tariff bill, and forced the House to yield and adopt the Wilson tariff bill as copiously amended by the Senate. In short he defied the Democratic party, forced it to abandon its pledges to the people and accept his views and wishes in regard to tariff legislation. And should the President acquiesce in the tariff bill that has passed the two houses of Congress, then it must be admitted that Senator Gorman has shown himself absolute leader of the Democracy of the country and that the President will have shown himself a craven, a weak and base coward. Speaker Crisp and Chairman Wilson, when they found the Senate would not surrender, abandoned the principles for which they had fought, deserted the President and did the bidding of Senator Gorman, and thus it was that the Maryland Senator was enabled to lay the Democratic party at his feet and formulate a tariff measure such as would subserve his purpose and have it passed by the representatives of the people in utter disregard of every profession they have made, and every principle they have advocated since the promulgation of Mr. Cleveland's memorable annual message of 1887.

There is a chapter in French history which shows that the reign of Louis XVII. was the most prosperous period of the ancient monarchy, and that this very prosperity hastened the French Revolution. Never in the history of this country had we enjoyed such prosperity as during the four years of Benjamin Harrison's administration. But the marvelous development and amazing progress of that happy period, seemed only to arouse and intensify the hostility of the opponents of the Republican policy. And never in the history of the country has there been such vile and unreasoning assaults made upon a party in power. Foul misstatements were resorted to through every means that the Democratic party could invoke to deceive and disquiet the great mass of the people. The malignity with which these falsehoods were constantly hurled at the Republicans and circulated among the people, strange to say, finally bewildered the masses who proved too credulous to resist, and they were thus induced to fall a victim to those unscrupulous politicians and entrust them with power. Now, they look back in sadness to the fatal hour when they were ensnared, and deplore the want, degredation and lawless violence which their folly has entailed upon a hitherto prosperous, peaceful and happy country by the overthrow of their benefactor. Aristotle said, "Incredulity is the source of all wisdom," It is to be hoped that the American people will hereafter be more guarded when artful politicians foxes seek to allure them into the snares they have laid to engulf them in misery and ruin.

Fortunately the people will have an opportunity to express their wishes this fall, and they should, as they will express them in no uncertain sound. They will hurl the treacherous and designing trust abettors, and the imbecile cuckoos alike, aside with ineffable scorn and contempt, and lift to power men in their stead who are imbued with right purposes and possess the capacity to safely and successfully administer the affairs of the great American people in the interest of the people upon broad guage and comprehensible principles.

President Cleveland, in his remarkable letter to Chairman Wilson, characterized the Gorman compromise bill as dishonest, dishonorable and perfidious, and said that Senators were legislating for their personal interests and not for the public good. Yet the House under the leadership of Speaker Crisp and Chairman Wilson, bowed to the behests of Senator Gorman and passed the tariff bill which he had concocted in the interest of the Sugar Trust and the Whiskey Ring on this side of the Atlantic; and in favor of the producers and manufacturers on the other. This miserable abortion is now in the hands of the President awaiting his action, and the American people are waiting and wondering whether or not another item is to be entered in the ledger of despair.

THE selection of Dr. I. A. Barber as the republican nominee for Congress from this county, was not the result of working, planning nor conniving. But it seemed to be one voice all over the county that he should allow his name to be used. He is reticent on the subject, but if the district nominates him, he will not be listless nor indifferent to the demands upon him to uphold the high standard of the Republican party. No better selection could be made.

TOURISTS to points North are leaving our wharves and stations daily. They should not overlook the advantage of taking the Hudson River trip via, the N. Y. Central and Hudson River Railroad either one way or both. This road is the best equipped in the world and the scenery it offers is unsurpassed. The cars are the handsomest and move like rocking chairs on ice, at a high and safe rate. The appointments in every respect are perfect and the rates of travel offered to excursionists are reduced so low that all can avail themselves of the opportunities offered. Elegant summer resorts and grand hotels dot the l'ne from New York City to Buffalo, all of which have made this road a grand highway, with mountain, lake and river scenery, though a veritable Paradise. A DEFUNCT OYSTER.

THE DEMOCRATS RESPONSIBLE FOR LOST TRADE.

Eastern Oystermen Find Less Demand For Their Bivalves—People Have No Money and Cannot Buy—Collections Hard and Profits Small.

The oyster business is a large one in the United States, especially all along the Atlantic coast. Down on Long Island there are hundreds of men interested in the oyster business who are not protected by the tariff, and according to the free trade theory nothing should interfere with the success and prosperity of their business, which involves a large amount of money invested in the oyster beds, in boats and tackle. The majority of the oystermen along the southern coast of Long Island have heretofore been steadfast Democrats. But since the election of a Democratic president, and since they have got a Democratic majority in congress, they begin to feel that Democracy and the threat of free trade are not good things for the men or money engaged in the oyster business.

One of them said to me: "During the past season I have not sold, as far as money represents, one-tenth of the oysters that I used to sell before we put all these Democrats into congress."

"That seems an enormous difference, a loss of 90 per cent in your oyster trade," I said.

A DEAD OYSTER.

"Well," he replied, "I have not sold 90 per cent less of oysters, but I have not sold half as many oysters this season as I used to, and those that I have sold have been for less money, and even this less money I have not been able to collect."

"That is pretty hard lines," I said, "smaller sales, smaller prices and smaller collections."

"Yes," was the answer, "and, take it all along this side of Long Island, the number of oysters sold have been just one-half of what they were before we got Cleveland. Where we have oyster beds to supply the New York market and the American trade, it is there that we oystermen have suffered."

"How does dull trade in New York affect the oyster business?" was my next question.

"Well, it is in this way: If people are out of work or not earning as much money as they used to, they have to reduce their expenses, and the first things they do without are amusements and luxuries. People are not obliged to eat oysters in order to keep body and soul together, nor are they obliged to go to theaters, and when they do not go to the theaters they do not eat oysters after the theater, and that's just where we get left."

"Where do you sell your oysters mostly?"

"I used to ship my oysters and sell them direct to many of the large restaurants on Broadway and Sixth avenue, and I can tell you that they have been buying less and less cost-ly from me steadily. It is not so much that I cannot collect my money, but collect it is harder, and where I used to come up once a week and have no difficulty in collecting every dollar owing to me,now I am sometimes asked to wait a week, or perhaps two or three weeks, by some of the Sixth avenue restaurant keepers. And besides this we have to sell our oysters for less money. It is hard to get just what will pay actual working expenses and the wages of the men who are working for us."

"There is no tariff on oysters," I said, "and the Democrats say that it is the tariff that prevents business. Therefore as there is no tariff on oysters the oyster trade should be rushing, and people should be scrambling and fighting for oysters."

He looked at me sharply and said: "What's yer givin us? What affects our oyster trade is the general prosperity of the people of the country. If people are working, they have money to spend; if they have money to spend, they will have some amusement and luxuries. I used to be a strong Democrat, but I guess I have had just enough of it. I have suffered pretty badly in my business since the Democrats got into power, and that has knocked out of me all the belief I used to have in them. I have got to look out for myself, my wife and family, and if I cannot earn money enough to supply them with food, clothing and comfort while the Democrats are in power, just the same as I used to when the Republicans were in office, why, I am going to vote for those who help me. Next election you will find me voting a straight Republican ticket."

THE MICA MINERS.

A Southerner Who Demands Protection and Fights Republican Battles.

Having been a manufacturer of pottery in Pennsylvania and having represented the United States Potters association during the centennial exhibition in 1876, and afterward, in 1877, the international exhibition of Philadelphia, I had occasion to visit many manufacturing establishments in England, France, Germany and Austria, and while there had occasion to compare their pauper labor with our labor. If some of these free trade politicians would take a trip through the manufacturing and mining districts of Europe, as I have done, they would soon change their minds and never talk free trade any more.

I am nicely situated here in the mountain region, own a comfortable home with beautiful gardens and several thousand acres of fine timber land. I am engaged in mining and also sell large tracts of land and have over 4,000,000 acres on the market now and about 400 mines of all sorts.

Of course I want protection. Mica was mined here on a large scale at one time and shipped to parts of this country and Europe. During Cleveland's former administration they put it on the free list, and our mines were closed up, as we could not compete with the cheap labor (10 cents per day) of India. During Harrison's administration it was put at 35 per cent duty, but before it took effect they laid in heavy supplies to last for some time, and now congress has put it on the free list again. As it is, we are in hot water, and nobody is willing to risk money in the business. Kaolin, or china clay, was discovered by me and became a great industry. Not knowing what these fool politicians will do finally, this business also is at a standstill.

I am doing all I can to assist and always have assisted the Republican cause in the endeavor to protect American industries. W. A. K. SCHREIBER.

Angry Actions.

The London Echo tells how various people act when they are angry. The Emperor of Austria pulls out his clocks that ear lays his hand flat on the top of his head. We might supplement the list to any extent. Mr. Gladstone turns swiftly on his heels, as if executing a volte face; Dr. Tanner lays back his head and swears; the sultan of Turkey draws his hand rapidly across his throat, and Mr. Charles Mitchell shoots out his fist suddenly and forcibly in a horizontal direction.

THE STAGE AND THE TARIFF.

Cleveland Tigers Put Actors on Their Uppers and Tax the Benefit Funds.

There is no class of people among our entire community upon whom is more quickly reflected a dull or a prosperous condition of business than the actor. There has been no business that more fully experienced the Cleveland panic of 1893 than did the theatrical profession. Managers have been disappointed. Many of the actors and actresses have been without work and in dire want and necessity.

At the thirteenth annual meeting of the Actors' Fund association, held in New York last June, President Palmer pointed out that "the terrible wave of business depression which has swept over our country has brought great misery and want to many members of the dramatic profession, and it has not only made our task in soliciting and collecting money very large, but it has largely increased the volume of our work among the funds in our charge, for, in addition to the care of the sick, we have been obliged to take an active part in caring for the needs of our brothers and sisters who, though not disabled by sickness, were still helpless, lacking in most instances even the barest necessities of life."

In order to relieve the unfortunate actors and actresses who, owing to the Cleveland dull times, were unable to find remunerative employment, a special fund amounting to $9,049.55 was raised by subscriptions and by benefit performances given in various theaters in New York. The expenditures of this money was placed in the hands of a committee, which reported that they had given relief to 317 actors and actresses, and had paid out $5,155.56. The report stated that relief was still being given to needy members of the dramatic profession who, through ill health, find themselves in most desperate straits until the opening of the new dramatic season, when it is believed there would be an improvement in the general business of the country.

The growth of distress among actors and actresses was great during 1892-1893. In that year the number of relief cases was 161, and this was added to 605 cases in the same profession, and this year the number has increased to 903. This long list of beneficiaries includes 703 actors and actresses of the dramatic, operatic and variety stage; 58 managers, business managers and agents; 16 dancers, 11 circus performers, 8 minstrels, 3 stage managers, 2 dramatists, 40 musicians, 5 musicians, 10 machinists, 21 museum performers, 3 scenic artists and 23 of all other classes.

The American actor and the American actress are not protected by the tariff directly, therefore, according to the free trade theory, their business should prosper without any remission and without regard to possible obstacles put in them. The result, however, which upsets the old and worthless free trade theory we have already shown. But it may be well to go further and point out the fact that where the dramatic profession is not protected it has been a particular victim to free trade, because foreign managers and foreign actors who come to this country and make money out of the American people take that money out of the country. Yet they have been allowed to import their costumes and everything else pertaining to their productions free of duty, while American managers and actors were compelled to pay duty on everything that they imported from abroad.

Without the benefit of this concession it would not pay many foreign managers to bring whole companies to this country to take the bread and butter out of the mouths of American actors, who can do equally well, if not a good deal better, and the profits made by the ventures of the American managers would be expended or invested in our own country instead of being carried off to Europe to increase our outflow of American gold.
