REPUBLICAN TICKET.

To fill out the unexpired term of the late Robert F. Bratton in the 53d Congress of the United States.

JOSEPH MALLALIEU, OF QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY.

For Representative in 54th Congress.

A. LINCOLN DRYDEN.
OF SOMERSET COUNTY.

WE regret to offer the ladies an apology for not having opportunity to give a full and unabridged report of the awards in the household department this week. Our intention was good.

SENATOR Chas. H. Gibson was snubbed by Col. Edward Lloyd on Thursday at the fair. It was the first meeting of the gentlemen since some political complications in which the Col. held the Senator responsible for his not getting the collectorship of the port of Baltimore. It created no little sensation when Mr. Lloyd refused to shake Mr. Gibson's proffered hand.

THE Ninth Annual Fair of the Talbot County Fair Association closed yesterday. We have endeavored to give as full an official report as we could with the circumstances, though it is far from being what we anticipated, owing to our inability to get possession of the return books until Thursday afternoon. We had anticipated getting them as fast as finished as we had always been allowed to do in previous years, and had made unusual preparations to give the most speedy and complete list of premiums ever published. So it is with no small disappointment we give to our readers this morning the curtailed list, and yet it is the most complete ever issued by a Saturday paper in Easton.

THE Maryland Agricultural College which opened for its year's work on Wednesday finds itself confronted by an extraordinary condition of affairs for that or any similar institution, since the college was full last year and nearly every student of last session except the graduating class of '94 returns this fall; there are but twenty four vacancies to be filled by new students. For these vacancies one hundred and eighty applications have been filed, one hundred and fifty six of which must be turned down, because there is not room at the college to accommodate the applicants.

That the college has facilities for instruction has been shown in past by the display which it has made this week at the Easton Fair; that it is really doing good work is shown by the extraordinarily large percentage of old students who wish to return and it is not remarkable that there should be so large a demand for its services as an educator, but it is a shame—a crying shame that the Maryland State College should have to turn from its doors Maryland boys, the sons of Maryland farmers, because the State has not provided house room for their accommodation.

The generosity of the general government has enabled the college to place the cost of board and tuition at a sum within the reach of all, but no part of the congressional appropriations can be used for the erection or repair of buildings.

For these the college is dependent on the state and the people of the State should see that their representatives in the Legislature, appropriate money to erect for the college buildings, sufficient to accommodate every Maryland boy who applies for admission. Maryland is far behind her sister States in this respect, and it is high time that she should throw off her apathy and take her place in the front rank of agricultural education.

THE NEXT ELECTIONS

THE HOME MARKET BULLETIN REVIEWS THE SITUATION.

Republicans Must Not Be Too Confident, but Should Work Hard—Thirty-three United States Senators to Be Elected. Harmony and Hard Work Essential.

All the members of the next congress are to be elected on Nov. 6. Legislatures are to be chosen in August, September and November, which will have the election of 33 United States senators. If either house becomes Republican, further bad legislation can be blocked. In the event of a strong Republican verdict it is probable that even the present congress will not succeed in passing anything very damaging during the short session that will remain for it.

There is a feeling that the Republicans are going to sweep the country this year, and they will if they try. But here are a few figures which show that it will not do to be too confident. There are 356 members in the present house, of whom only 128 are Republicans. It will be seen that there is a great deal to overcome. The Democrats expect to hold nearly or quite all of their 120 from the south. If they hold them all, they will need to get only 59 more from 28 northern states to hold a majority. The Republicans must carry three to one of the northern districts in order to gain control.

But as a large number of Democrats in the present house received only small pluralities and as public opinion has undergone a revolution it is believed that every close district will go Republican this year if proper attention is given to it. A Democratic loss throughout the north proportioned to that sustained in special elections in New York and Ohio districts this year to fill vacancies will make the next house strongly Republican. Besides we expect some gains in the south.

The Populists, who have 14 members of the present house, expect to have at least 40 in the next. This calculation, however, is all in the air. Populism is on the wane in the country districts since the railroad strike, and our advices from Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas are that the Republicans are likely to gain two-thirds of all that the Populists lose. In the large cities, however, the Populists now seem likely to win the striking labor vote from the Democrats. This may be contemplated with serenity, because the change will only be to another alias. It is only when they win votes from the Republicans that the country is endangered. Should they have 40 members, mostly won from the Republicans, they would have the balance of power in the next house, and in case the presidential election should be thrown into the house the situation would be at least disquieting.

Those senators whose terms expire with the present congress are as follows: Morgan of Alabama, D.; Berry of Arkansas, D.; Wolcott of Colorado, R.; Higgins of Delaware, R.; Colquitt of Georgia, D.; Shoup of Idaho, R.; Cullom of Illinois, R.; Gear of Iowa, R.; Martin of Kansas, D.; Lindsay of Kentucky, D.; Caffery of Louisiana, D.; Frye of Maine, R.; Hoar of Massachusetts, R.; McMillan of Michigan, R.; Washburn of Minnesota, R.; Walthall of Mississippi, D.; Power of Montana, R.; vacancy to be filled; Manderson of Nebraska, R.; Chandler of New Hampshire, R.; McPherson of New Jersey, D.; Ransom of North Carolina, D.; Dolph of Oregon, R.; Dixon of Rhode Island, R.; Butler of South Carolina, D.; Pettigrew of South Dakota, R.; Harris of Tennessee, D.; Coke of Texas, D.; Hunton of Virginia, D.; vacancy in Washington; Camden of West Virginia, D.; Carey of Wyoming, R.; vacancy to be filled.

Here are 14 Democrats and 16 Republicans, with three vacancies in states now partly represented by Republicans. Rhode Island has already elected a Republican successor to Mr. Dixon, and Oregon has chosen a legislature which will re-elect Mr. Dolph. Glancing over the list, not a seat now held by a Republican looks shaky, and on the contrary there is reason for believing that all the vacancies will be filled by Republicans, and that protectionists, if not Republicans, are likely to come from Alabama, New Jersey and West Virginia, with the possibility of one from Tennessee. But in any event the senate will be close, and the Populists now there will continue to receive attention far beyond their merits unless they improve by experience.

The obvious lesson of the foregoing facts for Republicans to observe is that we must work to win. It is important to look after all the close districts, south as well as north. It is a mistake to treat the south or even our large cities as foreign countries or hopeless fields. Every candidate who will not declare for adequate and impartial protection should be opposed, and if he is opposed vigorously there will be a good many surprises.

Another important lesson of the hour is harmony. Men who are Republicans in the main should be wholly so this year. It was third partyism and side issues which gave the country to the Democracy in 1892, and what a fearful price the people have paid for it! Republicans will never join any other party so long as the country or the prosperity of the people is in danger. Therefore the few who have undertaken to "smash the Republican party" in order to absorb it should first smash the Democrats, the Populists, the anarchists and every other element which, through combination with the others, is a national menace. The people have been brought near enough to danger this year so that they will have little patience with those who make diversions when all good men should stand in line. Let all the new hopes go until we have made freedom, peace and prosperity secure.

RICHARD COBDEN A FALSIFIER.

Without Protection England Cannot Hold Her Own.

It is astounding to note how falsified are all the predictions of Richard Cobden and how true, in only 60 years, have been the statements—unheeded at the time—that the days would come when Englishmen would have to submit to German wages, German hours of labor, German food, or to leave their land of birth and seek for fair remuneration in lands where protection to native labor was in force, and the bone, sinew and capital of man was not handicapped by pauper labor. Do not all our ablest statesmen of both political parties, our bankers, our merchants, our manufacturers concur with our landlords and farmers that without protection, wisely and carefully sustained, England cannot hold her own against all "the civilized world?" Driven out of all "civilized markets," the search for new markets among the uncivilized millions of Africa, who only use three yards per annum of calico to cover their loins, will not replace the loss of our European, American, Indian, Chinese and Japanese customers.—Cor. Manchester Courier.

Burned Zulus Dreaded the Ice.

"The natives of tropical countries are seldom so much astonished as they are when first introduced to snow and ice," said E. A. Forester of Chicago. "While the World's fair was in progress I saw a joke played upon two members of a Zulu band which was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by all present except the Zulus themselves. The manager of their tribe, whom I knew intimately, knowing that none of the Zulus had ever seen any ice, thought it would be great fun to see how they would act when brought in contact with it. He accordingly told two of them that he wished them to go down town with him. He informed me what he was going to do and invited me to accompany him, which I did. We stopped at the office of one of the large breweries, and after explaining our errand were readily granted permission to go through the icehouse.

"On arriving at the door of the icehouse we all entered, the Zulus, who were barefooted, following close behind. All along the walls inside great cakes of ice were piled. My friend, the manager, climbed up on top of the cakes and told the Zulus to follow him. They obeyed. When the cold chill of the ice struck their bare feet, they didn't know what to make of it. They looked at one another for a minute and jabbered something in their outlandish tongue. They stood it for about a minute, then, giving vent to a yell, they sprang to the ground, and rushing to the door threw themselves on the ground outside, where they lay writhing about, nursing their feet and insisting that they had been severely burned."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE SILENT CRANK.

A Type That the Foreign Critic Will Not Be Able to Understand.

There is one type of American citizen which it is certain no foreign critic will ever be able to understand. It does not make much difference who the critic may be, when he confronts the type of silent and suffering baseball crank he will be at sea. It is a type that is familiar to all the attendants at the ball games and to the many men who are acquainted with the world of sports. The howling dervish sort of crank is known to all men, but the silent and suffering one usually baffles analysis. In the majority of instances he is a man of mature years who has secured an important place in the financial or commercial world. His passion for baseball is a thing that passes all understanding. He is on hand at the games whenever it is possible, but always takes a retiring and unobtrusive seat, where he sits with an outward air of boredom and indifference, but really suffering from emotions that are violent and tempestuous. It is only when he grits his teeth, drives his nails into the palms of his hands or suddenly lets out a blood curdling scream that the spectator gets any idea of the emotions which are aroused by the playing. At other times the tremor of his eyelids or the fierce fashion in which he bites his lips as he watches the game indicate how closely he participates in the fortunes of the home team.

There is one instance of a banker of sedate mien, with white mutton chop whiskers and a smug exterior, who, when spoken to on the question of baseball, smiles, shrugs his shoulders and refuses to be drawn into a discussion. Yet at dinner at night he is wildly jubilant or immoderately depressed, according to the results of the day's game. He has not missed a game this year, except on Tuesdays and Fridays, when he is compelled to be present at board meetings. He is only one of literally hundreds of men who are known to the frequenters of the ball grounds, and who are wound up in the national game to a degree of absorption that even the devotees of racing could not rival.—New York Sun.

A Strange Pictorial Error.

With regard to the numerous technical mistakes committed by artists who select military subjects for their pictures a good story is told of the late Frank Holl. In his painting room he had a portrait of the Duke of Edinburgh as one of the elder brothers of the Trinity House.

The duke, of course, wore naval costume, which affords little opportunity for color to the painter. There is the blue of blue cloth, and there is the gold of gold lace, and there is very little more. The union jack, with its angles and patches of white, red and blue—a blue of a different quality from the uniform—was the painter's chance, and Frank Holl seized it with a painter's avidity.

The duke stood beside a little table, of which the flag acted as a cloth or cover. The artist so arranged this bit of drapery as to harmonize with his general scheme, and, much delighted with the result, awaited the verdict of the Trinity brethren. Some of these came to the studio and were one and all dissatisfied. Poor Frank Holl was greatly surprised and disconcerted. The picture would not do at all, and, in fact, could not be hung as it then appeared.

And Holl had taken such pains with that portrait and was so delighted with his clever conquest of its difficulties. Then the critics explained that the flag was disposed upside down; that this meant the surrender of the ship; that the duke would be disgraced, the Trinity House disgraced, the service disgraced, England disgraced, unless the flag hung the other way on the round table.—London Tit-Bits.

Six of One, Half Dozen of the Other.

There are two points up the Hudson from New York which do not stand well in the opinion of all people. One is at West Point—it is the United States Military academy, and there be those who say that the first year there for a cadet is something terrific. The other is at Sing Sing, and there be those who say that life in the penitentiary is not as desirable as it might be, though it might be much worse. Not long ago a youth, on his way to West Point to try for admission, met another youth on the train who had been there a year and quit. The young fellows chatted along about baseball and that sort of thing as a starter, and finally the ex-cadet made an inquiry of a personal character.

"By the way," he said, "where are you going? Up to the Catskills? Fine place up there to spend the summer."

"No," responded the other, "I'm going to West Point."

"For the summer?"

"No, as a cadet."

The ex-cadet gasped.

"Jee-rusalem, man," he exclaimed, "you don't know a good thing when you see it. Why didn't you get off at Sing Sing?"—Detroit Free Press.

Roman Coins Found In Mashonaland.

Roman coins have been discovered in King Solomon's mines. A Mashona native, grubbing about near the famous Zimbabwe ruins, came upon eight coins, all in a fair state of preservation, which are undoubtedly Roman. One of the coins bears the legend "Constantius Cæs." How on earth did they get there? There are plenty of theories as to who those ancient gold seekers were who left the massive circular walls and solid conical towers, the temple fortresses of Mashonaland. In fact, every man is at liberty to make his own theory, but nobody has made one yet which could comfortably bring in Roman coins and Constantius Cæs. Perhaps Mr. Theodore Bent dropped them on his recent excursion. Roman coins are the sort of thing an antiquarian might carry about with him, and while jolting about in Mashonaland a man might drop anything.—Westminster Gazette.

—While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Harry Roberts, Druggist, Easton; A. D. Harrison Druggist, St. Michaels.

'THAT'S ALL RIGHT."

It is remarkable the number of old battered, broken and defaced small pictures that are brought to me to make large copies from.—Now listen—the very same photographs, that other artists refuse to make on account of the great amount of work to put on them to make them perfect. Well, "That's All Right," you may bring all bad ones (good ones too) and the result I guarantee will be satisfactory, and prices the same as for good ones. Crayons, India Ink, Pastel, Oil, Water Color are my styles and the grade always No. 1. Mail orders have every attention.

As usual I can be found at
