Ans. Went into the milk business.

41 int. Who did you buy the milk business from, and what did you pay for it at that time?

Ans. From my father; four hundred and fifty dollars.

42 int. Where did you get the money, and how did you pay for it?

Ans. I gave him three hundred and fifty dollars, money I made at Hawkins' Point grading, and gave him my note for one hundred dollars.

43 int. How long were you in that business, at that time, or what were you able to make out of the business your father then sold you, and what did you next do?

Ans. About a year, or a little over; I made nothing out of it; I went to work for Foss, after I gave up the milk business; that was after I bought the second route; I kept the route I got from my father for three or four months, then I bought another route from Mr. Berends; I had the two routes for about a year; I gave Mr. Berends four hundred and forty dollars, I think; father took three hundred dollars off of the first route, so that left the first route only a hundred and fifty dollars; then I gave him the horse back after I gave up the business; he said he would allow me a hundred and fifty dollars for him, and that squared us up on the second route; he said we will call it square, for I know you lost money on the first route, and then I went to work for Mr. Foss, after I quit the business.

44 int. Did your father ever pay you the difference between ten dollars a week and twelve dollars a week, during the time you worked for him?

Ans. No, sir.

45 int. You say you next went to work for Mr. Foss; who got you the job, if anyone, and what did you do; and what had your father to do with it, if anything, and what did he value your services at, if anything?

Ans. Father got me the job; I bossed on the Back River road, which he was shelling and grading; Mr. Foss said to father, I would like to get a good man to go on the road; father said, I will get you my son Henry to go down there; (Mr. Barton, objects to this conversation;) Mr. Foss came over and I made a bargain with him that night; he valued them at $3.00 a day; he told Mr. Foss that he always got $3.00 a day for me, but Mr. Foss and I bargained for twelve dollars a week.

46 int. What did you next do, and who got you the job, if anyone?

Ans. Went to work in the car stables; father got me the job.

——— What did you do then, and what, if anything, did your father have to do with it?

Ans. I was hostler, and then I went to driving; father got me the job, and had to go my bond for driving the cars.

47 int. State what he said to you about his willingness to go on your bond, and if he did not go on it, state if you know why he did not?

Ans. He said he was willing to go on my bond – that it would be all right – that he would be up, but he did not come up, but he sent Mr. Ferrell up, who went on my bond; he said he would make it all right with Mr. Ferrell; (he said mother won't let me go up, she is growling about it.)

48 int. What did you next do?

Ans. Went to work at my trade, moulding, after I quit driving, which was about a year and six months ago.

49 int. Were you or not able to see your father during his
