REPUBLICAN TICKET.

To fill out the unexpired term of the late Robert F. Bratton in the 53d Congress of the United States.

JOSEPH MALLALIEU, OF QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY.

For Representative in 54th Congress.

A. LINCOLN DRYDEN.
OF SOMERSET COUNTY.

THE republican convention of the first congressional district last Wednesday at Ocean City nominated on the sixtieth ballot A. Lincoln Dryden of somerset county, candidate for the Fifty-fourth Congress, and on the the third ballot Joseph Mallalieu, of Queen Anne's county, for the unexpired term of the Fifty-third Congress made vacant by the death of Robert F. Bratton.

At 12.45 o'clock Mr. C. O. Melvin, chairman of the State Central Committee of Worcester county, called the meeting to order. Z. R. Wharton of Worcester, and R. Rastall Walker, of Talbot county, were named as secretaries. A committee on resolutions was appointed, with Mr. H. Clay Dodson, of Talbot, chairman. The committee then retired.

As the committee was leaving the pavilion Col. J. C. Mullikin, of Talbot was recognized by the chair. Colonel Mullikin said: "I desire to offer a resolution which will be approved by every delegate present. I was shocked, humiliated, and mortified on entering this hall to see displayed here the flags of foreign nations and our stars and stripes absent. I say this without malice towards anyone, but have had it explained that this hall was last used for a democratic convention, and when told this I was not surprised. I move that a committee be appointed to secure the national flag. The motion was carried.

The convention took a recess for one hour. When the convention came together again Mr. Dodson offered the following resolutions, which were adopted;

Resolved, That we reaffirm the principles of the national republican platform of 1892, and we point to the condition that now confronts us under democratic rule as the clearest possible vindication of republican theories. We charge that the distress existing among the American people and the general derangement of our industries are justly due to the deleterious effect of democratic victory and supremacy. We further declare that in our judgment the country can prosper only under republican legislation enforced by republicans in harmony therewith and with the interest of the people.

The policy of the cotton States who desire to ship their cotton direct to England rather than to Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, or New England, and to buy back in direct opposition to the interest of the farmers and oystermen on the peninsulas, who must sell their products to the workman in American factories, or have them left unsold and we hereby denounce any person or any party who will advocate such a policy conserved in sectional hatred and fostered to the hurt of all sections. We hereby declare our love for our whole country—North and South, East and West—and we denounce as the enemy of all him who would injure any section of our common country. We trust that the vote of this district in the coming election will show our emphatic condemnation of such a policy. We denounce the Congress that has just adjourned as the most useless, dangerous and pernicious that ever assembled at the National Capital, and we are at loss which to condemn the most, the Whisky Trust, Sugar Trust, Gibson, Gorman or Wilson.

We are in favor of developing the resources of the United States and pledge our candidates to use their best endeavors, if elected, to urge upon Congress and push to a successful completion the Chesapeake and Delaware ship-canal.

We adopt for the emblem of the ticket nominated by this convention the head and bust of Lincoln, with the face turned toward the proper square to be marked as designating a republican ticket.

The chair stated that he was ready to receive nominations for the long term of Congress. When Dorchester county was called Dr. W. A. Smith placed the name of Philip Lee Goldsborough in nomination: A. Lincoln Dryden was nominated by George R. Sterling of Somerset, and Col. J. C. Mullikin placed the name of Dr. I. A. Barber of Talbot in nomination. The vote was taken by a call of the counties. The first ballot resulted as follows:

Goldsborough, 10, cast by Caroline 3, Dorchester 3½, Kent 1, Wicomico 1, and Dorchester 1½. Dryden received 14 votes, which were cast as follows: Dorchester ½ vote, Kent 1, Queen Anne's 4, Somerset 4, Wicomico 2 and Worcester 2½. Barber received 6 votes cast by Kent 1, Talbot 4, Wicomico 2. There was little or no change in the balloting up to the twenty-second ballot, when Worcester changed from Goldsborough to Barber. On the fifty-third dallot Dorchester gave her vote to Barber. When this move was made Wicomico shifted to Goldsborough and Dryden.

On the sixtieth ballot Wicomico gave Dryden four, and Worcester, which had been dividing her vote, threw three to Dryden. These with Queen Anne's and Somerset's solid vote and a half vote from Dorchester gave him 15½, which nominated Mr. Dryden. Before the vote was announced Kent and Talbot delegates changed their votes to Dryden. When the announcement was made it was moved to make Mr. Dryden's nomination unanimous, which was done.

Col. George M. Russum and Joseph Mallalieu were put in nomination for the short term. On the third ballot Mr. Mallalieu received 17½ votes and Col. Russum 12½ votes. When the announcement was made a stampede followed, and a majority of the delegates left the hall. Mr. Dryden was called and made a speech.

THE GAZETTE has used no words or expressions as strong as have been used in editorials of leading Democratic dailies throughout the country in connection with the administration and against their own party. The Baltimore Sun has fairly astounded the followers of Gorman in its condemnation of the man and his Senate associates. So has the News, N. Y. Herald, World and other big organs; while the N. Y. Sun has fairly exhausted the dictionary in its effort to find language to properly express its disgust for Cleveland and the Carlisle—Wilson combine, as well as the entire Democratic House of Representatives, and the Democratic press all over the land has fretted, howled, scolded and fumed over the condition of affairs as brought about by their own party either in Congress or the White House. The condition is truly serious, the time a critical one.

The idea of proclaiming at Chicago in a national platform that protection was unconstitutional a robbery and a fraud, a tax on the many for the benefit of the few, and declare for a tariff for revenue only. Herald this all over the country from the metropolis stage to the cross-roads assembly, from the public press to the cheapest assortment of campaign literature, and when this party elected to power upon the faith and promise that it would swipe down the "robber," wipe out the evil and give speedy relief to all conditions of life—placing upon public archives the constitutional for the unconstitutional,—elected to power in every branch of the National Government, assuming power with the echo from the "campaign of education" still ringing loud and clear, having a majority of over one-third in the lower House—having a President indolized as being the embodiment of consecrated principle who was devoted to the cause of tariff reform, and yet, after 21 long, weary months, the time consumed in bickering, the country suffering from uncertainty, the business of the land depressed, all commercial enterprize fairly paralized—after 21 months of this terrible suspense we behold that "unconstitutional robber tariff", still on the statute books the owner and thief in cordial intercourse! We behold the passage of a Senate measure by the lower House protectional in its character and in no sense based upon the principle of a "tariff for revenue" only, a measure worse in many respects than the McKinley bill—an improvement in none; its promoters shouting that they believe in admitting free the necessaries of life, and the taxing of the unnecessaries, yet at the same time voting for and passing a measure that admits diamonds free yet imposes a duty on sugar! The poor man can buy his diamonds cheaper because they are necessary for his comfort and happiness, he must pay more for his sugar because it is a luxury he may well do without. This great Gorman-Brice Anti-Hill-Sugar-Trust-tariff reform-compromise boncoction further provides for a protective duty on iron ore coal and other commodoties and these "unconstitutional" protective duties were voted for by the entire Democratic House with the understanding that these same Democrats should stultify themselves and their votes on the day following by voting for separate "pop-gun" bills to impose no tariff on these identical articles, well-knowing that if theSenate would not pass their petWilson bill it would not pass their separate bills wherein the bone of contention remained exactly as it had been in the Wilson measure.

We further behold the major body of Democrats all over the country crying down the Senate bill together with their leading journals; we find among other inconsistencies in this measure, the odious income tax, which places a premium on thrift and industry, and introduces the principle of taxing the few for the benefit of the many; we see their own worshiped idol of the White House stooping from his exhaulted position to intermeddle between co-ordinate branches of the Government, and advises one body that the tariff legislation of the other is "purfidy and dishonor" of the vilest hue—and now, presto change, the White House Statesman has this odoriferons Senate bill in his posession and it rests with him whether purfidy and dishonor shall be the law of the land! If the coward was ashamed to place his signature to it, does it lessen his responsibility for the same to be allowed to become law through mere inaction of ten days? Why don't he veto the bill like a man? Such is the condition that now confronts the country. The party that has thus advertised its incinceriity, its incompetency to handle public matters, its inability to do anything except close mills, factories and retard business generally, needs no sympathy. Were the Republican party, notwithstanding its brilliant record of the past, its confident assurances of the present—or its glorious promises of the future—were it to bring upon this country the widespread distress and business distraction traceable to Democratic blunders of recent months, we should expect the bones of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield and Blaine to fairly writhe in their graves and living Republicans might well blush with shame.

SENATOR GORMAN has not one staunch newspaper in Maryland or elsewhere so far as we know. It would seem, now that he has antagonized the President as he has, that all Federal patronage which Mr. Gibson or himself might have secured is hopelessly lost. This was never more forcibly shown than in the refusal to appoint Mr. Gibson's brother-in-law as postmaster of Centreville. To give an idea of the situation we copy the following from the Baltimore News of Aug. 30.

"At last the President seems to have put an end to the debauching use of Federal patronage in Maryland. His refusal to appoint Senator Gibson's brother-in-law as postmaster at Centreville, it may fairly be hoped, marks the collapse of the conspiracy to buy political preferment in Maryland Federal office, culminating in the corrupt tariff legislation just enacted.

The success of that conspiracy hitherto has been one of the most unhappy and most surprising facts in American politics. What could be more surprising than that Mr. Cleveland, the champion of tariff reform, should practically turn over the patronage of this State to a professed protectionist? That the President elected as a protest of the people against bossism should give the most unscrupulous of bosses the means to build up the most arrogant and defiant boss-ship in the country? And what more unhappy fact is recorded in our political history than the enslavement of the whole class of professional politicians in Maryland by the bribery of office? What is more discreditable to the manhood of our people than their permitting their true sentiments to be misrepresented in Congress by Mr. Gorman, and the whole influence of a Democratic State like Maryland to be used in the Senate to uphold the most flagrant form of Republicanism?

But at last this mysterious hold of a Republican Senator upon a Democratic President is broken. Two appointments in Baltimore, hitherto made, and the refusal of the President to appoint Mr. Gibson's brother-in-law and the appointment of a gentleman asked for by the neighborhood, are a notice to every rural office-seeker that nothing more is to be made by slavish submission to Mr Gorman. To the people of Maryland these appointments indicate that their wishes, not the wishes of their present temporary boss, are to be the guide in selecting public servants.

It will be observed that in treating a refusal to please Mr. Gibson as a refusal to please Mr. Gorman we imply that Mr. Gibson's wishes are Mr. Gorman's wishes. Such is so notoriously the fact that it requires no explanation, however unworthy may be the submission to his colleague in which Mr. Gibson is thus placed.—As is perfectly well known, Mr. Gorman's machine, nurtured by Mr. Cleveland's own hand from 1885 to the end of his first term, had become omnipotent in Maryland when a successor to Judge Wilson was to be elected; and the Legislature, in choosing Mr. Gibson, simply recorded Mr. Gorman's order to send him another vote in the Senate; a clerk to aid in dividing the offices. Such alone has been the role filled by the self-effacing Senator from the Eastern Shore, and a refusal to appoint his candidate is a refusal to appoint the candidate whom Mr. Gorman had given him permission to support.

Let all honorable, self-respecting Democrats take heart. This assertion of manliness on the part of the President can only mean that during the rest of the term he does not intend to permit the Federal salaries in Maryland to be used to bribe Democrats into supporting men who have "stolen the livery of Democracy to serve Republicanism.'"

Pennsylvania Tours to the South.

For several seasons past the announcement of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's tours to the South has been looked for with interest, and the pleasant anticipations of those who participate in them have been more than realized. For the present early autumn, announcement is made of two personally-conducted tours from New York to the mountains of Maryland and Virginia and the two most prominent cities of the upper South. The specific points covered by these tours are Gettysburg, Blue Mountain, Luray Caverns, Natural Bridge, the Grottoes of the Shanendoah, and the cities of Richmond and Washington.

It would be difficult to plan a tour of ten days which would embrace a more interesting group of places, as every one of them has an individual interest that cannot fail to enlist wide and favorable attention. The scenery of the entire route is picturesque and attractive, and the season is timed so as to present the scenic beauties in their best form.

These tours will leave New York and Philadelphia on September 15 and 29, and the members of the party will travel in special trains of parlor cars provided exclusively for their use. The entire round trip covers a period of ten days, and excursion tickets, including all traveling expenses, will be sold from Philadelphia at $85.

For itineraries containing complete information as to routes, special train service, descriptive notes, &c., apply to or address tourist agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

SEA BASS IN SAN DIEGO BAY.

Huge Monsters Weighing From One Hundred to Six Hundred Pounds.

Chris Schmidt, a longshoreman, caught three black sea bass recently, weighing 221, 337 and 376 pounds respectively. After hooking his game he tied the end of the line to a powder keg and let the big fish run around in the bay until exhausted, when he pulled it in and killed it.

This land locked bay of San Diego and the kelp bed at the harbor mouth is a favorite home for the black sea bass, or jewfish, as it is commonly called. Catching these fish is excellent sport. They weigh from 100 to 600 pounds and in appearance are much like the small mouthed black bass of eastern lakes. A long hand line the size of a window sash cord, a large hook of quarter inch iron, baited with a white-fish, an ax and a rowboat are all the tackle needed for this sport.

The baited hook is dropped to the bottom in 50 feet or more of water. A vigorous bite and the fish almost hooks itself. Then the fun begins. The long line plays out with the rapidty of a whale line when the harpoon strikes home. The jewfish tires more quickly than the whale. The man in the bow of the rowboat begins to take up the slack line. This rouses the fish. Away he darts again and stops. The slack is pulled in again. The efforts of the fish become less vigorous. The line is made fast in the bow. The helmsman is warned to look out. The fish begins to run away. The line tightens. This time it does not play out. The fish, feeling the weight of the boat, strives hard to get away from it.

Faster and faster goes the boat as the captive fish tows it seaward until the bow is pulled down almost beneath the waves, and it is sometimes necessary to put out the oars and attempt to retard the dangerous progress. By degrees the fish gets tired coping with such heavy odds and finally allows itself to be drawn alongside the boat. A blow on the head with an ax ends the fight.—San Diego (Cal.) Dispatch.

Alligators.

Few animals are more friendless than the alligator. With claims to neither beauty nor intelligence, he is not handsome enough to win our admiration nor dangerous enough to make us respect him. For hours he basks in the sun, floating on the surface of the water or lying on some muddy bank, apparently as useless as the log of wood he so much resembles. Every man's hand is raised against him. He is killed by the tourist in pure wantonness, simply because he affords a mark for the ever ready rifle. Hunters slay alligators by thousands for their hides and teeth. Indeed it is for these alone that the alligator is prized. I think, however, the alligator plays a part in the drama of animal life for which he is especially adapted. It is said that on the lower Mississippi river alligators feed on muskrats, and the recent decrease in the number of alligators has been followed by a corresponding increase in the number of muskrats, which seriously weaken the levees by burrowing in them. If this be true, the alligator is here of direct value to the planter and should therefore be protected by law.—Frank M. Chapman in Our Animal Friends.

A Circular Knitting Machine.

A circular knitting machine of ingenious construction has been brought to notice by a Philadelphia inventor. At the completion of a stocking the machine is stopped by the pattern chain, to allow a ribbed top to be run upon the needles, the driving pulley being moved into gear with the driving shaft, and the leg is knit. Following this, a lug on the pattern chain starts the cam carrying wheel, whose cams control or actuate the mechanism for changing from circular to back and forth knitting, for throwing in the thickening thread and for bringing into operation the fashioning devices, and contrariwise for knitting the heel and then the foot, the toe being then formed in the same manner as the heel, whereupon the machine stops. The mechanisms actuated by the pattern chain lug to stop the machine are ingeniously locked by a swinging lever which is first engaged and swung aside, whereupon devices adapted to stopping the apparatus are engaged and moved by the lug. The inclines of the sinkers partly draw the thread in forming the stitch, enabling the inclination of the stitch cams to be lessened.—New York Sun.

Another London View of Us.

"In America," says a London paper, with that beautiful accuracy and confidence which characterize London papers on things American, "it is not uncommon for well to do mothers themselves to take perambulators out; consequently the designs are far more elaborate than ours. The baby carriage built to the order of Mr. Astor and sent to the Waldorf hotel in Broadway cost $500 and fairly scintillated with gold and silver plating and silver gilt fittings." And then, warming with its subject, the paper airily goes on: "Ladies of New York and San Francisco favor the little hansom cab, with its silver lamps and fittings, but the wife of a Wall street broker struck out a new line by having a baby carriage made in the shape of a swan, the infant to recline on swan's down cushions inside the bird, so to speak."

How Philadelphia Kills Elephants.

When, a few years ago, a showman in Philadelphia desired to end the life of a vicious elephant in his company, he did not go about it in the bungling manner adopted in New York to kill Tip. He took a rope, made, as we remember it, especially for the purpose, slipped it around the brute's neck and then hitched another elephant to each end of the rope. The free elephants were then driven in opposite directions until the rope tightened about the victim's throat, and he fell forward and expired. It was all over in about half an hour, but then, as the New Yorkers say, Philadelphia is a slow old town.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

A Life That Is Hard on Gloves.

Gloves figure largely in the list of necessary expenditures by the wives of the cabinet officers, as upon each official entertainment when they, with the president and his wife, constitute the receiving party a pair of white gloves must be sacrificed. The fact that the function is a card reception does not lessen the certainty that the glove worn on the right hand, which is extended to the passing stream of guests, becomes, before the close of the evening, so soiled that no future effort at cleansing is of the slightest avail. The glove on the left hand, of course, remains spotless.

Mrs. Cleveland never wears a glove on her right hand at receptions, as her experience during her first occupancy of the executive mansion taught her that by so doing she avoided the intense pain that invariably followed a great amount of handshaking when the glove was kept on. Mrs. Harrison was compelled to altogether omit handshaking on account of the condition of her hands, which were at times so swollen with rheumatism as to make the slightest pressure a matter of positive agony. All things considered, it would seem the most sensible thing to omit entirely the handshaking feature of public and card receptions at the White House.—Kate Field's Washington.

Opening the Doors.

The action of the University club of Boston in promising admission to women to a new set of apartments which it is planning to build is for this club a radical one. By it the number of men's clubs in Boston that have granted privileges of this sort to women is increased to three, all old and conservative ones. In New York there are at least seven prominent men's clubs that offer club accommodation to their friends of the other sex, one of these, the Cloister, making the presence of women at its Sunday evening dinners an especial feature. Throughout the country the club element has participated more or less in this movement, a few even of the conservative close communion London clubs having yielded with the rest to its advance.
