REPUBLICAN TICKET.

To fill out the unexpired term of the late Robert F. Bratton in the 53d Congress of the United States.

JOSEPH MALLALIEU,
OF QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY.

For Representative in 54th Congress.

A. LINCOLN DRYDEN.
OF SOMERSET COUNTY.

W. W. BUSTEED, editor of the Centreville Observer, it is said, will be a candidate for the State Senate next year in Queen Anne's county. Mr. Busteed has served several terms in the House of Delegates, and is a man of sense.

MR. WM. M. ABBOTT of the Annapolis Capital has given his paper a new dress and new vignette heading, especially designed, showing the state building and commercial advantages or Annapolis. The Capital is a live little daily and is pushed by one of Maryland s most respected editors.—Long may it continue to grow.

OUR raaders have no doubt seen mentioned in the papers something about the Great Exposition which is to be held in Baltimore during 1897.

It would be well for them to note that it is a State affair, in which all the counties are expected to take part, and be largely represented by their various industries, and to show off their different advantages. And this huge undertaking, although inaugurated by our city friends, to be a perfect success, must have the whole-hearted support of all the people of the State; so we must be up and doing, that we may show off the State's many attractious in the most thorough way; also that many of the millions of people who will visit this great exposition will come to believe as every true Marylander always maintains. That is, our State is not only a good place to be born in, or to die in, but the very best place to live in.

This Great Big Exposition in plain words is to be a great advertisement for our State; and the rivalary among the different States in the Union for supremacy is so great, these expositions or advertisements are a necessity.

In the past we have been too modest. The Great West was built up by showing its advantages to the people of other sections and foreign countries. Owing to the fact of hard climates, low prices for agricultural products, and long distances from foreign or consuming markets, the tide of immigration is changing, and the South is putting forth many schemes that are attractive to get new people to its sections.

Why should not Maryland have its share of new people also? It can if we only let other people know what we have to offer. The coming Baltitimore Centennial is our opportunity let's embrace it. We are glad to know with each day its scope broadens, and already many foreign manufacturers are enquiring about space for their exhibits, and even foreign governments, through their embassadors and ministers in Washington, are looking the matter up, so their respective countries can be properly represented.

It is confidently asserted if the people of the State put their shoulders to the wheel, work with unity, and help the project along, that in 1897 our visitors, who will come from every country in the world, will see an exposition only second to the World's Fair, held last year in Chicago. The people coming will have to be fed; they will consume a great deal. We in the country districts must supply the food. Baltimore is our natural market, therefore the direct results in cash from the Baltimore Centennial can be counted in millions.

The Sugar-Cured Congress.

Dedicated to the Democratic Campaign.

TUNE—"The Old Oaken Bucket."

How dear to our hearts is our Democrat Congress
As hopeless inaction presents it to view,
The bill of poor Gorman, the deep tangled tariff,
And every mad pledge that their lunacy knew!
The wide spread depression, the mills that closed by it,
The rock of free silver where great Grover fell,
They've busted our country, no use to deny it,
And plague the old party, it's busted as well.
This G. Cleveland's Congress,
This Queen Lilly Congress,
This wild free-trade Congress,
We all love so well.

Their moss-covered pledges we no longer treasure,
For often at noon when out hunting a job,
We find that instead of corn they had promised,
They've given us nothing—not even a cob.
How ardent we've cussed 'em with lips overflowing
With sulphurous blessings as great swear words fell,
The emblem of hunger, free trade and taxed sugar,
Are sounding in sorrow the workingman's knell.
This bank-breaking Congress,
This mill-closing Congress,
This starvation Congress,
We all love so well.

How sweet from their eloquent lips to receive it,
"Cursed tariff protection no longer uphold."
We listened—and voted our dinner pails empty,
The factories silent, the furnaces cold.
And now far removed from our lost situations,
The tears of regret doth intrusively swell.
We yearn for Republican administration
And sigh for the Congress that served us so well.
This Fifty-third Congress,
This Democrat Congress,
This sugar-cured Congress
Has rung its last knell.

DOWN EAST FARMERS

FEAR CANADIAN COMPETITION WILL GLUT THE MARKETS.

Garden Truck, Hay and Sheep Must Sell For Less Money—A Lone Democratic Politician Who Still Clings to Grover—Everything For the Trusts.

I have been spending my vacation in a little country town way down in Maine. The old farmer with whom I boarded was an active politician, and he and I had many discussions. One day I rode over with him to the country store, a mile or two away, and while we were there another farmer came in and greeted my host with, "Well, Miller, are they going to pass this tariff bill?"

"I dunno," said Miller. "Looks like it."

"Well sir," said the newcomer, "if they do, I've voted the Democratic ticket for the last time."

"Why?" asked Miller.

"Because," was the reply, "if it passes I'll have to sell my flock of sheep. I've been getting 28 and 30 cents a pound for wool, but if this bill passes I won't get more'n 15 or 16 cents, and I can't afford to raise wool for that. And that ain't all," he went on. "I can't get so much for my produce if they let the Canadians bring their stuff in here free or at a lower duty than they pay now."

"Do you think that no duty or a lower duty on Canadian farm products would affect you very much?" I asked.

"Well, I should think it would," was the reply. "Some things 'twon't interfere with, but it will make a big difference in the price of my eggs and potatoes and turnips and hay and such stuff. They ought to put up the duty on hay if anything. There's too much Canadian hay comes in here now. And as for turnips, you see, St. Andrew's down there, just across the line, is a great place for turnips, and if them turnips didn't have to pay a duty it wouldn't pay me to raise any."

"Do you get a pretty good price for your produce now?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "there hasn't been as good a market for them as usual the last year, the times are so hard. A good many mills have been shut down for a longer or shorter time, and that's made money pretty tight."

"Well, then," I said, "you farmers have as much to fear from the shutting down of the mills as from the coming in of Canadian products, haven't you?"

"More. We couldn't sell anything if the mills didn't run. Who'd we sell to?"

"That's just it," I said. "You see, you get just as much benefit from the tariff on manufactures as the manufacturer does. If there weren't any factories, you wouldn't have any market for your produce, so you profit by the tariff on manufactures as well as by the tariff on farm products. You need a tariff on both to protect you."

"Well, that's so," he replied, "though I hadn't thought of it before. I dunno but I'll vote for protection anyhow, even if they don't put wool on the free list and make me sell my sheep."

"There's no doubt that they'll make wool free," I said, "though I didn't know before that free wool would affect Maine much. It is easy enough to see the danger from the coming in of Canadian produce under a low duty, but I didn't suppose they raised wool here."

"They don't much," he said, "though I've got a small flock of sheep. The wool hasn't started on my sheep yet this year, though, and my wife says it's because I voted for Cleveland and free wool."

"Shouldn't wonder," I said.

"I should think those western fellers who raise wool would kick more'n we do, though," the old farmer continued.

"I guess they do," I replied. "Petitions against free wool have been sent to congress from 35 states and territories, but the people are not in it with this congress. The trusts have the inside track with this administration."

Just here there entered a man with a Cleveland figure, who, I afterward learned, was a Democratic politician of local fame. Catching my last words, this politician asked in loud, impressive tones, "What is the loss to a few thousand woolgrowers compared to the gain to 70,000,000 of consumers?"

"Ah," I said, "but you must remember that those 70,000,000 consumers are also producers. They produce the articles which the woolgrowers consume. The benefits are mutual, and all have employment and money with which to buy the products of the others. To see the effect as a whole you must apply the same argument to everything. To be consistent, if not wise, you would have to make everything free. Then all your 70,000,000 consumers would soon find that they are producers also. Foreign goods would take the place of home products in our markets until our people, thrown out of work by the ruin of all our industries, would be too poor to buy even the products of European labor."

"We're not talking about 'free everything,'" returned he of Cleveland stature. "We don't want everything free, so we don't have to apply it to everything. We're talking about free wool."

"Pardon me," I said, "for assuming for a moment that the Democratic party had any use for the jewel of consistency. There is chance for a whole day's discussion in finding out what raw materials are, as your senate has learned."

"Well, I'm for tariff reform and Grover Cleveland every time," said the politician as, pleading an engagemnent, he hurried out.

"Tariff reform and Grover Cleveland every time," I mused. "Never the nation or the people." And I, too, went out, followed by the two farmers.

Simply "Ned, the Pile Driver."

That is a strange story about the late baronet, Sir Edward Poore, who, dropping his title, was known in Australia as "Ned, the Pile Driver." He was a hotel keeper and a mine prospector and seems to have been fairly successful. There are men yet alive who served with Sir Edward in the Scots Fusilier guards from 1844 to 1848.—London Vanity Fair.

Housekeeping Linens.

EVERY SUCCEEDING YEAR

the business of our great Linen Department shows more vitality and growth.

We confidently anticipate an unusually large business this fall, for the reason that the superb stock now exhibited includes the very cream and pick of the principal linen marts and factories of the old world, and is an artistic exposition of more than usual merit, nearly all the designs being new and exclusive.

Our Buyer has had exceptional opportunities of purchasing at remarkably low figures, and the result of his work is seen in the immense collection of these goods now on exhibition.

The prices are lower than ever.
The assortment is greater.

We name the following:

HEMSTITCHED TABLE CLOTHS

with Napkins to match:

Hemstitched Table Cloths, with one dozen Napkins to match,
2½ yards long, at $5.00 per set;
3 yards long, at $6.00 per set.
