NOVEMBER 5th, 1895: Exit Arthur Pue Gorman & Co. Verily, the hand writing is on the wall.

It is a case of The People vs. Bad Management; Honest Administration vs. Corrupt Methods; a Pure Ballot vs. Barter and Sale of Spoils. Performance vs. false Promises and Deceit. In all of which the people of Maryland will represent the plaintiffs and the A. P. Gorman Ring Co.,—responsible for the defendants, will receive a verdict against them of such a convincing character as to produce a very salutary and wholesome effect for many years to come.

THE Rayner—Jones—Hayes Anti-convention Campaign will soon be instituted throughout the State. This tri-angular concern stumping the counties prior to the nominating convention is quite a novel thing in Democratic politics in this State. It will be amusing after all to witness the convention on July 31st—ignore the claims of all three corners, and pass the prize elsewhere. In this connection it may be reliably stated, there is every prospect that none of the three gentlemen above mentioned will receive the Democratic nomination for Governor at the meeting of the next State convention. It will be the Hon. Wm. Pinkney Whyte.

THE tide of Republican favor still indicates high water mark. The flow is strong with a tendency to go far higher. Have you read the returns from Chicago's election on Tuesday? Do not the general elections of 1895 bid fair to record the same emphatic verdict against Demorratic methods as characterized those of 1894? And though this verdict gave Maryland to the Republicans last Fall—It will require a repetition this year to place the State safely under Republican control. Then let the party nominate men for public office whom the sovereign people will delight to honor with public trust—and with such a selection Maryland's next Governor will be a Republican and her legislature contain a working majority of the same material.

THE Democratic State Central Committee met in Baltimore at noon Wednesday and decided to hold their State Convention on July 31st, next. The meeting of the central committee was the occasion for the gathering of a large number of Democratic politicians from every section of the state. Many were the expressions of honest conviction that the situation in Maryland, from a Democratic standpoint, was critical in the extreme, and requiring the greatest prudence in the management of the party's affairs with a view to holding power longer than the coming election. The truth is the Democratic Ring, bosses, politicians and manipulators generally of that party's affairs, in the name of the party, have so deceived the people in the past that they are no longer trusted, and will accordingly be relegated to the rear.

CHICAGO held a municipal election on Tuesday. The Republicans swept everything clean and elected their entire ticket by the biggest vote ever polled in that city. Swift, the Republican candidate for Mayor, received a plurality of over 41,000 votes. This election indicates that since last November there has been no change in popular sentiment in that section of the west which is calculated to give courage to the Democrats, and the same conditions may safely be presumed to exist in other localities. With the election of the 53rd Congress and Grover Cleveland to the Presidency for a second time, the Democratic party was given every chance to redeem its promises and measure up to its professions, but down right failure to act in good faith caused a general distrust which will not soon be overcome. The result is, with every opportunity the people manifest their disgust for such treatment and vote for a return to power of the only political party that has in modern times demonstrated its ability to manage affairs of national importance, relieve distress, restore confidence and best protect the name and dignity of American citizenship.

CHAPTER II.

MR. EDITOR: While considering this subject I propose a brief review of our national finance legislation from the beginning of the civil war down to times recent.

I, in common with everybody with whom I conversed during the civil war, was pursuaded to believe that the depreciation of our green-backs was due to the uncertainty as to how the war was likely to terminate. I now think this uncertainty had nothing whatever to do with that terrible depreciation, and am mistaken if I am unable to demonstrate the truth of this opinion.

There is no doubt but that Wall street was happy when the war broke out. It was patent to every one that the government would need vast sums of money and New York bankers and brokers expect to be called on for their "generous and patriotic" aid, and they did graciously offer to loan money to the government at from 24 to 36 per cent interest—see Appleton's Encyclopedia for 1861, page 296. But the government declined their patriotic offers, and by the acts of July 17, 1861 and Feb. 12, 1862, issued $60,000,000 treasury notes, not bearing interest but payable for all debts, public and private, (including customs dues.) Thus these issues were not demonetized. They were always worth their face value in coin and therefore never at any time depreciated in value. Wall street was ignored.

The next issue was under the Act of February 25, 1862, just 13 days after the last act above mentioned. I think the amount issued under this act was $300,000,000. All the greenbacks issued by authority of this act were made legal tender for all debts, public and private except (mark this exception) duties on imports and interest on the public debt, which after that date was to be paid in coin. That this was done by Wall St. there can be no doubt; for only a few weeks before the passage of this act a convention of bankers (why bankers?) chiefly from New York, met in Washington to advise the government as to the best means of raising money. From that moment the depreciation began.

Now mark you: down to the passage of this act there was no difference in the value of any of the three forms of money then in use—gold, silver and green-backs. The moment an exception was made in the legal tender of the green-back, its decline in value and the inflation in the prices of commodities commenced.

Now it has been successfully argued from that time till now (see Sherman's speech on Finance, May 31, 1892) that this step was necessary to secure gold to pay the interest on our bonded debt. I was persuaded to believe this at the time; but I now see differently. Our bonded debt was but trifling at that time as compared with what it necessarily became afterwards, and was all created before the war, and what is more, most of it was due to our own people who would have sustained no loss by having their interest paid in greenbacks, or silver—either being as good as gold. Hence it is positively certain that whatever the necessities of the government might have become a year or two later the time had not then (Feb. 25, 1862) arrived to demonetize the greenback. But that it was done at the instance of the goldbugs of Wall street, I think there cannot be the ghost of a reasonable doubt. The greenback then issued was good enough for the farmer, mechanic, oysterman, lawyer or doctor, but not good enough for what was then not inaptly called "the bloated bondholder"—he must have gold, and gold only. The greenback continued to decline till the gold premium touched $1.89—i. e., one dollar in gold was worth $2.89 in greenbacks.

The great Lincoln was opposed to the measure, and only signed it because it was the best, and seemed to be the only measure that the Senate would agree to. The great "Commoner" of Pennsylvania, Thaddeus Stevens, chairman of the House Committee of Ways and Means, introduced the original bill in the house where it passed; but the Senate, influenced by Wall Street, mutilated it and put in the exception clause, which damned the greenback till resumption in 1879 made it once again respectable. Wilson of the Senate could not be influenced by Wall street. In his speech of February 13, 1862 he declared that the effort to modify the House's legal tender clause and to substitute the Senate's exception clause, was a struggle between the brokers and money changers on the one side and the people on the other. The dozen or so of sharp, shrewd, moneyed men won at the expense of the millions of the people.

As to how the money power availed themselves of the exception clause that ruined the value of the greenback may be easily understood.

The exception clause necessarily created a demand for gold. Prior to the act of Feb. 25, 1862 duties on imports could be paid in greenbacks in part or in whole; but subsequently to the passage of that act these duties could be paid in gold only. Hence the demand for gold, and hence the rapid depreciation in the value of the greenback. Now Wall street had the gold and in July 1864 the importer had to pay to Wall street $2.85 in paper for $1.00 in gold. Now it may be asked "how did Wall street get all this gold?" The answer is that Wall street had most of the gold of the country when the war broke out. But more than that: when Wall street took 1.85 per cent of greenbacks for gold, this depreciated paper was paid to the government, face value, for gold interest bearing bonds—interest 6 per cent; and when this golden interest became due (it generally then was paid in advance) this interest was exchanged for greenbacks at 1.85 per cent premium, and again the almost worthless greenback was converted into gold bearing bonds. Thus the bond speculator gave $100 of greenbacks worth in the market $39 in gold, for a gold bond worth $285 in greenbacks! In this manner gold interest bearing bonds were bought by Wall Street and London bankers at from $39 to say $75 all during the war. Thus in 1863-4, while the patriot soldier received but $7.00 per month to die on the battle field, the bond and gold jobber was rolling in wealth on Wall street and living in splendo on Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Sherman, in his great speech on finance in '92 said that "this" (and others like it) "was the most successful financial legislation in the history of mankind". Well, it is true that the loyal patriotism of the country worried along with it and, with this crippled aid, did put down the rebellion. But can any legislation properly be called "successful" when the inevitable effect was to depreciate a currency that had previously been worth its face value in gold.

The most advanced Republicans and best men of that day were opposed to the "exception clause" at that time—notably Wilson of Mass.; Kelly and Stephens of Pa. Years after the war was over—Jany 15, 1876, Judge Kellylsaid in a speech in Philadelphia that he remembered the grand old commoner, Thaddeus Stevens, with his hat in his hand and his cane under his arm, when he returned to the House after his final conference (on the exception clause) and shedding bitter tears over the result. "Yes", said he, "we had to yield; the Senate was stubborn. But we did not yield till we found that the country must be lost or the banks gratified, and we sought to save the country in spite of its wealthier citizens"—Wall street.

It may be well, in this connection at the close of this chapter by way of illustrating the disloyal copperheadism of that day, to mention the following. The bill, afterwards amended in the Senate by the exception clause, was introduced in the House by E. G. Spaulding of Buffalo, N. Y., ch. of subcommittee of Ways and Means. No exception clause in it then. The bill intended to provode for the issue of good money only and passed by a vote of 93 to 59. Stevens, Spaulding, Windom, Wilson, Hale, Fessenden, Colfax, Bingham, Hooper, and a majority of the loyal congressmen of that day voted for it, they being in favor of a full legal tender currency. On the other side were Vallandingham, Voorhees, Pendleton, English and "Sun Set" Cox. After the Senate had amended the bill having for its sole purpose the depreciation of the legal tender, all of the above "copperheads", then so called, voted for the bill. Thus was accomplished what Stevens called "the first victory of the money power over the country", and this with the aid of the disloyal members of Congress.

All of the foregoing will serve to show that the "Shylocks" of Wall street from the beginning of our national trouble in '61 down to the present moment, have been trying to erect collosal fortunes on the misfortunes and necessities of the government and people. The exception clause was the first of this great, but infamously selfish, scheme. But the time has now come when the people will watch the machinations of the Rothchilds, and all bankers and brokers, both foreign and domestic, with a more jealous and scrutinizing eye than ever heretofore.

Now one more word in conclusion to prevent myself from being misunderstood. My point is that on Feb. 25, 1862 the time had not arrived for the exception clause. That this clause might have become an imperative necessity before the conclusion of the war I will neither deny nor affirm. No man can determine this with certainty. The exception clause was necessary at that time anyhow, and was only put in at the dictation of Wall street and such of the money power that happened then to be in Congress.

Something More to be Considered

A good article is paramount to all else. You do not study your back interests in bringing a portrait because it is "dirt cheap." There are two other essential points, namely a first class likeness—and a No. 1 finish. You say these two features added make a higher figure. True, but in the end the best is the very cheapest. Once done right needs no repetition. If you will take the pains to enquire in prices for Crayon Portraits, and examine the Superior quality of them and latest designs in frames, I am confident you will leave your small pictures with me. I can't afford to ask for "no money in advance." First because I am sure my work is correct. Second, I am bound to trust to your integrity from the fact that you trust your valuable pictures in my hands. Now then shall I have your order for a Crayon, Oil Water Color or an India Ink Portrait? Hope so. Come see or write me for prices.
