attempt to give, my heirs or executors any trouble on account of any claim, or pretended claim, of his late father or himself, against my estate, then and in that case I do hereby revoke and annul the legacy intended for him, the said William, son of William, by the foregoing fifth paragraph of this, my will, as also the lands and property intended for him in Hereford county Maryland, and Ohio county, Virginia, by this seventh paragraph of my will.

8th. I give and devise to my son Joseph, first, my Goldstream place, containing about one hundred and fifteen acres of land, be it more or less, together with all the improvements thereon, all the slaves that may be on and belonging to the place at my death, all the live stock all the furniture, all the implements of husbandry, and everything else that may belong to the place and be found thereon at my decease, except my wine and liquors kept there for safety and improvement for and during the term of the natural life of him, my said son Joseph; and from and after his decease, I give and devise all the said described Goldstream place to William, the son of said Joseph; and from and after his decease, I give and devise all the said described Goldstream place to Joseph, the son of my said son Joseph; and from and after his decease, I give and devise all the said described Goldstream place to my son Edward; and from and after his decease I give and devise all the said described Goldstream place to Edward, the son of my son Edward; it being my wish and desire to keep my said Goldstream place as long as possible in the male branches of my family, that it may serve as a burying place for my descendants, and when from necessity or any other cause it shall go out of the family, it is then my wish and request that the burying ground at least shall be retained, together with the privilege and liberty of a free and uninterupted road to and from the same for the use and benefit of my descendants. Second. I give and devise to my said son Joseph, all that range of houses and lots on the west side of South street, from Lovely lane to John Patterson, the Taylors' house, including the back buildings, stables, carriage houses, and every other improvement on and belonging to said property. Third. The house and lot, and vacant ground adjoining, at the corner of Hanover and Conway streets, where the said Joseph now resides. Fourth. One undivided (Wm. Patterson, page 5.) half part or share of the three slated brick stores and lots at the corner of Pratt and Commerce streets, now occupied by him and my son Edward as iron and flour stores for carrying on their joint business; which three last mentioned stores and lots are to be held and kept as a joint property between them for the convenience of carrying on their joint business, but is not intended by me to go to the survivor after the death of one of the said parties. Fifth. I give and devise to my said son Joseph, the house and lot on the west side of South street, purchased of the estate of the late Jeremiah Tillott. All of which described lots, houses, stores and property as above mentioned in the second, third, fourth and fifth clauses of this eighth paragraph of my will, I give and devise to my said son Joseph, for and during the term of his natural life, and from and after his decease, I give and devise all the said lots, house and property as above mentioned in the second, third, fourth and fifth clauses of this eighth paragraph of my will, to all and every the child and children of him,
